Stop Helping Japan, House Urged; Peace Moves Grow

U. S. Violates Treaties by Economic Aid, Rep. Lewis Says.

Fights Plan to Let Nation Vote Wars

Referendum Bill Nears Committee Discharge Through Petition.

The Sino-Japanese War.

Representative David Lewis, of Maryland, demanded that the United States halt its "unintentional but effective" aid to Japan in China as 191 House members signed a petition to force a vote on a constitutional amendment requiring a national referendum before this Nation goes to war.

The Brussels peace conference prepared to suspend its efforts to bring peace in the Orient despite a dramatic appeal for aid by the Chinese delegate.

Lewis Asks Embargoes.

Snow-haired Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, demanded of a tense House yesterday that the United States halt its "unintentional but effective" aid to Japan in its "aggression in China."

The 68-year-old "Little Davey," as he is affectionately known, told the House that "our liberties, our independence have not been won in the past by condoning great wrongs in other nations," in the course of an attack on a Constitutional amendment proposed by Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, which would provide for a national referendum before entry into a war.

Peace Developments.

Developments in the increasing Congressional movement to block United States involvement in war included:

Signing by 191 Representatives of Ludlow's petition to discharge his Constitutional amendment measure from the House Judiciary Committee. A total of 218 signatures is needed.

New insistence by a bloc of mandatory neutrality Senators that the President invoke the neutrality act to keep the United States out of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

A demand by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), North Dakota, that the United States stay out of such conferences as the Brussels Nine-Power meetings

Introduction by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, of a resolution suspending negotiations for new trade agreements "to prevent the United State from becoming involved with nations lying in the shadow of a future war."

Lodge's announcement he will sponsor amendments to the neutrality act providing for mandatory instead of present discretionary provisions.

Declaration by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, in a radio address that the President has nullified the will of Congress by refusing to invoke the neutrality act.

Lewis Asks Embargoes.

Lewis finally termed "fanciful and ill-considered" Ludlow's war referendum plan, and said "instead of saving this country from a possible foreign war," it would be "much more likely to involve us in

MARY K. O'CONNOR.

NANCY GLENN.

Unknowingly Confesses Crime to Mother; Police Quote College Student as Saying She Hit Baby With Fist, Rolled Her Into Mud Puddle.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—A blonde, 19-year-old college girl was arraigned late today on charges of murder in a slaying which police said she unknowingly confessed to her mother in her sleep.

Mayor S. Davis Wilson, sitting as committing magistrate, held the girl, Mary Keenan O'Connor, without bail for a further hearing Monday on charges that she struck 5-year-old Nancy Glenn with her fist Labor Day and left the child's body, face down, in a pool of muddy water on a lonely road near their homes.

Father Informed Police.

Mary's father, Robert B. O'Connor, 40, a high school mathematics instructor, denied he had learned of his daughter's connection with the crime through her sleep talking, but said that he had informed police several days ago that his daughter was involved.

"I am going to stick by her and I am confident she will clear herself," O'Connor said.

The girl, a physical education student at Immaculata College for girls here, was arrested at the home of her grandfather in nearby Merchantsville, N. J. She waived extradition and was brought to Philadelphia late today.

Detectives said the girl made a full statement of the circumstances surrounding the September 8 slaying, and corrected a police transcript with her fountain pen, but declined to sign it until she had talked with her father.

Refused Child a Ride.

In the statement Mary allegedly said that little Nancy, who lived four doors from the O'Connor home, followed her out the lonely road after the older girl had refused to give the child a ride on her bicycle.

"Then Nancy started to pick up berries and I had an argument with her not to eat the berries," police quoted the girl as saying. "Then Nancy wanted me to take her back home on the bike. I said 'No.'

"Then I got angry and struck her on the chin with my fist and she fell down and lay still, and I thought she must have hit her head or something. Then I felt her pulse and, as far as I know, it wasn't beating.

"I then rolled her over on her stomach and her face was down in the hole in the water. I think her face was in the water."

A coroner's jury found, shortly after the Glenn child's body was discovered, that she met death accidentally, but the case was reopened by detectives after Mrs. Joseph C. Glenn, Nancy's mother, made a personal plea to the mayor that she and her husband were not satisfied with the verdict.

Horace Vincent, 21, 913 L street northwest, who admitted the holdup man, though he was a company driver, he explained. When the bandit started to leave, Vincent said he saw his gun and slammed the door on his left arm in an effort to hold him. The bandit pulled loose from the door and was driven away in a black automobile by a second man, who had the motor running.

Held up was Robert L. Tebo, 21, company cashier, of 4103 Thirteenth street northeast, who was calculating the day's receipts on the second floor of the building. It was mostly small bills.

The bandit was described as 27 years old, 5 feet 11 inches tall, sandy-haired, handsome and wearing a brown suede jacket. With Tebo when he was robbed was Harold Young, 20, of 1006 Seventh street northeast.

B. F. Hamilton, office manager, left the plant about 10 minutes before the robbery. He returned afterward to check the company's loss.

The second robbery of a Palace Laundry branch in three days was accomplished last night by a colored man who took $19. Helen Knight, of 1740 Massachusetts avenue, was in charge of a branch at 1624 Seventh street northwest.

Another Palace Laundry holdup attempt, apparently by the colored man who committed the first, was foiled by Ruth Bell, of 543 Randolph street northwest, in charge of a branch at 1832 Fourteenth street northwest. Miss Bell screamed and pursued the bandit to the door.

A lone robber held up High's ice cream store at 3903 Fourteenth street northwest. Virginia Groves, manager, was robbed of $30. The man escaped on foot.

D. C. Traffic Chiefs to Install Governors on Speeders' Cars

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Motorists who repeatedly violate District speed laws in the future will face not only suspension of their permits but compulsory installation of speed governors on their cars, it was learned last night.

In a drastic step to curb speed and prevent accidents, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer said the new rule will apply to all drivers convicted of two or more speed offenses.

As authority for the unusual action Van Duzer cited recent decisions by the Supreme Court and United States Court of Appeals granting the Commissioners or their agents full power to control District traffic by special regulations.

The Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits, headed by Assistant Traffic Director M. O. Eldridge, will pass on all governor installations. Flagrant offenders will be forced to accept either a permit suspension, governor or both.

The governors will be set to prevent speeds in excess of the District maximum of 30 miles an hour, it was reported. The device will be sealed once it is installed on a car and the motorist must be prepared to appear for an inspection on call and without warning.

Adequate penalties will be provided for violators who tamper with the governor after its installation.

Use of governors as accident cures was demonstrated successfully in recent tests by the Civilian Conservation Corps. Approximately 20,000 CCC trucks were equipped with speed reducers. The corps' accident record dropped 50 per cent, according to records furnished Van Duzer's office.

The record of one driver was exhibited by Van Duzer yesterday as an example of certain motorists' apparent failure to heed warnings and profit by arrests.

This driver was issued a permit ten years ago. Since that time he has been convicted 17 times for speeding and has paid fines totaling $297.

FHA Revision To Be Urged By Roosevelt

President Wants Huge Mortgage Firms to Sponsor Housing.

Special Message in Two Weeks Due to Advise Financing Changes.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Copyright 1937, for The Washington Post.

Organization of one or more national mortgage associations within the near future to make several hundred millions of dollars of private capital available for large-scale housing projects in all parts of the country is the goal toward which President Roosevelt is now working as part of his drive against the industrial recession.

This became known yesterday when it was disclosed that Mr. Roosevelt within the next two weeks will propose in a special message to Congress a major revision of the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance act to facilitate financing of large-scale housing operations for both sale and rental purposes.

Would Tap Idle Money.

The President's action will constitute an indirect attack on the problem of high building costs, since he is said to be convinced substantial economies in housing construction can be effected only if an opportunity is provided for wholesale purchases of material and sustained employment for labor, now impossible under the so-called "shoestring" type of operation.

The most important revisions which the President will propose in the existing law will have as their object decreasing the cost of financing housing projects and making national mortgage associations, chartered by the FHA, a flexible financial mechanism for tapping the huge reservoirs of idle money in the country and putting that money to work in construction of low-cost homes.

So determined is the President that private capital must be used to advance housing construction as soon as possible, that he is ready to take the initiative in setting up a national mortgage association with Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds, if private entrepreneurs hang back once the law is amended and such an operation is made feasible.

If such action is taken, it will be

Helen Hayes Asks Class in Manners For the Audience

In fact, she suggested today playgoers are becoming so errant someone ought to establish a chair in a university, to teach people how to behave in a theater.

She gave her 608th performance of Queen Victoria in "Victoria Regina" tonight. The play is a sell-out for the rest of its road tour.

"Now that I'm in a play that's a success, I can talk without anyone saying 'sour grapes,'" the tiny actress said.

"Theater audiences have forgotten how to respond. They don't applaud like they used to. They don't laugh. They talk.

Posse of 15 Gets Lost Seeking Two Hunters

Green Retracts Wage Bill Aid, May Block Vote This Session; Senate Gets Drastic Farm Act

Steep Penalties Provided for Over-Quota Sales of Five Crops.

No Taxes Included To Bear Huge Cost

By Robert C. Albright.

A hastily drafted farm bill providing steep penalties for over-quota sales on five major agricultural commodities yesterday was laid before the Senate as the Administration's No. 1 legislative offering to a Congress that has had nothing to do for a week.

The heavily amended measure, carrying no taxes to pay farm program costs estimated all the way from $500,000,000 to $1,000,000,000, today will displace an anti-lynching bill motion in the Senate and break a Southern filibuster that has continued five days.

Leaders returned from a White House conference with plans to put a farm bill through both chambers in double-quick time, but rumblings of dissatisfaction with compulsory features of the Senate bill darkened prospects of hasty enactment.

House Bill in Committee.

The less drastic House farm bill was still in committee, but Chairman Marvin Jones promised "to report a bill as soon as we have it in proper shape."

"As this is a long-range program, we prefer to take a day or two longer in order to have the provisions more carefully worked out," said Jones.

House leaders were hoping to start farm bill consideration by Friday, and to pass the bill by next Tuesday. Senate Majority Leader Barkley, who will call up the Senate measure today, hopes for Senate action in a week, and is planning to hold his chamber in session every day except Thanksgiving and Sunday.

Garner Marks Birthday.

Vice President Garner, hale and happy on his sixty-ninth birthday, accompanied Senator Barkley, Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn to the White House for a talk with the President on ways and means of "hastening along" special session business.

They came back to the Capitol determined to drive immediately forward on farm legislation in both houses, without the usual week-end Thanksgiving recess. It was learned that the leadership conference will be a weekly Monday feature when the President is in town.

The Senate's farm bill, patched together by strenuous exertions of the Agricultural Committee, and filed yesterday without an accompanying report, broke an impasse that has held up every item of the President's five-point agenda.

Other Bills Motionless.

Other measures were motionless as the wages and hours bill challenged leadership efforts to budge

Each Open Tuberculosis Case Infects 12 Persons, Specialist Says; Others Charge Mice and Vermin Overrun Hospital.

By Gerald G. Gross

Airing of charges that lives of patients at Gallinger Hospital are in daily jeopardy from operating room limitations, inadequate laboratory service, lack of certain medicines and other hardships has been launched in two official quarters, The Post learned yesterday.

One investigation has been instituted by the Bureau of the Budget, which has sent a special hospital expert into the institution to observe conditions.

The other is in charge of Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer and titular head of Gallinger, who is examining complaints by a number of private physicians and surgeons who are members of the visiting staff. Among conditions whose correction they urge are the following:

Overcrowding, especially acute in the medical-surgical building during the winter and aggravated by the enforced comingling of tubercular and noninfectious patients.

Overworking and underequipment of the hospital's small laboratory staff, which continuously has more orders than it can take care of with maximum efficiency and the speed required for best results.

President Heeds Doctors' Warning, Will Delay Trips

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt called off his annual Thanksgiving Day visit to Warm Springs, Ga., yesterday because a toxic condition resulting from a week-long gum infection left him too weak to make the trip.

He heeded the advice of his physician and dentist and deferred his departure for the South until late this week or early next.

Then he will go to Miami and board the yacht Potomac for a short fishing cruise. He probably will spend four or five days at sea between Miami and St. Petersburg.

He will disembark on Florida's west coast and go to Warm Springs for a belated turkey dinner with infantile paralysis patients there.

Attempts to Have Plan Recommitted

Miss Perkins Asks for Ballot, With Changes Made on Floor.

By Sidney Olson.

In a letter which dealt a severe blow to chances of passage this session of the battered wages-hours bill, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor last night withdrew the federation's indorsement of the measure.

He demanded that the bill be recommitted to the House Labor Committee for revision.

Green, writing to Labor Committee Chairman Mary Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, based his attack on the measure (which he indorsed last spring, on two grounds:

That the Federation's recent experiences with the National Labor Relations Board have convinced it administration of labor legislation by "independent governmental agencies is fatally defective."

Wants Shorter Hours.

That "the serious recession of business" which "already has assumed the proportions of a serious depression" makes necessary provisions for a shorter work day and a shorter work week.

The wages-hours bill now provides for a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour and a maximum work week of 40 hours.

If Green's demand is followed, prospects of wages-hours legislation at this session would be gravely jeopardized leaders conceded. House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, said last night: "I am opposed to recommitting this bill."

Green's announcement of the federation's opposition to the bill it previously had held "fairly satisfactory to labor," followed by several hours a letter from Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins to Mrs. Norton.

Secretary Perkins said "every effort should be made" to bring the bill to a vote, although she recommended amending the measure in some technical respects.

Changes on Floor Suggested.

These amendments, she said, could be made from the floor, and urged that "no procedural delays" be allowed to "jeopardize enactment of the bill." She added:

"I believe that economic conditions today make the need of this legislation even more impelling."

Meanwhile, 14 more House members signed the petition on the Speaker's rostrum which would pry loose the bill from the House Rules Committee, bringing the total to 153, or 65 names short of the needed 218. The bill can be brought up on December 13 if the signatures are obtained.

Letter May Kill Petition.

Green's action yesterday may deter a number of Representatives from signing the petition, it was believed. So keen has been the interest of members in the federation position that yesterday Representative Arthur Healey (Democrat), Massachusetts, the head of a "steering committee" of 25 members which has been militantly backing the bill, conferred with Green, accompanied by seven members of his group.

In a carefully qualified statement later, Healey said:

"I feel Mr. Green is unquestionably for the principle of wages-hours legislation." He preferred not to indicate whether his group may relax the force of its drive behind the bill, but said the members have

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 22.—Prof. Janet R. Aiken of Columbia University wrote an open letter to President Roosevelt today, telling him that his English was pretty bad and how about a New Deal for grammar?

She demanded to know where the President learned his rhetoric—"at Groton or Harvard or where"—and, in general, got so worked up about it that she forgot to put a verb in one of her own sentences.

"In Cheyenne, September 24," she wrote, "you say 'engineers are human just like I am.' Not 'as,' Mr. President, but 'Like.' At Boise, September 27, you say something is 'just like the plain folks like all of us are.' Did you learn how to use 'like' that way at Groton or Harvard or where;

". . . Speaking of simple future time, you say sometimes 'I will' and sometimes 'I shall.' In the Boise speech you use 'first' and 'secondly.' Wasn't it Shakespeare who called

"And then repetition. (Prof. Aiken will stay in after school and write the words "every sentence must have a verb" on the blackboard 20 times—Ed.) At Cheyenne you say, 'In the case of the library they apparently did not have a library.' That reminds me about a funny story about a man and his dog. I'll tell the funny story about the man and his dog to you sometime, if you care to hear the funny story about the man and his dog. (She doesn't tell the funny story about the man and his dog in the letter; address her at Columbia University if interested—Ed.)

Prof. Aiken also complained that the President was mixed up when he referred to Antaeus, mythical character who redoubled his strength when his feet touched the ground, as a "mythologist." She says it ought to have been "mythical character."

Guess that's about all unless you want to go into what Prof. Aiken calls "and then repitition."

Labor Board Wins Review of GreyhoundSuit

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Relations Board won a Supreme Court review yesterday in its effort to enforce an order directing the Pacific Greyhound Lines, Inc., to withdraw recognition from a labor organibation that it was alleged to have formed and dominated.

A review recently was granted in similar litigation involving the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, Inc. The Labor Board lost both cases in lower courts.

In the Pacific Greyhound dispute, the board appealed from a decision by the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals that the Wagner labor relations act did not authorize such action.

Black Attack Denied.

Other parts of the board's order—that the bus company cease from discouraging membership in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and refrain from "dominating or interfering with" any organization of its employes—were upheld by the circuit court and were not involved in the appeal.

No written opinions were delivered at yesterday's brief session before the court adjourned until December 6.

The justices denied a motion of Robert Gray Taylor of Media, Pa., for permission to file a brief questioning the right of Justice Hugo L. Black to sit on the bench.

It was the second time Taylor had asked the tribunal to consider his petition. The first motion was denied last week.

D. C. Picket Case Up.

The New Negro Alliance won a review in its effort to picket stores of the Sanitary Grocery Co. in the District. The court consented to pass upon a judgment of the Court of Appeals of the District, which sustained an injunction issued by Federal District Court.

The alliance sought to persuade the grocery firm to employ colored clerks in colored sections of the city. It contended the company refused and peaceful picketing followed. The company argued that it employs colored workers, but that none of them is connected with the alliance and that therefore "there is no labor dispute."

The Government lost in an effort to avoid repayment of $1,521,696 to the Northern Pacific Railway Co. in a transaction involving former Federal control of railroads. The court refused to pass upon a judgment of the United States Court of Claims, which ruled that a partial payment to the railroad in 1921 could not be reduced by the Government in absence of fraud.

The court also denied a request by the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals for a ruling on whether a rent contract calling for payment in gold might be discharged by the face value of present-day devalued currency. This means the circuit court must decide the question, after which its ruling can be appealed to the Supreme Court.

Politics and People

Republicans Still Refuse to Take a Lesson From Their Ill-Advised 1936 Attack on Tariff Policy.

By Franklyn Waltman

FEW people, perhaps, will find any news in the statement that the Republicans never seem to learn. Yet their adherence to shibboleths and false issues is truly amazing. Because many years ago the Republicans managed to remain in power for a long period by thumping the full dinner pail, they apparently feel that they can make a winning issue of the present Democratic tariff policies.

WALTMAN.

After the country's reaction in last year's Presidential campaign to Gov. Landon's babassu nuts and cheddar cheese speech, one would imagine that Capitol Republicans would shoot on sight anyone who suggested raising again the question of the New Deal's reciprocal tariff program. Instead, however, they rush in where the economists fear to tread—and they rush into a buzzsaw in the person of Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Since memories are short, it might be well to recall what happened in the 1936 campaign regarding the Hull reciprocal tariff program. Gov. Landon at heart was favorably inclined toward the program. It was one of the New Deal measures of which he could approve, because it fitted into his philosophy of keeping America a competitive society for free enterprise. But the old-line, standpat Republicans overwhelmed him.

Former Senator George H. Moses went among Republican groups contending the reciprocal trade agreement with Canada, if properly exploited, would be the undoing of President Roosevelt. Gov. Landon's efforts to strike a liberal tone gave George Moses a big pain. He contended repeatedly that Gov. Landon only need swing into the Canadian pact with both fists to get the vote of every cowman in an area 100 miles south from the Canadian border and from coast to coast.

The pressure on Gov. Landon became so great that he weakened and welcomed into his camp the disgruntled George N. Peck, who tried for months to sabotage the reciprocal trade program from the inside. It was thought he might be able to do in a frontal attack what was an ignominious failure when he was in the Administration.

The remainder of the story is fairly well known. Gov. Landon, coached by Mr. Peek, made his attack on the trade program. Immediately, it was shown that the statistics he quoted to prove that the tariff cut on cheddar cheese was ruining the country were incomplete and gave only half the picture. His contention about babassu nuts served chiefly to provide an amusing caption for editorials.

Some of Gov. Landon's strongest well-wishers shuddered, especially since his speech indicated a confusion of thought on his part regarding competitive free enterprise. The cowmen voted for President Roosevelt—or at least most of them did, as the election returns along the Canadian border indicated.

* * *

But the Republicans seemingly never learn. They are quietly organizing a new campaign on Capitol Hill against the reciprocal trade program. They plan to lay down their attack on the pending negotiations with Czechoslovakia, Great Britain and Canada. Although the country's foreign trade has doubled from the days of the Hawley-Smoot act in 1932, they profess to see the country headed for ruin because a few high tariffs have been reduced.

The New England Republicans—really inspired by fears of the owners of shoe and textile factories—contend that the working man is being hurt, that they suspect foreign entanglements and other bogeys as a result of pending trade agreements. The corn belt Republicans reverse the argument. They contend the Administration has sold out the farmer for the benefit of Eastern manufacturers. With their allies in the National Grange they scream that the American market is being taken away from the American farmer. They pass over in silence the fact that farm income this year will be about twice what it was in 1932 under the protective Hawley-Smoot act.

The falsity of this argument about the reciprocal trade agreements hurting the American farmer is obvious to anyone who takes the time to skim through the agreements already concluded. Reductions in the American tariff on farm products are few and have been made with the greatest caution. Except on commodities of which this country does not produce a sufficiency, they affect only a fraction of the domestic consumption. On the other hand substantial tariff concessions on farm products have been made by other nations in these agreements.

It is said that in the year ended last June 30 agricultural imports had a value $699,000,000 greater than in the corresponding 1933-34 period. This is true. But it does not follow that this has resulted from the trade agreements.* Indeed, of this increase $252,000,000 is accounted for by increased imports of totally non-competitive commodities such as coffee, tea, cocoa beans, rubber, silk, bananas and spices.

A further $141,000,000 comprised items affected by the droughts of 1934 and 1936. Their importation does not depress prices, since they come in only when prices here are high. Another $45,000,000 of the increase was in sugar—subject to quotas which protect local producers. A large part of the remainder of the increase results from increased purchasing power and higher prices in this country.

When the Republicans start talking about the American farmer being ruined, why do they not squarely face the issue of what is being done to him by crop control schemes and by industrial monopoly, in which tariffs play an important part? Why do they not admit that though farm imports in the last fiscal year had a value of $1,539,000,000, such imports had a value in excess of $2,000,000,000 annually in the years from 1925 to 1929 (years without serious droughts) when Republican high protection was the order of the day?

Protection of Fish By TVA Is Urged

By the Associated Press.

Government fish experts disclosed yesterday they had asked the Tennessee Valley Authority to protect Tennessee River fish from extinction as the result of the building of hugh power and storage dams.

Representatives of the Bureau of Biological Survey and the Bureau of Fisheries advised TVA the dams would destroy fresh water mussels whose shells are chief materials for the manufacture of buttons in the United States.

Ten-Point Plan Offered to U. S. By Vandenberg

By the Associated Press.

Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan offered the Roosevelt Administration last night an "opposition" program to "give honest business a chance to create stable prosperity."

The Republican Senator, who has been mentioned as a 1940 Presidential prospect, presented his program in a Nation-wide radio address. He said he was ready to "go forward with any 'party'—old, new or fused—which promises liberalism with sanity, social-mindedness without socialism" and a restoration of "equitable economic fundamentals."

He outlined his program as follows:

1. An end to governmental "hymns of hate" and bitter attacks on business which have created a "jittery state of mind" among businessmen.
2. Progress as rapidly as possible toward a balanced budget.
3. Amendment, or repeal, of the surplus and capital gains taxes, and substitutions of "incentive taxation" for "punitive taxation."
4. Amendment of the social security act to eliminate the "needless drain upon the resources of commerce and labor."
5. Revision of the Wagner labor law to make for greater certainty in "long-range industrial planning."
6. Abandonment of the wage-hour bill and substitution of legislation to protect States from the importation of goods produced by sub-standard labor.
7. Repeal of many of the President's emergency powers in order to free business from "executive despotism which is at war with every tenet of the American system."
8. Reasonable and practical farm relief, without bureaucratic controls, processing taxes, or price pegging, but with benefits for soil conservation practices, financing of exportable surpluses, and return of the domestic market to the producer.
9. Foreign policies that will keep America out of war through pursuing "an insulating neutrality" rather than sanctions.
10. "Frank abandonment of all anticonstitutional activities and intrigues which shatter democratic faith."

Pittman Demands Action to Extend High Silver Price

By the Associated Press.

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, demanded in the Senate yesterday that the Administration quickly announce its future silver-purchase plans to alleviate uneasiness in the West.

Noting that the President's proclamation fixing the price for domestic silver at 77.57 cents would expire at the end of next month, Pittman said there had been "not a word from the Treasury" as to its policy after that. He said every mine would close unless the price was maintained.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, expressed agreement with Pittman, but said he wanted to make a "partial reply" to the "implied criticism of the President and the Treasury."

In a conciliatory tone, King said he had no reason to doubt the Administration would continue its silver policies, which he forecast would raise the world price of the metal to 77 cents and higher.

Veteran Whose Head Ticks to Be Examined

Shawnee, Okla., Nov. 22 (AP). Charles Hester, who has a ticking in his head which persons three feet away can hear, may soon know what it is. Mrs. Jewel Adams, Red Cross executive, said today the Veterans Bureau had arranged for Hester to enter a Chicago hospital. Hester's head has ticked like a clock since a shell exploded at his feet in the World War.

Court Prevents Utility 'Fishing' In TVA Records

3-Judge Federal Tribunal Denies Subpena Held 'Far Too Sweeping.'

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 22.—A three-judge Federal court today rejected a motion for issuance of what was termed a "fishing expedition" subpena for Tennessee Valley Authority records and correspondence.

Correspondence requested in the subpena included letters between the Federal "yardstick" electrical power agency and United States Supreme Court Justice Hugo L. Black, in 1933, when he was United States Senator from Alabama.

Motion for the subpena was refused by the court in hearing a suit filed by 18 Southeastern electrical power companies which charge TVA is unconstitutional in its entirety.

"The applictaion for subpena must fail because of its sweeping and burdensome character," the court—Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Florence E. Allen, presiding—ruled.

One Request Granted.

"Mo of the requests are far too sweeping to be regarded as reasonable. The application for subpena . . . do not require the production of documents of a limited character, but in a dragnet prayer demands written evidence of negotiations, discussions, reports to the VA from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, Rural Electrification Administration and National Power Policy Committee, and correspondence between these agencies and the TVA and between TVA and numerous municipalities and co-operatives . . . these requests constitute a fishin' expedition."

The court, however, granted a subpena for five TVA documents requested by utilities attorneys. The five concerned TVA opposition to the Federal Power Commission's granting further licenses for private power companies to construct hydro-electric dams in the Tennessee Valley, and to TVA's assigning to the City of Knoxville, Tenn., a contract for furnishing electrical power to the Volunteer Portland Cement Co., near Knoxville.

Wilson Dam Case Cited.

The court clarified a ruling permitting utility attorneys to offer, as evidence, statements of TVA directors before Congressional committees, and held it would accept only complete reports in evidence and not "isolated or garbled portions of documents."

Utility attorneys used the major portion of today's session in introducing reports of Congressional committee hearings on the TVA and reports of the authority.

In announcing the court opinion rejecting the motion for the mass of TVA documents, Judge Allen quoted from the United States Supreme Court opinion in the Ashwander case, in which the high tribunal held the Government sale of Wilson Dam power to be legal.

Relief Is Scandal, Racket, Says Colby

Philadelphia, Nov. 22 (AP).—Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State in the Woodrow Wilson Cabinet, said in an address prepared for delivery tonight "a large percentage of our expenditures for relief can be put down as a 'racket.'"

"The expenditure for overhead," Colby said, "which means for hangers-on and undeserving people with political claims upon the Administration; the frank distribution of relief funds for what virtually amounts to vote-buying; the refusal of the Administration to permit a practical census of the unemployed, and those entitled to relief, lest the pretext for wasteful and self-serving expenditure be lost . . . constitute a scandal of unprecedented proportions."

Ball of Nations Posters Topic of Prize Contest

Prizes for the best three posters for the Ball of the Nations, sponsored by the advisory committee of the Hall of Nations, a graduate unit of American University, yesterday were offered students of the Corcoran School of Art. The ball is scheduled for January 7 at the Mayflower Hotel.

Col. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of State, is chairgan of the committee and Dr. Ellery C. Stowell, executive secretary. Posters must be submitted by Monday, December 5, to Miss Agnes Mayo, secretary of the Corcoran School.

Hunter Is Sentenced In Death of Friend

West Chester, Pa., Nov. 22 (AP).—Michael Drabinsky, 35, of Pottstown, was sentenced to Chester County Prison today for two years and assessed $500 damages for killing his "best friend," Russell Geist, 33, in a hunting accident last Labor Day. Drabinsky pleaded guilty and said he shot Geist in mistake for game.

Professor Warns U. S. Of Results of Inflation

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 22 (AP).—Prof. Edwin W. Kemmerer, of Princeton University, internationally known financial expert, asserted tonight the country has been "experiencing an almost continuous inflation" since 1933, and warned of "the cold, gray dawn of the morning after."

High School Girl, 15, Reveals Secret Wedding to Suicide, 17

Falsely Told Cadet-Husband That She Was to Be a Mother, Wife Testifies at Inquest Into His Death Soon Afterward.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Loretta Harynek, only 15 and still in high school, told a coroner's jury today she was the secret bride of Warren Sinclair Stanley, 17-year-old military academy cadet who killed himself.

They were married November 3, 1936, by a "man with a Bible" at some place she could not recall, she testified, but did not elaborate on a signed statement to police that she had falsely informed the youth she was to become a mother "to make him feel happy."

Stanley, student at the Missouri Military Academy in Mexico, Mo., killed himself with a pistol Sunday after his car crashed in suburban Berwyn at the finish of a 12-mile pursuit by highway patrolmen. In his pocket was a note pledging his undying love and indicating his concern over the girl's condition.

$15,000 Awarded To Woman Hurt In Taxi Accident

Damages of $15,000 were awarded Irma L. Dabbs, 300-pound bed-ridden Gallinger Hospital patient, against the Independent Taxi Owners Association and one of its drivers as a result of an automobile crash several years ago in nearby Maryland.

Miss Dabbs has been confined to hospitals since the cab in which she was riding struck another car while allegedly speeding. She was thrown from the car.

In her testimony Miss Dabbs said that because of her weight, physicians and surgeons had been unable to operate upon her to alleviate injuries. She was brought into court on a stretcher and was attended by a nurse throughout the trial, which was held by Justice Oscar R. Luhring. Attorneys for the woman were Dorsey Offutt and William Lowe.

$6,000 Given Pair Who Helped Take Three Kidnapers

Ivan Whiteford, Syracuse, N. Y., janitor, and Casper Mirra, 22, parking lot attendant, will receive $6,000, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings said yesterday, for helping recapture three kidnapers who escaped last week at Jamesville, N. Y.

Whiteford will get $4,000 for his tip, which led to arrest of John Oley and Harold Crowley. Mirra is to receive $2,000 for information which led to the capture of Percy Geary.

Whiteford and Mirra failed to observe a requirement of the reward offer that information about the fugitives should be furnished to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Both informants notified Syracuse police, but Cummings overlooked that.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

The interesting interview printed in the Federal Diary today was written by a contributor, Barry Sullivan.

Storm center of a newspaper attack while serving on boards investigating recent plane crashes, Judge Miller C. Foster, administrative assistant to Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson, feels that criticism of Government officials is an excellent thing for the country.

MILLER C. FOSTER.

An able and courteous American legionnaire, he says this opinion applies even when the criticism is directed at himself, as was the case during the crash investigations.

"Every citizen has a right to criticize the Government," he remarked, adding that "I believe in the right of Americans to say what they think about the Government and its officials; whether I agree with the criticism is beside the point."

Judge Foster declared his own work in the Department of Commerce is extremely interesting, although entirely different from his legal calling. Association with the Government, as an employe, he continued, has given him an "appreciably better understanding of the Government and its problems."

In explanation he said that an attorney going into court has a theory which he wants to prove to the jury and judge, while in investigative work no theory can be developed until after all the facts have been assembled and evaluated.

"What we attempt to doin these investigations," he explained, "is not to substantiate a theory, but to reach a just conclusion."

Of aviation, in general, as he has come in contact with it through the Bureau of Air Commerce, Judge Foster said "the art itself progresses so rapidly that it is . . . difficult to keep up with it."

Concerned principally with problems of transportation and its safety, Judge Foster also handles matters dealing with the Bureau of Lighthouses, the Bureau of Marine Inspection and Navigation, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Since coming to Washington with his wife and two children, Judge Foster has become interested in the school system here.

His son and daughter, Miller, jr., and Lucy, students at Woodrow Wilson High School, and their friends, apparently like to go to school, Judge Miller declared, adding that he thought the fact was about the best recommendation a school system could have.

He added that he had had experience in school matters both as a parent and as a teacher, and explained that after his graduation from Woffard College, Spartanburg, S. C., he taught school for four years before going to the University of South Carolina for his legal training.

"Years ago," Judge Foster said, "children hated to go to school, but that isn't true of the Washington schools. During my teaching experience I served as superintendent of a school system, and if I were placed in that position today I would adopt many of the methods used in the schools here.

"I had heard much criticism of the Washington schools before we came here to live," Judge Foster added, "but I find they do much to bring out the best there is in the individual student."

* * * *

After completing his legal education, Judge Foster returned to his home in Spartanburg, S. C., to practice law and later served four years as judge of the county court.

When the World War broke out he volunteered for service, and after training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., went overseas as a first lieutenant of the Fifty-third Infantry.

After eight months' active duty he returned to the United States to become one of the charter members of the American Legion, and has been deeply interested in its work ever since.

Judge Foster has been legion departmental commander of South Carolina and was elected national vice commander of the organization at the 1928 convention held in San Antonio, Tex.

The Agriculture Chorus will be heard again this evening in a presentation of Maunder's lovely "Song of Thanksgiving." They will appear in the Agriculture auditorium at 8:30 p. m. The Rev. Oliver J. Hart, rector, St. John's Episcopal Church, will speak on behalf of the club. The soloists will include Prudence Jackson, May Dellt Sandstrom, Mrs. E. L. Warren, Hilda Nelson and Mrs. Mildred Moore, sopranos; Ralph Marston and Walter Redit, tenors, and John M. Wilson, Roy B. Gray, Clifton S. Hall and Clarke A. Paulsen, bassos. Robert Frederick Freund will direct and Victor Neal will be at the piano . . . The D. C. Federation of Federal Employes Unions has gone on record opposing the sale of tokens for 6 for 50 cents, instead of 3 for 25 cents. They called for a Congressional investigation "of the service rendered by the Capital Transit Co. and of the recent increase of fares."

Meetings announced for this week by the National Federation of Federal Employes are as follows: Tonight—8 o'clock, Adjutant General's Office Local 372, 710 Fourteenth street. Wednesday—8 o'clock, Navy Yard Local 250, Southeast Library. Friday—5 p. m., Executive Council, Local 2, 710 Fourteenth street, and 8 p. m., Educational Forum, D. C. Federation, Federal Employes Unions, 710 Fourteenth street . . . The Businesswomen's Music Club calls attention to the fact that it meets each Tuesday evening at 7:15 in the Y. W. C. A. Miss Mae R. Murray, past president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, is president of the group. Miss Murray is also second vice president of Lodge 365, Federal Trade Commission . . . A. F. G. E. is sponsoring special trains over the B. & O. to Philadelphia on Saturday for the Army-Navy game. Trains go direct to the stadium.

Unemployment Rises By 80,000 in October

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Perkins reported yesterday employment last month decreased 80,000 as compared with September.

The decrease was the first in October since 1933 and was the second successive monthly decline following ten straight months of increases. The number employed in October, despite the drop from September, was 600,000 greater than in October, 1936.

U. S. Jobless Aide Goes To Set Up Hawaii Office

John H. Zabel, assistant director of the U. S. Constable's Places Ban On Military Playthings

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Fond parents who wish to give their children tin soldiers, machine guns, and swords this Christmas will have to buy them some other place than Arnold Constable & Co.

The department store announced yesterday it would neither sell nor display "toys and games suggestive of war."

The action, said the announcement, was inspired by recent statements of Mrs. Roosevelt.

American Mining Body To Meet in D. C. Dec. 1

The fortieth annual meeting of the American Mining Congress will be at the Mayflower Hotel December 1-3, it was announced yesterday. The program will include discussions of mineral taxation, coal mine mechanization problems, the relation of mining to Federal Government and the activities and policies of the organization.

Guards Search Visitors at Trial Of Harlan Boss

Hearing of Perjury Charge Against Creech Opens; Deputies Fill Court.

With the drama and tension of a courtroom movie thriller, the perjury trial of Ted Creech, hulking mine superintendent from Kentucky's "bloody Harlan" County, opened in District Court yesterday while an augmented staff of deputy United States marshals guarded doors and searched all comers for firearms and other concealed weapons.

Accused of offering false testimony before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee last April, Creech sat motionless during yesterday's sessions as an impressive array of legal talent wrangled over selection of a jury.

Recalling descriptions of gun-toting labor enemies when Harlan County coal troubles were aired before the Senate committee, District Court authorities decided to take no chances and took steps to prevent possible violence.

Six deputy marshals stood guard within the courtroom and others were posted at strategic points on the outside.

As Assistant United States Attorney David Pine summoned three witnesses to establish existence of the special Senate committee on the date Creech was charged, the accused mine worker grinned broadly when repeated incoming spectators were halted and "frisked."

The perjury charge grew out of a conversation Creech allegedly held with Richard C. Tackett, Kentucky miner, during the Senate investigation. Tackett said he was threatened by Creech for his testimony before the committee about certain dynamiting activities of Harlan deputy sheriffs.

Although Tackett's statement was substantiated by Deputy United States Marshal Robert L. Bonhan, Creech reportedly told the committee he was "just kidding."

Creech, under cross-examination by Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr., reputedly made false statements and the perjury charge followed.

Pine began his prosecution by establishing existence of the committee through James Clark, former clerk of the Senate Education and Labor Committee; Kenneth E. Haigler, assistant clerk of the same committee, and Robert Wohlforth, secretary to the Civil Liberties Committee.

With a jury of eight men and four women finally chosen, Wohlforth identified both Creech and Tackett as having testified during the Senate investigation.

Knew of Intimidation.

Tackett, during testimony before the committee last spring, admitted he knew about efforts of Harlan County coal operators to intimidate organizers of the United Mine Workers by shootings and dynamitings.

Creech, son of a Harlan mine owner, was arrested April 20 as he left the Senate Office Building following a committee session. The perjury warrant was sworn to by Tackett.

To conduct his defense, Creech has retained Attorneys William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, of Washington, and Walter B. Smith and Cleon K. Calvert, of Kentucky.

The trial will continue at 10:30 a. m. today.

Dr. Nevils Will Speak At Caesar Bimillenium

The Very Rev. Coleman Nevils, S. J., of New York, will address a meeting at the Italian Embassy tonight at 9 o'clock on the Bimillenium of Augustus Caesar.

The Italian Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich are to be the hosts at the meeting which was arranged under the joint auspices of the Archeological Society of Washington and the Italy-America Society.

Dr. Nevils, who was formerly president of Georgetown University and now is pastor of St. Ignatius Church in New York, will discuss the significance of the anniversary of the Roman Emperor born 2,000 years ago.

Chief Witness

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Chamber Music Society presents the Pro Musica Quartet (Frederick Dvonch, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand) in Phillips Memorial Gallery Monday afternoon. Program: Quartet in D major, Op. 20, No. 4 (Haydn), Quartet in F major, Op. 96 (Dvorak).

Beginning again the aptly named candlelight concerts at the hour of dusk in the dimly lit Phillips Memorial Gallery, the Washington Chamber Music Society presented yesterday afternoon the Pro Musica Quartet with the new personnel of Frederick Dvonch, Jeno Sevely, Ralph Hersh and William Brennand, all members of the National Symphony Orchestra of which Mr. Dvonch is concertmaster and Mr. Hersh first viola. The foursome is not yet thoroughly integrated and at its first appearance one makes due allowance for its remediable shortcomings in tonal blending and consentience in interpretation.

The one-hour program consisted of one of Haydn's quieter quartets, the D major from Opus 20, and Dvorak's F major quartet. The juxtaposition of the two works was congruous, for both composers were wont to flavor their music with folk elements, a characteristic which no listener could miss in this instance. The minuet of the Haydn quartet is frankly labeled in the gypsy style, and the predominance of autochthonous material in the Dvorak work is salient.

Haydn's usual geniality is missing from this early quartet, which is animated enough, but somewhat wistful in mood. There are shadows in the thoughtful adagio and the vivacity of the allegro and presto seems a little forced.

Dvorak's F major quartet is rightly called American in the sense that it was composed in this country, but to give it that name on the ground that its themes are of Negro origin is to follow legend and disregard facts. The music is strongly Bohemian in feeling and in melodic idiom and the dolorous slow movement is obviously a song of homesickness.

Schumann-Heink Estate Is $33,932

An inventory of the singer's possessions, on file today in probate court, showed these chiefly consisted of jewels presented to her on her many tours.

She bequeathed her medals and diplomas to the Smithsonian Institution at Washington and her music library to an institution to be selected by her attorney. Residue of the estate was divided among four children.

Jury to Learn Of Secret Raid AgainstGaming

Trial of 'Nick the Greek' and 4 Others Gets Under Way.

Details of how a secret squad of police smashed its way into an alleged gaming establishment in the 900 block of Ninth street northwest last February will be revealed to a jury in District Court today as the trial of Nicholas (Nick the Greek) Floratos and four others enters its second day.

The raid was one in a series by police in a campaign to eradicate gaming from the District. All police and deputy marshals engaged in the drive were called to the Camp Simms rifle range and were given sealed order, which were not to be opened until the zero hour. In all 65 raids were engineered and some 250 persons were arrested.

The case barely got under way yesterday with defense attorneys, Harry T. Whelan, Myron Ehrlich and Achilles Catsonis, matching wits with Assistant United States Attorney Samuel F. Beach in the selection of a jury. The jury is composed of 11 men and 1 woman.

Besides Floratos, those on trial are Vicent A. Marino, Bernard Newyahr, John A. Clements and Bennie B. Traub. All are charged with violations of the gaming statutes.

Policeman Alton S. Bradford, a rookie still serving his probationary period, was the only witness yesterday. He said he had gone to the Ninth street place and eventually made seven bets on horse races.

Bradford said that on the day of the raid he had placed a bet, when he and others in the place were sharply notified the place was being closed for the day. All immediately left, he said. When the raiders got there they found the premises vacant, except for some furniture. The case is expected to last a week.

Cold to Continue For Several Days

Clear, cold weather will continue today, the Weather Bureau forecast. The mercury may drop to as low as 26 this morning, but is scheduled to rise to the low 30's in the afternoon.

Describing the weather as "abnormally cold" for this time of year, the bureau forecast continuing low temperatures for two or three days. Although snow flurries are reported for Maryland and Virginia hills, no snow is in sight for Washington.

Yesterday's low temperature was 27 at 6 a. m., and the highest point was reached at 4 p. m., when the thermometer stood at 37. The temperature is 10 degrees below normal, officials said, but no records have been broken.

Dill's Kin Loses Alienation Appeal

Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Mrs. Grace Dill, of Fredericktown, Ohio, lost in the Fifth District State Court of Appeals today her appeal from a verdict granting her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Margie Heaton Dill, a $5,000 judgment for alleged alienation of affection.

The court upheld the Common Pleas Court in which a jury awarded the judgment against Mrs. Grace Dill and her brother-in-law, former United States Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington.

Margie Heaton Dill, a Mount Vernon stenographer who married young Dill in 1934 a day after they were graduated from high school, charged that her mother-in-law and the former Senator conspired to have an illegal operation performed on her to break up the marriage.

Court Delays Fidelity Sale For Appraisal

Distribution to Depositors to Await Study of Realty Values.

An additional payment to depositors and creditors of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, anticipated as a Christmas present, was seen as indefinitely postponed yesterday.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Court, ordered appointment of three expert appraisers to go over every one of almost 800 pieces of real estate now held as assets and evaluate them before approval of a plan by which the First Federal Savings & Loan Association is to take over the assets of the closed company.

In declaring he felt appraisers should be appointed, Justice O'Donoghue said he had no doubt figures submitted by James H. Nolan, receiver of the Fidelity, were accurate. However, he said, he believed that with so many persons involved and so much money at stake each piece of property should be evaluated by disinterested persons.

Appointment of the three appraisers will be made in District Court today.

The Fidelity had approximately 18,000 depositors and stock liabilities of $4,400,000. The merger proposal was submitted to the District Court two weeks ago. It proposed to pay creditors 85 per cent of their claims and would enable the succeeding corporation to take over all assets at that figure. The association, closed in July, 1936, may eventually pay all creditors their claims.

NLRB on Fence In Election Order

By the Associated Press.

The Labor Relations Board ordered an election today among 10,000 West Allis, Wis., employes of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Co. to determine their agents for collective bargaining.

The C. I. O. had asked the board to group all crafts in the plant together, while the American Federation of Labor had asked that employes be divided into 11 craft units for balloting.

The board determined that draftsmen, maintenance, electricians and boilerroom help should vote by craft, but grouped all other employes into a single classification.

Trainmen Win Raises.

Los Angeles, Nov. 22 (AP).—Agreement on a 15 per cent increase of pay aggregating $500,000 a year to trainmen was reached today by Pacific Electric Railway officials and employes, ending a strike threat on the world's largest interurban electric system.

Fine AMERICAN BLENDS like NATIONAL'S EAGLE were winning the Nation's Heart!

AND what whiskies they were! Of course, unless you're getting gray, you can't imagine what glorious whiskies those pre-war American blends were. There haven't been any for a generation! But get your father talking whiskies as he knew them in the old, hansom-cab days . . . and oh! Oh! . . .

How he'll open your eyes when he tells you that he never went into a restaurant, hotel, club or bar from one ocean to the other that didn't take pride in the magnificent American blends they served. And that whether you went to gay, sophisticated Rector's or to Mike's water-front bar, it was amazing how often you'd hear men call for whiskies that were fine blends!

Not "just another whiskey"!

OF COURSE, that was only natural. For many of those pre-war blends were masterpieces of the blenders' art. And so when National Distillers says, "Here's the 1937 edition of the pre-war type of American blends!"... you know that National's EAGLE is not "just another whiskey" . . . but a type of whiskey that hasn't been possible for a generation!

You couldn't have had National's EAGLE one minute sooner. It took aged American whiskies to make those fine American blends! And it took till the summer of 1937 for some of the whiskies in this great blend to reach maturity.

The Pre-War American Taste!

But today the waiting's over. TODAY we offer you in National's EAGLE one of the first fine "pre-war" type of American blends possible in a generation.

A fine American blend . . . made the old American way . . . with matured American whiskey, and velvet grain neutral spirits, every drop distilled in the U. S. A. . . . by the very men who made the great pre-war American blends so famous!

• • •

Order National's EAGLE at the bar, club or restaurant, or take a bottle home from your dealer's . . . and get to know the difference American whiskies make in a blend!

House Inaction May Delay D. C. Bills to January

Palmisano 'Unprepared;' King to Call Parley on Juvenile Courts.

Chairman King of the Senate District Committee, yesterday said he will call an early meeting of conferees on the District juvenile court bill as Chairman Palmisano of the House District Committee passed up an opportunity to call up four bills.

Senator King said that if the House managers are agreeable he will call a conference in time to obtain approval of the report during the special session. The juvenile court bill was left in conference when Congress adjourned last August.

Palmisano was not on the floor yesterday when House leaders offered to recognize him for the purpose of calling up four bills. Majority Leader Rayburn announced that the District Committee chairman said he was unprepared.

Previously Palmisano had canceled the weekly meeting of the House District Committee after Rayburn had told him that only emergency legislation would be considered at the special session.

As a consequence of yesterdays non-action, it appears likely that no District measures will be acted upon by the House before January.

The four local bills on the House calendar are:

The Senate measure providing for semiannual inspections of motor vehicles, the Quinn barber regulation bill and the two measures to give firemen a five-day week and a more liberal retirement act. The measures have been on the calendar since last August.

The principal point at issue between the Senate and House on the juvenile court bill is that the House would eliminate the corporation counsel's office entirely from the court, whereas the Senate would give it authority to rule on whether or not proceeding should be instituted.

Penal Farm Head Says More Guards Won't Stop Breaks

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 22 (AP).—The escape of seven prisoners in the last two weeks will not result in the assignment of additional guards at the State penal farm, Supt. Elmer B. Carl said today.

Three of the prisoners escaped Saturday night from the "minimum security" institution at Roxbury.

Carl said additional guards would be a "futile" precaution.

"Fifty more guards wouldn't make any difference," he said. "A prisoner could get away every time a guard turned his back—if he wanted to."

Fugitive Caught After Surviving 80-Foot Plunge

Crawls From Occoquan Shallows; First to Live Through Leap.

Exam Cox, 24-year-old stockily built colored man, who on Sunday night leaped 80 feet from the Richmond Highway bridge at Woodbridge, Va., into 2 feet of water in Occoquan River, to escape returning to North Carolina to face a charge of murdering a State policeman, was recaptured yesterday. He thereby became the first person known to have lived after leaping from the bridge. Attempting this feat has cost the lives of several men.

His right leg and shoulder broken in the fall and suffering greatly from exposure after a night of near zero weather in the shallow water, Cox had nevertheless regained the highway yesterday morning before he was rearrested. He was taken to Fairfax County jail where his injuries were dressed and then removed to Alexandria hospital.

W. R. Burdette and Walter Davis, two Woodbridge merchants, met Cox on the highway. While they were questioning him, State Trooper H. L. Robertson, summoned by a woman who had seen Cox crawling painfully up the bank from the river, arrived.

Cox was arrested in New York last week by Department of Justice agents. He was being taken to Goldsboro, the county seat of Wayne County, N. C., by Deputy United States Marshal Harold Quinn and Sheriff Paul Garrison, of Wayne County, in Garrison's automobile, when on Friday night he escaped from them at Accotink, Va. He was handcuffed and eating a sandwich in a roadside stand when he plunged through the door and into a 25-foot ravine surrounded by swampland.

Sheriff Garrison on Sunday night overtook the colored man on the Richmond Highway Bridge over the Occoquan River. As the sheriff seized his shoulder Cox twisted aside, leaped the guard rail and plunged the 80 feet to the river.

When the man was caught yesterday he had freed himself of his handcuffs and had removed the gold fillings from four of his front teeth in an attempt to disguise his appearance. He had also obtained a new pair of trousers and an overcoat, in the pockets of which was found a quantity of bread.

New Wide-Angle Movie Camera Patented by Capt. Chiapparelli

Former Italian Officer Will Begin Filming Washington Scenery and Interior Next Week; Device Uses 70 MM. Films.

Capt. Fernando Chiapparelli's movie camera, the only one of its kind in the world, arrived in Washington yesterday.

Described by its owner and inventor as "revolutionary," the camera operates with a revolving lens and makes possible panoramic motion pictures with a range as wide as that of the human eye.

Capt. Chiapparelli intends to start filming Washington scenery and interiors next week, and by January will be ready to show his panoramic "travelogues" of the National Capital before clubs and educational groups here.

Audiences which see these pictures, according to Capt. Chiapparelli, will be relieved of the eye strain resulting from the contrast between the glaring light of ordinary width films and the bands of darkness on either side of the screen which are included in the range of vision.

The film used in the new camera is 70 mm. wide, rather than the usual 35 mm., and has a blank area wide enough for the new "stereophonic" device which causes each sound to emanate from its point of origin on the screen.

The inventor said yesterday his camera would make it possible to take motion pictures of an entire baseball game, from outfielders to spectators in the stands behind the home plate.

Until photography began to occupy most of his time seven years ago, Capt. Chiapparelli had a varied career as journalist, soldier, diplomat and banker. He served in the Italian army on the Austrian Front in 1915 and was a member of the Italian Military Mission to the United States.

As a financier after the war, he crossed the Atlantic 53 times. Today he is an American citizen, with homes in New York and Washington.

Windsor Libel Called 'Foul' by British Justice

Coronation Book Damages Settled Privately; to Go to Charities.

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 22.—Lord Chief Justice Hewart briskly defended the good name of the Duke of Windsor today in approving a private settlement of the former king's libel suit against the author and publishers of "Coronation Commentary."

The high British official asserted the case involved "foul, cruel libel" of the duke which a jury might have thought deserved a "thoroughly efficient horsewhipping."

Sir William Jowitt, appearing in court for Windsor, announced William Heinemann, Ltd., publishers, and Geoffrey Dennis, author, would pay a "substantial sum" for damages and cost. The defendants also tendered an apology and admitted statements in the book, dealing with the duke's reign as King Edward VIII, were unjustified.

Sir William said the "substantial sum," the amount of which was not disclosed, would be given by Edward to charities in which he had taken a "deep interest" while King and Prince of Wales.

"Coronation Commentary" was withdrawn from sale and a note of apology written to Windsor after the duke protested the book last April. It was sold widely in the United States, however.

It dealt with Edward's reign and abdication and commented on what it characterized as "muddling, fuddling and meddling."

Japan Doubles Attack, Calls on Chiang to Yield

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Nov. 23.—Japan brought her peace offensive into the open today but simultaneously redoubled her military attacks on Chinese armies in the Yangtze Valley in an effort to hasten a break in Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's all-China anti-Japanese front which might make possible an early truce.

A Japanese spokesman revealed a Japanese airplane flew over Nanking at 2 p. m. yesterday and dropped a letter addressed to the Chinese generalissimo urging him to surrender.

The plane dropped no bombs but it was followed by others which backed Japanese "suggestions" with a roar of explosives and machine gun fire on Chinese reinforcements marching toward the battle front west of Shanghai.

Letter Contains "Advice."

The spokesman declined to reveal the text of the letter to the generalissimo, asserting that it was "a personal letter to Chiang Kai-shek from the Japanese military and naval authorities. All we can say is that we asked the general surrender of Chiang and his army. No reply has been received to the letter yet because there has not been sufficient time."

The spokesman said the letter consisted of "advice" and not of "demands."

Other war high lights included:

U. S. Ambasador Nelson T. Johnson went aboard the gunboat Luzon of the Chinese foreign office. Other king, with most of his staff, and planned to sail during the morning for Hankow, new temporary seat o fthe Chinese foreign office. Other ranking diplomatic representatives of the powers were following the American.

Foreigners May Oust Soong.

The municipal government of the Shanghai International Settlement agreed in part to Japan's demands that the foreign areas of Shanghai observe meticulous neutrality. It was understood that widely known Chinese leaders of the anti-Japanese movement in refuge in the Settlement, including T. V. Soong, governor of the Bank of China and chairman of China's liberty loan drive, and others would be asked to leave as soon as possible.

The general attitude of the Settlement government, largely dominated by Britain and the United States, was to "co-operate" with the Japanese, thus preventing an open attack. It was believed the government of the French concession would follow the same policy—tacitly accepting the assertion of Japan that her military victory gives her the right to seize all Chnese government agencies in the foreign areas of Shanghai.

Britain Ready for Lone Action.

London, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Britain is prepared to act alone to protect her rights in Shanghai if they are infringed upon by Japan, a high authority told the United Press tonight.

Capital Bridge Team Wins at Hagerstown

The team-of-four title in the Cumberland Valley Bridge Championships, concluded at Hagerstown, Md., Sunday, was won by four Capital residents, A. P. Stockvis, Oscar Brotman, Al Roth and Dick Skinner. Two other Washingtonians, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, were runners-up for the open pair title.

All are expected to enter the National Bridge Championships, which begin Monday at the Shoreham Hotel. Among those who will compete are Mr. and Mrs. Ely Culbertson and the Four Aces, Oswald Jacoby, David Bernstein, M. D. Maier and Howard Shenken.

Paris to Buenos Aires Record Set by Codos

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 22 (AP).—Paul Codos, French transatlantic flier, piloted his big four-motored plane to a landing at Airfrance Airdrome today to establish a record for the flight from Paris to Buenos Aires. Codos, who left Paris Saturday, set a mark of 52 hours and 50 minutes to better the old Airfrance Paris-Buenos Aires airmail record of 68 hours and 45 minutes.

Russia Removes Envoy to China, Military Attache

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Nov. 22.—Dmitri V. Bogomoloff today was removed as Soviet ambassador to China after a mysterious flight from Nanking to Moscow. I. Luganets-Orelsky was given the post.

The change surprised diplomats, who believed Bogomoloff had been called back for conferences on the military and political status of the Chinese-Japanese war.

Rumors in diplomatic quarters said that Maj. Gen. Edward Lepin, Soviet military attache at Nanking, also had been replaced because he advised Moscow the Chinese were capable of long resistance against Japan.

Dr. Koo Delays End of Parley, But Plea Fails

By the Associated Press.

Brussels, Nov. 22.—China's dramatic appeal for eleventh-hour aid against Japan today failed to swerve the Brussels conference from all but final approval of a report admitting failure of its efforts to end the Far Eastern war.

Only refusal of the Chinese delegate to vote before consulting his government prevented the conference from approving the document drafted by the United States and Britain and then adjourning for an "indefinite recess."

Final action was deferred until Wednesday, when it was thought the Chinese delegate, Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, would have heard from Nanking.

Dr. Koo appealed to the conference at today's session to reconsider its admission of failure, declaring an "abortive ending of this conference will unwittingly augment the already prevailing sense of general insecurity."

Koo told the conference that adoption of the report might "indirectly place small or weak states more at the mercy of the strong and aggressive." He pleaded:

"Will you not with your unlimited resources of power and strength contribute your share by some positive action, even though it may be indirect, to the cause of upholding the principles of law and order, world security and world peace?"

Germans Request Right to Resume Zeppelin Flights

Another zeppelin may reestablish soon the German transatlantic dirigible service abandoned after burning of the airship Hindenburg last May.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson said last night he had received a request from German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff to permit the Hindenburg's sister ship to land in this country.

"Favorable consideration will be given to the request and if no objection is raised permission will be granted for the landing of the dirigible," he declared.

The request is the first step looking to renewal of experimental service in the spring with the giant new dirigible, LZ-130.

German Embassy officials declared experimental operations probably will begin in the spring in an effort to determine feasibility of a regular passenger-mail-express service between Germany and the United States.

Soviet Protests Tokyo War Talk

Moscow, Nov. 22 (AP).—The Tass (official Soviet) News Agency tonight announced the Soviet government had protested to Japan against a statement of Gen. Baron Sadao Araki, who as minister of war directed Japan's conquest of Manchuria in 1931-33, that "it probably is necessary for Japan to strike directly at Russia" to eliminate communist influence in the Far East.

Reich Advisers To Quit Chinese Within 10 Days

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.

Special Correspondent to The Post.

Shanghai, Nov. 22.—German military advisers to the Chinese army, headed by Gen. Baron Alexander von Falkenhausen, will withdraw from their posts sometime this month on orders from Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, it was learned today.

Instructions to resign were transmitted to the German officers by Maj. Gen. Ott, military attache to the Germany Embassy in Tokyo, who visited here late last month.

Hitler's action was taken at the request of the Japanese government, which, through its representative in Berlin, suggested that the continued presence of German military advisers in China violated the spirit of the Reich-Japanese accord of November 25, 1936.

The exact number of German officers at present with the Chinese army could not be ascertained. French sources here put it at "about 30," while local American observers placed the number at five generals and 100 officers of lower ranks.

A Japanese naval spokesman asserted that in his belief "some" of the Chinese divisions on the Shanghai front had each a German adviser, attached to the divisional headquarters. A few of these are known to have already terminated their connection with the Chinese army and returned to Shanghai.

Foreign observers here declared that the skilful defense technique displayed by the Chinese during the first two months of hostilities in Shangrai could be ascribed to the advice tendered by the German officers, most of thom has served with distinction in the Great War.

Concrete pill boxes in Chapei bear all marks of German military craftsmanship of the World War ara.

In deciding to recall the German advisers, Berlin is understood to have held that goodwill in China must be sacrified, if necessary, for the more important consideration of checking the growth of Soviet Russia's influence in this country.

It is regarded here as certain that the first signs of Soviet military assistance to China will be immediately followed by German technical aid to Japan.

Waitress Freed In Killing Held as West Va. Fugitive

Gladys Juanita Love Evans, 18-year-old waitress exonerated by a coroner's jury November 19 in the fatal shooting of John V. White, her common-law husband, was arrested yesterday by Lieut. George Darnell for Salem, W. Va., police as a fugitive from the State Industrial Hospital. Pictures of the girl were recognized by Ava Stanard, a West Virginia officer, and identification was completed through fingerprints.

She was committed to the institution for three years for treatment of disease. She was working as a waitress when arrested.

White was shot through the head with his own .38-caliber revolver. The girl said he threatened her with a rifle.

Coffin's Death Left Puzzle in Inquest

The 64-year-old industrialist was found dead yesterday on the floor of a bathroom in the home of a relative. A single rifle bullet had pierced his head. His favorite deer rifle lay across his chest.

Constance Worth Asks Divorce From Brent

Los Angeles, Nov. 22 (AP).—Constance Worth, of the films, today filed suit for divorce against George Brent, movie actor. She charged extreme cruelty, asserting the actor left home frequently after their marriage in Tijuana, Mexico, last May, without explanation. The complaint made no reference to Brent's recent unsuccessful suit to have the marriage annulled.

Cease Helping Japan, Lewis Begs in House

two wars, the foreign war, abetted and encouraged by such sabotage, and another war back home, civil in character, to be dreaded most of all wars."

Lewis' speech was based, he said, on a resolution which he introduced Friday, which would authorize President Roosevelt to "employ such economic measures, not including war, but including prohibiting by embargoes" of all exports of munitions or war materials by this country to Japan, and all other materials except customary foodstuffs. Extension of credits would also be barred, as in fact, would anything "calculated to further aid Japan as an aggressor nation in violating her sacred covenant with the United States and other nations."

Calls Treaties Supreme.

Lewis' resolution called attention to the fact that treaties, such as the Nine-Power Treaty and the Kellogg-Briand Pact, are the supreme law of this country, taking precedence over any Congressional laws and even over the Constitution itself. It also declares that since the United States is unintentionally aiding Japan; since Japan has violated both the above-named treaties, and since the "neutrality act is inapplicable because of the prior and superior treaty obligations" of this country, the President should be authorized to clamp down such boycotts as are specified.

Ludlow, whose amendment parallels similar proposals introduced in the Senate by Senators Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, and Arthur Capper (Republican), Kans., announced a National Committee for a War Referendum has opened headquarters.

He claimed support from numerous organizations and prominent persons, and noted that a recent poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion showed 71 per cent in favor of a war referendum.

Lewis Assails "Neanderthals."

Ludlow demanded yesterday that "the people of our country may have an opportunity to express themselves before our boys are sent away into foreign lands to die like sheep in a shambles in the settlement of quarrels of alien origin."

He continued: "In America today we have a dual government—autocratic and popular control—where popular sovereignty stops at the water's edge. We elect our constables and dogcatchers, but we have not a word to say on the greatest of all questions—a declaration of war."

Lewis, in answer, declared supporters of the Ludlow resolution not only overlooked obligations of the United States under the Paris pact not to wage aggressive wars, but "fall in two classes: the genuine pacifists and the isolationists." The first he praised and the second he described as "a living example of Neanderthal man, the pithecanthropus erectus again treading the earth."

Backs World Court.

His speech repeatedly referred to the World Court as a place for settlement of international disputes, and he emphasized his regret that this country was barred from the League of Nations through the refusal of the Senate to ratify President Wilson's plan.

In outlining his view of the "responsible cause" of war, he said:

"The responsible cause of yellow fever, the physician will say, is not the mosquito. In our day of light and knowledge, the responsible cause is the absence of netting when mosquitoes infect the neighborhood, or the absence of proper public measures to eliminate them entirely."

"So the nations of the world in the twentieth century need courts and institutions to protect their peace and the rights of their peoples, not merely their sovereignties."

Insurance Stocks Drop 3.18% in Week

New York, Nov. 22.—Insurance stocks in the New York City market declined to lower levels during the past week, according to records compiled by Holt, Rose & Troster. The aggregate value of 20 leading fire and casualty insurance issues on November 19 totaled $512,373,000, compared with $529,221,000 at the close of the previous week, a decrease of $16,848,000, or 3.18 per cent.

Rajah's Daughter Defies Father and Marries Wrestler

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—Princess Baba, youngest daughter of the British Rajah of Sarawak, was married today to her wrestler boy friend, Bob Gregory, despite her father's threat to disinherit her.

The marriage, previously postponed several times when the 21-year-old princess failed to show up, was performed in the Marylebone registry office.

Sir Charles Brooke, father of the princess, is the only white rajah in the world. He rules a patch of northern Borneo. Gregory, 25 years old, is claimant to the European catch-as-catch-can wrestling title.

Hitler Requests Explanation of Britain's Policy

Turns Table on Halifax, Submits Questionnaire on 'Mysteries.'

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 22.—Viscount Halifax, returning from a visit with Fuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany, was reported authoritatively tonight to have turned over to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain a questionnaire prepared by Hitler in an effort to clarify "mysteries" of British policy.

It appeared that the lord president of the council in the cabinet, who consulted with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Chamberlain immediately after his arrival in London, went to Berlin to ask Hitler questions, but returned with the tables turned.

The series of questions posed by the Reichsfuehrer were said to have been a result of Hitler's statement to Lord Halifax that British policy in regard to European appeasement constituted a mystery for the Nazi regime.

Pomerene Leaves $140,000 to Widow

Cleveland, Nov. 22 (AP).—The will of Atlee Pomerene, filed for probate today, left $140,000 of his estimated $192,000 estate to his wife, and $30,000 to Wooster (Ohio) College. Pomerene, former RFC chairman and Senator from Ohio, died November 12.

France Arrests 6 as Spies; Duke To 'Seize' Rule

Exile Proclaims Decision 'to Reconquer' Throne as King Jean III.

Strassbourg, France, Nov. 22.—Six supposed spies, led by a German, were arrested tonight near France's famous $400,000,000 Maginot line of frontier defenses as Minister of War Edouard Daladier watched a military review nearby.

Exiled Duke Seeks Throne.

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP).—The exiled Duke of Guise today proclaimed his decision "to reconquer" the nonexistent French throne as police pressed their search for leaders of a secret Rightist revolutionary committee.

A spokesman for the Surete Nationale said that until now the investigation into the apparently widespread armed movement to overthrow the government had shown no connection between Royalists and "the National Committe of the Revolution."

Political observers considered as "practically zero" the duke's chances of bringing back to France the monarchy overthrown in 1870.

Ryan Lawyer Held For Estate Larceny

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—W. Rossiter Redmond, Brooklyn attorney, was arrested today on an indictment charging grand larceny of $32,543 from the estate left by Thomas Fortune Ryan, capitalist, to his son, John Barry Ryan. Redmond served as a receiver for the property of young Ryan, beneficiary of a $29,000,000 trust fund established by his father.

Beware The Cough From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your common cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many cough remedies, such as Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, and fluid extract of Licorice Root, but it also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect, and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote, perfectly blended with all of these so that it will reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by both adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of people, who really know their drugs, use Creomulsion in their own families, realizing that this excellent preparation aids nature to soothe the inflamed mucous membranes, to heal the irritated tissues, and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion "tops" for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible, and active in going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is generally found satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritation, especially those stubborn ones that start as just a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with the relief obtained from the very first bottle of Creomulsion. Don't worry through another sleepless night—use Creomulsion.

Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product, and the relief that you want. (Adv.)

Medical Body Weighs Plan of Budgeted Care

District Association's Idea Would Offset Inroads of Group Health.

Institution of a plan for "budgeting of medical care" to offset inroads on private practice which are being made by Group Health Association, Inc., was discussed last night at a precedent-setting meeting of the District Medical Society.

Although the society carefully guarded details of what took place at the closed meeting, it was reported that the proposed plan was referred to a sub-committee for study.

Notices of the special meeting which were mailed to the membership disclosed that the subject for debate was budgeting of medical expenses, a scheme which has been widely indorsed in many quarters and which is based upon pre-payment of bills by a fixed monthly fee in sickness or in health.

Traditionally Frowned on.

Such a system has been traditionally frowned upon by the American Medical Association, of which the local society is an affiliate, yet last night's reported action was taken following a report on the meeting of A. M. A. trustees in Chicago last week.

Under the system which is being operated by the Group Health Association, which is sponsored by the Home Owners Loan Corporation for its employes, members pay $2.20 or $3.30 a month, depending on whether they are single or married, and are entitled to complete medical care.

"Rebel" Doctors Defended.

Coinciding with the Medical Society's consideration of the proposal, which is viewed as revolutionary by conservative members of the profession, was a defense by Dr. Earl B. McKinley, dean of George Washington University Medical School, of the recent "manifesto" of the committee of physicians.

Addressing the Smith-Reed-Russell Society of the school, Dr. McKinley pointed out that three of the four principal objectives sought by the group of 430 "rebel" doctors already are partly realized. Co-ordination of medical services is the only goal yet to be achieved, said Dr. McKinley, one of three Washingtonians who signed the declaration of November 7.

Drs. Wallace M. Yater and Coursen B. Conklin represented the District Medical Society in Chicago last week and both, it was reported, told last night's meeting that any plan of health security carrying the insurance motive is viewed with skepticism by the parent body.

D. C. Wins First Legal Skirmish On Privilege Tax

The District's new business privilege tax, expected to net the city $3,000,000 in revenue, withstood its first legal test yesterday when a three-judge tribunal in District Court dismissed a suit to enjoin its enforcement.

The ruling, written by Justice Jenning Bailey and concurred in by Chief Justice A. A. Wheat and Associate Justice D. Lawrence Groner, of the United States Court of Appeals, merely stated that the suit, filed by Howard W. Berry, advertising magnate, did not show Berry was engaged in interstate commerce and that a contention the tax was a burden on interstate commerce was not sustained. The suit was ordered dismissed, at request of the Corporation Counsel.

Man Wanted Here Seized in Honolulu

Harry Weiner, 29, wanted here on a charge of making false statements in a passport application, has been arrested in Honolulu, the Department of Justice announced yesterday. An indictment returned by a Federal grand jury November 8 charged that Weiner and his wife, Hannah Weiner, violated the law when Mrs. Weiner posed as his sister in order to obtain a passport.

Upon his arrival at Shanghai, Weiner was started back to the United States by the American consul. He was said to have left the ship at Honolulu November 9 and found work as a musician at the Casino dance hall where he was arrested.

Scanty Facilities and Ancient Buildings Menace Gallinger Patients

The single scrub room (left) which must be used by all surgeons, assistants and nurses at Gallinger Hospital, where every fleeting second may be, at times, a matter of life or death.

Use of "surgical instruments so old and out of shape as to be worthless and dangerous, some so scaly that they flake off within the abdomen whenever used."

Difficulty of obtaining certain drugs and medicines, even at be of crucial importance to the times when their availability may patient.

Through the initiative of a prominent Washington woman, who is donating $5,000 to buy sorely needed laboratory equipment and hire two technicians for a year, Dr. Ruhland also has been informed that patients in the crowded tuberculosis wards lack sputum cups and gauze, endangering convalescents and less serious cases.

One Washington chest specialist estimated that, under present conditions each open case of tuberculosis at Gallinger is infecting 12 other persons.

"Overrun With Mice."

"Laboratory facilities are a near disgrace to any hospital of good standing," says one visiting physician in his statement which has been referred to the health officer.

"It is practically impossible to obtain special diets or articles of diet," says another.

"The wards are overrun with mice and roaches," according to a third.

"The operating room equipment is very poor," reads one complaint. "The practice of keeping a sterile (?) table open all the morning, taking from it instruments for each operation, can not but tend to increase the morbidity when all sorts of people walk through the operating room in their street clothes, stirring up all the dust."

Urgently recommending that something should be done to rectify the situation, the unnamed doctors cite the inadequate number of orderlies, which results in many patients "leaving their beds and struggling to the lavatory, with distinctly harmful effects;" the vermin problem, which is especially serious in the children's ward; a deficiency of even such ordinary supplies as soap and wound compresses; the lack of certain types of laboratory service.

Vermin in Children's Ward.

A Post reporter, seeking to verify as many of the complaints as he could first-hand, observed that the vermin problem looms large in the children's ward, which is housed in an 89-year-old building. Also that dozens of patients are compelled to lie in gusty corridors, because ward accommodations are used up, and nurses are extremely few in number.

Though the perfunctory inspection was brief, it was long enough to disclose a maternity patient, very ill, bedded in a fifth floor hall directly in front of a door leading to the stairway. When the door is opened, which is frequently, the woman is subjected to a chilling draft.

The corridor one flight below was crowded with patients but, as one resident physician said, "This ain't anything, you should have been here yesterday."

Pleads for Child in Pain.

First words the reporter heard upon entering the dilapidated building where children are treated for pneumonia, bone fractures, tonsils, etc., were these:

"Please, doctor, one of the children inside has been crying in pain for an hour. Will you look at him or call another doctor?"

The speaker was a female attendant, standing in the doorway of a ward, and her plea was addressed to the aide to Superintendent Edgar A. Bocock, who was conducting the "tour." He summoned a resident physician.

Quite by chance, the reporter encountered Dr. Charles Stanley White, chief of Gallinger's surgery staff, at the hospital yesterday. The latter said that operating instruments are in good condition and, conducting the visitor to the surgical suite, pointed out that the instrument table was covered and not exposed, as charged.

Water Sometimes Fails.

"In the operating suite," said the unnamed surgeon whose statement is in Dr. Ruhland's hands, "there is one scrub basin which is supposed to serve for the surgeons, their assistants and nurses, encouraging slipshod preparation and much delay. Half of the time the water doesn't run."

On this point, Dr. White, Dr. Bocock and their aides conceded that a deplorable condition exists. There are three scrub basins in the main operating room but since their use would constitute improper technique they are rarely, if ever employed, the lone basin in the single scrub room being used exclusively.

Consequent overtaxing of this facility causes great inconvenience to the doctors and aides and, more important, may result in dangerous consequences to the patient, if it has not done so already. The complaining surgeon's charge that "half of the time the water doesn't run" was confirmed by a nurse, who laid this irritating feature to uncertain pressure in the pipes.

(Further details of what has been described as a "barbaric state of affairs" at Gallinger Hospital will be disclosed in the next article.)

Bill Asks 3 More Judges For District Court Here

Three additional judges for the United States District Court in Washington were proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania.

The proposal was contained in a general measure designed to carry out the recommendations to the judicial conference, made several months ago by Chief Justice Hughes and the senior circuit judges in each circuit. There are now nine judges in the District Court in Washington.

Limited Staff Cuts Capacity Of Glenn Dale

Health Official Also Says Lack of Facilities Curtails Operation.

Insufficent personnel and lack of laboratory facilities are compelling the District to operate its new tuberculosis sanitarium at Glenn Dale at nearly half capacity despite prevalence of the disease here that gives the city one of the worst ratings in the country, an official of the Health Department disclosed yesterday.

Seventeen patients have been moved from the adult sanitarium to the tuberculosis hospital for children where more adequate facilities are available, the official stated.

The same staff which cared for about 225 patients at the old adult sanitarium at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest prior to opening of the new hospital September 15, now treats more than 250 patients, the health official declared. The $2,000,000 hospital was constructed to house 400 beds.

"The net result has been," the official said, "about 17 adult tuberculars are being treated in the children's building, where the facilities are not as crowded."

Meanwhile, Commissioner George E. Allen announced an investigation has been ordered of the policy of Health Officer George C. Ruhland in placing the direction of both the adult and children's sanitariums under one head.

Murals And Fever Charts.

The District Health Officer recently expressed strong opinions on the merits of murals painted by a WPA artist at the Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanitarium. Depicting Mother Goose scenes, they appeared "grotesque" to Dr. Ruhland. As director of the Health Department which administers the sanitarium, he went further. He characterized the work as "unsuitable to the dignity of a public institution" and ordered work on it discontinued forthwith.

This has raised a storm of protest—and properly. In the first place, the principal point in decorating the sanitarium at all was to minimize the stony, antiseptic "dignity of a public institution," not to enhance it. Particularly where sick children are involved, too much dignity may be undesirable.

The action raised a more important issue, however, this being the freedom of expression to be allowed a presumably competent artist. On this score Dr. Ruhland has now wisely agreed to abide by the decision of a jury selected by the Commissioners. But, in the meantime, the superintendent of the sanitarium has ordered another unfinished mural whitewashed.

The whitewashing has raised something of a legal question, since the muralist was a WPA artist being paid from Federal funds. In addition, it advertises the fact that the Health Department recently merged the adult and the children's division of the sanitarium, the propriety of which is now challenged.

The moral of all this teapot tempest is clear. Let the shoemaker stick to his last. The Health Officer would presumably be resentful of criticisms of his technical work by interior decorators. And what is sauce for the gander is generally supposed to be sauce for the goose.

The Essential Prelude.

Sooner or later, the war debts problem, in a state of suspended animation during the past few years, is certain to receive the realistic and constructive treatment it deserves. And in view of the opening of formal negotiations for an Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement, there is a very real possibility that Great Britain may before very long approach the United States with that idea in mind although it is not yet clear that this approach will take the reported form of a resumption of "token payments."

Debts between nations can, in the long run, only be paid in goods or services. It was, therefore, no mere coincidence that the stoppage of war debt payments followed the strangulation of world trade that occurred as a result of the marked trend toward economic nationalism at the time of the world depression. And while most of the nations have made considerable progress on the road to recovery, world trade has lagged behind.

If Secretary Hull succeeds in his efforts to open the channels of world trade, and an Anglo-American pact would help materially in this regard, that should make it easier for the debtors to meet their obligations to us. The time is, therefore, approaching for a reconsideration of the whole tangled problem. But the necessary prelude to such a development must be the achievement of freer trade relations between debtor and creditor and among all the nations of the earth.

Outlook For Cotton.

In spite of, or rather partly because of the soil conservation act which provided $82,000,000 in payments to cotton farmers under the 1936 program, the present cotton crop is the largest on record. Failure to curb output through acreage reduction is due to a combination of good weather and intensive cultivation with increased use of fertilizer. And, of course, failure in this respect has meant inability to keep cotton prices at the high levels contemplated by the Administration. Cotton is now selling at less than 8 cents per pound, compared with over 12 cents a year ago.

Yet in face of this double defeat reports indicate that the farm bill which is ready for introduction into the Senate contemplates strict control over cotton acreage with parity payments for participation and heavy penalties for failure to comply with the terms of any control plan. Apart from doubts about the constitutionality of the new proposal, it seems strange that Congress should cling to a program based upon acreage reduction after the disillusioning experiences of the current year. In fact, the evidence of preceding years abundantly demonstrates that there is no predictable connection between the number of acres planted to a crop and the amount harvested.

It is not the method of control alone which deserves criticism. Congress is no longer legislating for an emergency, but trying to evolve a long range program of relatively permanent character. That it should cling to a procedure which has failed to reach the objective sought and which threatens to deprive us more and more of our foreign outlets for cotton is a matter of serious concern.

Large cotton crops are indeed a misfortune when consumption is restricted to a limited domestic market. But they need not be if prices are low enough to permit American cotton to be sold in competition with foreign growths. If Congress and the Administration are resolved to raise prices to artificially high levels by regimenting cotton growers, the marketing problem will become increasingly difficult to the extent that they succeed in their aim.

No middle of the road policy will solve the question of what to do for cotton. We must choose between a program that leaves the grower free to sell at market prices, shifting to other crops if prices become unprofitable, or we must be prepared to impose drastic measures of crop control to carry through a price-raising policy that would mean the loss of foreign markets.

Planning Vs. Prosecution.

Early last June President Roosevelt sent a message to Congress recommending the creation of seven regional planning authorities, in addition to the Mississippi River Commission.

Although his proposals were offered as a long-range program for the conservation and systematic utilization of the Nation's resources there was a widespread belief that they foreshadowed Administration support for the Conservation Authorities bill of Senator Norris. The purpose of that bill is quite clear, and the Senator has always been explicit in stating its intention. He wants to carry the fight against the private utilities to all parts of the United States by authorizing the new regional agencies to generate, transmit and sell electric power to States, municipalities and farm organizations.

With legislation of this type threatening to increase Government competition with private business, the utilities have, of course, been unwilling to put new capital into needed extension and modernization of their properties. The Norris bill, indeed, has been a major factor in holding up extensive outlays by the private companies.

It is good news, therefore, to hear that a rewritten bill is to be substituted for the Norris plan, limiting the activities of the proposed new regional authorities to surveys and planning. Apart from the existing agencies, which have their work already cut out for them, the modified proposal would concern the utilities only in so far as they would be affected by the planned regional development of water power, soil, forest and other resources.

There is a great deal of useful work to be done along the lines of regional planning. For that reason it is the more unfortunate that the public has been led to believe that the Administration was preparing to establish regional TVA's under the pretext of setting up research and exploratory agencies. By clarifying the law providing for the establishment of the new bodies, and removing all doubt as to their limited functions, the Administration will be making a friendly gesture toward the utilities at a moment when their need of encouragement has become a matter of national concern.

Regional planning agencies have already demonstrated their ability to develop integrated programs of related activities serving the interests of the entire country. With a National Planning Board, a logical successor to the present National Resources Committee, as a central co-ordinating agency, regional plans could also be brought into a conformity with national policies, as the President has suggested.

This work of planning is entirely distinct from that of execution of specific projects. Furthermore, there is no reason why planning agencies should determine whether public or private agencies shall be used to give effect to their programs. If we are to make progress toward intelligent understanding of national conservation problems the first thing to do is to insist that legislation to further planning shall be completely divorced from attempts to foist the national power policy of Senator Norris upon the country.

Divided Authority.

After no little controversy, the District Commissioners have compromised with the United States District Attorney by allocating for his use three rooms in the city's new Police Court Building, soon to be opened. In itself the matter is of slight consequence, but it serves to point one more instance of the division of authority which complicates the government of the District.

The city has two prosecuting attorneys. One is the Corporation Counsel. Historically, he is the general law officer of the District, having charge of all legal matters connected with affairs directed by the Commissioners. But in practice, he prosecutes only those cases involving violations of police and municipal ordinances which do not constitute felonies. There are several local laws in which the prosecuting function is specifically denied the Corporation Counsel.

The District Attorney, a Federal official, is Washington's other prosecutor. Naturally, he is charged first with the prosecution of all violations of Federal statutes. In addition, however, he prosecutes most violations of the District code which involve penalties exceeding one year's imprisonment. Moreover, he prosecutes violations of the healing arts practice act, the alcoholic beverage control act and certain other local laws, regardless of the magnitude of the offense.

Protests against this unreasonable arrangement do not imply that the District Attorney fails in his duties toward the city, nor even that the division of authority with the Corporation Counsel leads to any undue confusion. The objection is simply that, as now constituted, the District of Columbia may not manage its own affairs. For example, the city may not move against a murderer within its limits; a Federal officer—the United States District Attorney—must prosecute.

If the city is ever to achieve a normal degree of home rule, one necessary point of reorganization will be a transfer of all prosecuting powers in non-Federal cases to a municipal officer.

"My Garden Now."

On repeated occasions since the undeclared war in the Far East began, spokesmen of the Japanese government, from Premier Konoye and Foreign Minister Hirota down, have solemnly declared that Japan covets no additional Chinese territory. All the island empire wants, they have said, is to get China into a proper frame of mind for Sino-Japanese co-operation.

Precisely what these pledges are worth is now being revealed at Shanghai. With the armies of Chiang Kai-shek retreating to the west and the Japanese undisputed masters of the metropolitan area, the invaders propose to exercise in the internationalized areas of Shanghai all the sovereign rights which China has exercised there. In other words the Japanese propose to take over the maritime customs, the postal, telegraph and radio facilities, the censorship of newspapers, cable and radio. They also propose to purge Shanghai of all anti-Japanese activities, including the suppression of branches of the Kuomintang, the government party in China.

Were this program unresisted by the powers, Shanghai would to all intents and purposes become an integral part of the Japanese domain with Europeans and Americans possibly, but not necessarily, tolerated by the conquerors.

Such a development the other signatories of the Nine-Power Pact should resist before it is consummated. At Brussels they kept the record straight by taking a stand in line with their treaty commitments. To that line they must hew. For the Japanese appetite grows with the eating and before long, while protesting friendliness for China and denying any territorial ambitions, most of China may be converted into a satrapy of the island empire.

As Ogden Nash has expressed it, in a poem now reprinted in "China Faces Japan," a symposium published by the Chinese Students Christian Association:

How courteous is the Japanese!
He always says, "Excuse me, please."
He climbs into his neighbor's garden,
And smiles and says, "I beg your pardon;"
He bows and grins a friendly grin,
And calls his hungry family in;
He grins, and bows a friendly bow;
"So sorry, this my garden now."

Foggy Words.

According to the "bow-wow" theory of language, man first talked onomatopoetically. Reduced to simple terms, this means that human speech originated in imitations of natural sounds. Thus, for instance, hot liquid food usually sucked into the mouth became "soup"; the sound made by a snake became a "hiss;" and a man tripping as he ran was said to have "flopped."

The theory bogs down considerably in this cacaphonous day. There may have been some slight attempt to imitate the clicking sound of an express train's wheels in the christening of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, but it seems doubtful. In any case, there is little question that today's language is exceedingly foggy in spots. Walter Lippmann once cited the prize example—the word "proposition." For vagueness, he believed it unequaled and quoted the case of a patent lawyer who described an infant's teething ring as "a round, rubber proposition, Your Honor, with a hole in the middle of it."

A more frontal attack on the indefinite word has recently been launched by Stuart Chase. He has often wondered, he explains in tones which will elicit much sympathy, why so many discussions, especially in the fields of philosophy, pedagogy and Marxian dialectics, should be incomprehensible to him. He has now concluded that it is explained by the vagueness of the words used. To prove it, he recently asked ten friends for a definition of fascism. He received ten widely varying replies. Yet fascism, he points out, is an influence in the world which many men would lay down their lives to defend and many more to fend off.

To minimize such common absurdities, Mr. Chase, who once formed an organization to protect consumers of goods, would now form another to protect the consumers of words. Even if none but editors were invited to join, it could not fail for members.

A relativist says time is eating up space. We aren't supposed to know about that, but we do know that the lack of space eats up a lot of time when you're trying to find a place to park.

Defends $1.25 Pass.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Here are a few words in defense of the weekly $1.25 street car pass, which frequently enables an entire family to ride.

For example: Dad goes to work on his pass. Later Mommer saunters to his office, borrows pass and spends the day shopping. When pass is returned and Dad rides home, daughter Dora or brother Bill grab it to attend a cocktail party or two or perhaps ride around simply for diversion. Late in the evening when the beef stew is devoured and Bridget has finished her evening chores, she uses pass to ride home and uses it again in the morning. What a cinch, this weekly pass.

Those howling groups, that see purple, should control their brainstorms long enough to realize that there are many sides to the street car controversy which they, in their emotional desire to ride for a third of a cent less, have completely ignored. M. C.

Modern Art.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to the controversy as to the artistic merits of the murals now being painted in our public buildings, I think it is realized that the movement was made to encourage and help young artists whose work did not show sufficient quality and experience to be of commercial value, so we cannot expect the highest form of decorative art.

The present tendency in so-called modern art is a phase like cubeism and other schisms which have passed, as will the modern trend, leaving some good influences which will remain to strengthen the old academic art which will prevail for the future.

Federal Lynch Law Constitutionality

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial published on November 16 entitled "The Poll on Lynching" deserves favorable comment for its service in pointing out the fact that the Gallup poll with regard to lynching presented the question to the voters in an unsatisfactory form.

The pending bill, like other bills on the same subject that have been introduced in Congress in previous years, provides for penalties directed against peace officers in the several States who fail to make "diligent efforts" to prevent a lynching when the impending danger thereof has become known to them. The penalties might be directed against counties or municipalities where such failures in police protection occur, but the essential point would remain that the Federal law is directed not against the persons actually guilty of lynching, but against governmental subdivisions or their officers in the several States.

It seems to me, however, that you are wrong in suggesting that the opinion of voters with regard to the merits of the pending bill would be essentially altered if they had a better knowledge of the actual language and legal character of that bill. A careful study of the situation would reveal to every voter the fact that the indirect method utilized in the Gavagan bill for checking outbreaks of lynch fever is necessary on account of constitutional reasons. If we assume that there is a will to do something to check lynching and to use the authority of the Federal Government for that purpose, we must agree that a constitutional and legally appropriate method must be found, even though this method turns out to be somewhat circuitous.

The foundation upon which Federal power in this sphere must be rested is doubtless the last sentence of the fourteenth amendment, which provides that "The Congress shall have power to enforce by appropriate legislation the provisions of this article."

Now, the fourteenth amendment is an article providing for a series of restrictions upon the several States. The Federal power to enforce the fourteenth amendment is therefore a power to enforce these restrictions upon the States themselves, not upon individuals or groups within the States. Federal legislation in this sphere must be secondary and corrective. The Federal statute must be based upon the presupposition of wrongful State action, and must be framed so as to enforce the salutary restrictions upon State action which the amendment sets forth. Hence, it is obviously necessary, from a constitutional point of view, that Federal legislation to protect the equal rights of citizens, as against wrongful discrimination or lax police protection by the several States, must proceed in some way to attack the State officials or to place responsibility upon the State government itself, or upon its subdivisions.

Now, if this be a constitutional necessity, why should those who think that the Federal Government should interfere to prevent lynching be deterred by the use of an indirect or circuitous method of liability, when once it is explained to them that the use of a roundabout method is constitutionally necessary?

It is true that the pending bill involves a serious interference by the Federal Government with what are ordinarily spoken of as the internal affairs of the States. But while the constitutional argument is not free from doubt, it seems fair to say that the preponderance in that argument rests with those who assert that this is an interference that is fully justified by the terms and the fundamental purpose of the fourteenth amendment. Viewed in that light the action proposed is not an invasion of the true sphere of the States' reserve rights, but is the discharge by the Federal Government of a duty appropriately belonging to it, and lying within its own true sphere of constitutional action.

In all these arguments as to the relative positions of the National Government on the one side, and the State and local governments on the other, it is recognized by everybody that a balance must somewhere be struck. We want both effective National Government and effective local government, and we want them both at the same time. But the mere fact that national officials are interfering with, or reviewing, in a sense, the action of State officials, does not seem to upset this balance of authority.

This same phenomenon actually is found in the familiar judicial process by the operation of which the United States Supreme Court reverses the State tribunals, thus interfering with local judicial administration, and, to some extent, perhaps, lessening the influence and authority of the State courts. Again, when the Federal courts of original jurisdiction issue injunctions to restrain the State public utilities commissions or the State tax commissions, we have another illustration of Federal interference with the efforts of State officials to carry out their duties according to their own lights.

The interference by Federal officials contemplated under the terms of the Gavagan bill is not radically different from the injunction cases just referred to. Relief by injunction in the lynching cases would not be timely or efficacious. The most practical procedure in this particular case seems to be to produce an atmosphere of pressure upon the State officials through the threat of punishment to be subsequently enforced in case of dereliction on their part in the crisis of affairs, when only the administrative or police officers on the spot can well assert any effective control.

What Mr. Fletcher Actually Said.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial under the caption "Government and the Railways," appearing in the issue of The Post for November 18, occurs a paragraph which misconceives what I said in a speech which I made at Peoria, Ill., in regard to legislation affecting the railroads. The paragraph in question is as follows:

Distrust of the attitude of the regulatory authorities is now strikingly revealed by R. V. Fletcher, general counsel for the Association of American Railroads. He has gone so far as to make an open appeal to Congress to instruct the I. C. C. to recognize the need of the roads for additional revenue through rate increases. If the roads are assured better treatment in the matter of rates, and if managements are not deprived of initiative by hampering legislation, Mr. Fletcher believes the result would be "confidence in the railroads as a medium for investment and the necessary inflow of capital from private sources."

This statement in the editorial grows out of a somewhat similar statement in a news article appearing in an earlier issue of The Post. In some quarters the inference is drawn that I stated that Congress should appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission on behalf of the railroads in the instant case pending before the commission in which an increase in rates is sought. Nothing could have been further from my thought.

In an address which I delivered at Peoria on the evening of November 16 I took occasion to suggest that the credit of the railroads would be immensely strengthened if Congress would adopt a settled railroad policy consistent with the public interest. Discussing the problem in the most general way, I stated that the railroads were entitled to earn sufficient money to pay their operating expenses and a reasonable return upon the investment. I further suggested that Congress might very well in the public interest now re-enact a provision which was in the transportation act of 1920 and repealed in 1933, the substance of which was a declaration by Congress that the railroads were entitled to a fair return, and accompanied by a direction to the commission to see that rates were made upon such a basis.

That was the only reference to the matter in my Peoria speech. I should not dream of suggesting so grossly an improper course as that Congress should in any way interfere with any matter pending before the Interstate Commerce Commission. I am not sure that your editorial can be construed as imputing this impropriety to me. I am writing this merely to make my position perfectly clear.

R. V. FLETCHER,

Undistributed Earnings Tax.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Unless the repeal on undistributed earnings tax is made quickly and, what is much more important, unless the repeal applies to the 1937 taxes, the economic situation cannot be saved.

Taxes on undistributed earnings accrued during the year of 1937 will have to be paid next year, throughout 1938, which will be a year of little or no earnings. These taxes for 1937, to be paid during 1938, will cause most of the middle-sized and smaller business corporations to borrow money in 1938 to pay taxes. They will also be compelled to squeeze down their inventory abnormally of goods in process to help meet the 1937 taxes. This, of course, means cutting employment severely in 1938—even further than the normal curtailment of a poor year.

One thing is certain—the loss of income tax to the Government for the year 1938 will be far greater than the immediate loss of undistributed earnings tax for 1937, if the latter is not repealed.

The Post Impressionist

The Commander.

GENERAL FRANCO'S, men in Malaga not long ago released an American innkeeper of southern Spain after holding him several days for questioning. When I read about it in the paper, I remembered an April afternoon in 1935 when Sid and I haggled with the same American over the rates at his pension in a Mediterranean village.

The price, as I recall it, was 18 pesetas a day, plus 10 per cent for service. Sid and I went down the road to Mrs. Vines' and paid 14 pesetas a day.

Mrs. Vines kept the Pension Santa Rosa with the assistance of three Spanish housemaids and a gentleman called the Commander. The implication was that the Commander had served in the British navy, but we were never able to verify that. When we first came to the door to ask about prices he said, "Look, they're drunk." We weren't but the Commander was.

"Here's the roundhouse," he said, and showed us the bathroom. Under the spacious tub were assorted bottles, Spanish, French and Scotch. This cache, it seems, was the latest move in a ceaseless battle of wits between the Commander and Mrs. Vines, who never started drinking before noon herself and didn't think the Commander should.

The Commander knew I was an American and that I would be going home in a year or two. But every day after lunch he drew me aside and told me that for a young fellow like myself there was no career to compare with the British colonial service, especially in the Soudan. They started you there at £500 a year, and it was a grand life, with plenty of time for shooting. This observation inevitably led to a brief tour of the house for inspection of the Commander's mounted trophies—antelope and other animals he apparently had shot himself.

Meanwhile, Sid would play pingpong with Mrs. Vines, who was very handy at the game, but quite ruthless about scoring.

* * *

There were half a dozen other guests at the pension: two mousy English schoolgirls, a titled lady whose son was stationed with the Atlantic Fleet at Gibraltar, a honeymooning couple from Bordeaux, and a British soldier of fortune who had gone to school at Eton, fought through the World War as a private in the Coldstream Guards and now toured southern Europe and northern Africa sleeping in city jails, occasionally stopping in respectable lodgings long enough to take several baths and receive mail forwarded from his fashionable London club.

And there was Fernando, the pudgy son of a Madrid banker, whose bold efforts to learn English occasionally led him into startling conversational overtures.

Mrs. Vines and the Commander kept the flag flying along the lifeline of Empire by serving tea every afternoon at 4:30. By the time we had finished tea it was cool outside, and Sid and I used to walk down the main street of the village.

Then at 7 o'clock we had to be back in the village to meet the train. It wasn't that we knew anybody arriving or that the train ever came twice at exactly the same time, but everybody in the village went down to meet the train. After the train there was dinner and then the circus, which was playing the village all the week we were there.

One night Sid and I returned from the circus to find the Pension Santa Rosa in turmoil. Exactly what Fernando had said to the taller of the two English girls we never learned, but she had been crying quite steadily for 15 minutes. The stockier one, a field hockey player, I think, alternated between efforts at comforting her companion and menacing gestures toward Fernando. Mrs. Vines, loudly supported by the Old Etonian, screamed at Fernando that she would wire his father to bring him back to Madrid.

While Sid and I were looking on in amazement the Commander entered the room. He wore blue pajama trousers and held a tall glass in one hand.

"What the devil's going on here?" he inquired. Various explanations formed themselves, but the Commander swept them aside. His voice rose to quarter-deck pitch:

The Commander fixed us all—spectators as well as principals—with a somewhat unsteady gaze and made forceful shooting motions with his hands. Then he turned his bare, freckled back upon us and left the room with dignity. We all went to bed.

* * * *

I should like to be there if the military governor of Malaga ever extends his investigation of aliens to the Commander. I can see the Commander, dressed in a white linen suit, surrounded by Spanish officers, with an interpreter firing questions at him. He would do his best to remember names, dates and places though it would be plain his heart was not in the conversation.

But then there might come some chance question as to his naval rank or possession of firearms, and the Commander's ruddy face would brighten. In his eyes there would be an expression which it is perhaps best to describe as "faraway," and the Commander would tell of shooting in the Soudan and naval engagements which may or may not have taken place during the World War.

A Nevada Lottery?

THESE DISPATCHES recently contained a reference to the absence of fancy morals in the State of Nevada and a suggestion that, of all our States, this one was best prepared to get the jump on the others with a State lottery. This advantage exists in the fact that neither Nevada's books nor her public opinion ever has been cluttered with artificial morals.

New York, on the other hand, could not establish a defensive State lottery to reverse the flow of New York money to Nevada's public treasury in less than half a dozen years. First it would be necessary to convince the people that their moral objections to lotteries were really unimportant, a process which would take time and pressure similar to the slow development of national sentiment against prohibition.

True believers in prohibition eventually waived their moral objections to repeal and the return of the corner saloon in favor of the revenue and in resentment against the prosperity of the bootlegger. If Nevada were to start a State lottery today, as she easily might for all that the Federal Government could do about it, her tickets would sell in New York by the million in spite of everything the Postoffice Department, the Department of Justice and the New York State government might do to exclude them.

Nevada would get rich beyond the craziest dreams of the most ardent money-lover on earth and the people of New York—and other States, of course—would compel themselves to abandon a principle by way of retaliation and self-protection. In this they would be assisted by reminders that, after all, the antilottery laws and sentiment were not any of their doing but an inheritance from a generation long dead.

• • • •

BUT, having prepared public sentiment, the proponents of defensive lotteries then would have to proceed through the tedious method of constitutional reamendment, which, in New York and some other States, requires several years more.

Meantime, Nevada would be cleaning up and by the time the other States could get into serious competitive action Nevada would have sucked the orange fairly dry and be heeled for a taxless existence extending far into the future.

I mentioned Florida as another possible pioneer, but Florida is hampered by an hypocrisy which would cause uncertainty and delay. Florida's principles and customs are no better than those of Nevada, but she is forever pretending that they are in an effort to keep up with the Joneses.

Nevada is a frank and forthright wanton who taps a nickel on the pane and uses no euphemisms to describe herself in court, whereas Florida pretends to respectability and when picked up by the cops describes herself as "home girl" or "housewife." Nevada says "Come up and see me sometime," and Florida says, "I certainly hope we can have a good heart-to-heart talk."

• • • •

STRANGELY, there appears to be no book dealing with the innate character and the present-day habits of Nevada, although there is plenty of material on her mountains and minerals, a lack which I trust will be repaired by some author in search of a character. Her press agents, who describe her on their letterheads as "One Sound State," give only a rather statistical and materialistic hint of the story in boasting of an existence comparable to that of Monte Carlo, where there is no state income tax, no inheritance tax, no franchise or stock transfer tax, no bonded debt held by interests other than the state's own government, and a per capita tax of wealth the highest in the country.

Fugitive tax slaves are invited to establish legal residence in Nevada, and the names are cited of many wealthy runaways who have done so already.

As to the fascinating character of the State, the presentment is slightly apologetic, defending Reno as being no better or worse than any other city of equal size. That is a little disappointing. I hope Nevada is not going to start calling herself "home girl" or "housewife," too. Florida has never fooled anybody and Nevada's frankness has been one of her charms.

The Once Over

'Scrap.'

(The famous Fall River side-wheelers, Commonwealth, Providence, Plymouth and Priscilla, known to millions of travelers, have been ordered sold "for scrap" for $88,000.—News item.)

For scrap! Can this, then, be the bitter end?
From "Judith" on far west of Price's Bend
Like jeweled specters from the darker shore?
These great side-wheelers of Long Island Sound,
The ships of honeymooners through the years—
Are they to this oblivion now bound,
A junk heap to replace beloved piers?

II.

The stately Commonwealth, the queen of all,
Whose royal fittings once made eyes grow wide;
Known for her gilded corridors so tall—
For 30 years the old line's greatest pride;
And shrink from tow-ropes' damp and chilling grip? . . .
Pray God she may not sense Fate's brutal clutch,
Nor know the baseness of her final trip!

III.

The Plymouth, lone one-stacker of the fleet,
The Providence—"A phone in every room!"—
Now is humiliation made complete—
"Junk," says a judge, and lightly seals their doom.
The fair Priscilla, loveliest by far—
(She bore the "Twelfth Night's" "beauty truly blent"—)
As brilliant in the night as shimmering star . . .
Now to the tramp ship's graveyard is she sent!

IV.

These ships who once were prominent in trade,
Whose service helped to make New England great,
Who in the early days had paid and paid,
Above whatever losses came of late;
These decks that knew a million lovers' steps
On moonlight nights, when music tinkled low,
Must they be crushed, as no one intercepts
The torch, the crowbar and the hammer's blow?

V.

For generations have these vessels plied
The Sound, their lights agleam through countless nights;
One told the time, discarding clock and tide,
At shore points by each ship's clustered lights;
Now are horizons dark along the way
No more from City Isle to Mount Hope Bay
Shall shore dwellers say, "There goes the boat!"

Repulse For Earle

Pennsylvania's 'Crown Prince' And State Democrats Seen Set Back By Failure To Carry Points In November Referenda.

By Eugene Pharo.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

WHILE Pennsylvania Democrats expressed considerable jubilation following the November 2 election at various local victories, the wine of their ecstacy was flat, for in the only State-wide questions that threw a clear light on the reaction of the electorate to their program and its leader, Gov. George H. Earle, they experienced defeat. And the implications of this, in relation to a man who has identified himself so completely with the objectives of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, are not pleasing for them to contemplate.

The defeat was in the failure of three amendments to the State constitution that would have given the Earle administration power to make radical changes, including a project for "soaking the rich" by means of a carefully graded State income tax. The voters killed them all, and in addition made hash of an amendment that would have permitted Philadelphia to consolidate its city and county governments, and so to eliminate overlapping offices that offer rich opportunities for boodle, and that now are in control of Republicans.

Vote In Philadelphia Called Slap At Governor.

IN ADDITION TO these matters, there was a defeat in the Philadelphia municipal election that could be interpreted only as a direct slap at the Governor himself. It was that of Common Pleas Judge Harry E. Kalodner, an appointee of the Governor, and one for whose election Mr. Earle electioneered enthusiastically and persistently. Yet Judge Kalodner lost out, paradoxically, chiefly because the Governor was so evidently in his favor, and because in his public addresses Mr. Earle made an unfortunate reference to the war wounds of Judge Theodore Rosen, the opposing candidate, who was an incumbent of the municipal court.

Innocently enough expressing his "disgust" at attempts to capitalize war service instead of fitness to serve on the bench, in Judge Rosen's favor, the Governor left an opening of which his political adversaries were not slow to take advantage. And every available veterans' organization was immediately apprised that Mr. Earle had shown disrespect, to say the least of it, for Judge Rosen's service to his country. So that when the votes were counted it was found that Judge Kalodner had been catapulted from the bench.

The fact that the Governor was so thoroughly in favor of Mr. Kalodner, who had been his secretary and had held a cabinet position or two following Earle's election, in compensation for his campaign services to Mr. Earle, could not be forgotten by those who were watching the influence of the Governor's personal desires upon the vagaries of the voters.

The above facts, which are most obtrusive and recent, combine with others in the minds of observers who have been watching Mr. Earle with particular interest ever since several months ago, someone dubbed him "Crown Prince" of the Roosevelt Administration, and potential successor of the President. And the net result is to obscure the picture of the Governor as possible Presidential material. There is even some question whether, when the 1938 scramble for office is over, Washingtonians will have the experience of hearing Mr. Earle's voice raised in the Capitol as a Senator from Pennsylvania—a role that until recently it was generally assumed he could be depended upon to occupy next. For the stage setting that would have made this progress almost inevitable has been destroyed.

Display In Legislature Depended On Amendments.

THE SETTING was to be, of course, the special session of the Pennsylvania Legislature that the Governor had let it be known would be called early in 1938, and whose activities would parallel the pre-primary maneuverings of various political personages. For as originally planned the session would have found the Democratic Party, which is in control, equipped with additional constitutional power to carry out its objectives and the added authority of just having had its mandate confirmed by the electorate. The amendment to permit passage of an income tax held possibilities that can be imagined easily in view of Mr. Earle's often repeated ambition to serve the common man at the expense of the "big interests." But it was defeated.

Removal of the "time-lock" prohibiting the submission of an amendment to the Constitution oftener than every five years would have made possible further changes in the charter of government adopted in 1873. But the time-lock was not removed.

Consolidation of the city and county governments of Philadelphia would have enabled the Legislature to pass a new city charter eliminating quite a bit of Republican controlled patronage, and enabling the Democrats to adjust matters to suit themselves. But even that was denied them.

Of two other amendments, one was approved—legalized old-age and mothers' assistance. The other, which would have authorized a bond issue, was no longer required and was defeated with the help of the administration. But neither provided fuel for legislative drama.

Instead of the expected set-up, there now exists little if any reason to call the Legislature into special session at all. And if called the objects so far designated may cause as much damage to the Governor's political fortunes as before they would have benefited them. For the chief of them is the perennial anthracite coal problem, which the Governor has announced the operators must solve before January or submit to possible State control. And the second is the wage-and-hour question, which in turned is contingent on action that may, or may not, be taken by Congress. In either case the administration is certain to find itself involved in a complex situation that hardly can be capitalized upon the stump as effectively as would have been political obstruction to the other measures that were contemplated.

So far as the coal problem is concerned, not all of the electorate is keenly affected, nor does anyone in the administration seem to have in mind a clear-cut course to pursue even if it were. And in the matter of hour-and-wage legislation there is the constant and critical attention of labor to be considered; a fact that was originally thought to count heavily in Earle's favor, but about which considerable skepticism has been expressed since the Johnstown strike of last June.

Powers Of Guffey-Earle Combine Today Less Certain.

THE UPSHOT IS that at present neither Gov. Earle's, nor even Senator Guffey's plans for the 1938 elections are any longer assumed to be the last word in what actually will happen in November next.

John L. Lewis' interest in seeing Thomas L. Kennedy, lieutenant governor, and secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, receive one of the political plums ostensibly in control of the Democratic organization, such for example, as the governorship, has been expressed more than once. Mayor S. Davis Wilson, of Philadelphia, who has rivaled Gov. Earle's feat of shifting from the Republican to the Democratic Party, by shifting back and forth from one party to the other as occasion serves, has announced that he will be a candidate for Governor. Gifford Pinchot has several times been mentioned as working toward the Senatorship to be vacated by James J. Davis, and to be contemplating an alliance with Mayor Wilson. And it has been hinted that Senator Guffey might like to be Governor, in which case he might as easily appoint David L. Lawrence, State Democratic chairman, to his own Senate seat as Gov. Earle.

So that, in view of the situation as revealed on November 2, and the increasing inadequacy of slavishly copying President Roosevelt as the sole inspiration for political projects, it is not surprising that just now there is more head-scratching than boasting among the members of Pennsylvania's Democracy; and especially in the Earle wing of it.

United Air Lines Gain Over Year Ago

Chicago, Nov. 22.—United Air Lines flew a total of 10,700,000 passenger miles last month, an increase of 3.5 per cent over October last year, when a total of 10,345,410 was recorded.

Revenue passengers were 20,809. The company carried 537,269 pounds of air mail and 215,830 pounds of air express. United planes flew a total of 1,556,131 miles over the New York-Chicago-Pacific Coast and Seattle-San Diego routes.

Brazil's New Constitution.

IN FORM, if not in fact, the new Brazilian constitution put into force by President Getullio Vargas following his recent coup d'etat is a cross between fascism and democracy.

In a great many provisions the new charter undoubtedly makes a deep bow in the direction of Rome and Berlin. For instance, it provides for a very considerable enlargement in the powers of the president who now can, if he wants to, exercise dictatorial powers. By the same token the authority of the legislative branch of government is very considerably curtailed although not abolished. A distinct Fascist note is also struck in Article 61 which delegates to the advisory third house of the national legislature, the National Economy Council, the task of promoting "the corporative organization of national economy."

YET, on the other hand, the Brazilian government, so long as this new constitution is strictly adhered to, will differ in many particulars from the German and Italian systems.

The Brazilian Parliament will, under the new dispensation, be more than a rubber stamp. It will continue to exercise certain important functions as a law-making body and will have the right, now obsolete so far as the Italian Parliament and the German Reichstag are concerned, to override the veto of the chief executive.

Of significance, too, are the constitutional pledges regarding civil liberties. Religious freedom, the right of petition, the liberty of association, freedom from arbitrary search and seizure—all these are guaranteed. But the equally fundamental liberties of speech and press are not included. On the contrary, the government's right to censor publication, the theater, moving pictures and radio broadcasting is stipulated in the new constitution.

• • • •

IN THIS VERY crucial respect Brazil has now definitely and distinctly gone Fascist, however it might continue to cling to certain governmental forms familiar in democratic nations.

Yet the fact cannot be ignored that the guarantee of liberties of speech, press, assemblage, habeas corpus and so on in earlier Brazilian constitutions did not always restrain the hand of the governments in power. During most of its history as a republic, Brazil's adherence to democracy has been more nominal than real. Practically speaking, therefore, many of the seemingly revolutionary changes in the governmental system of Brazil are more theoretical than actual.

• • • •

THIS IS NOT to suggest that the overturn in Brazil can be viewed with complete equanimity by the other nations of this hemisphere including the United States. The very circumstance that Brazil has seen fit to change the label on what is after all an old coat is in itself significant.

It increases the prestige of fascism at a time when such added prestige may be enormously valuable to the German-Italian-Japanese triangle, regardless of whether Brazil has any intention of adhering to the anti-Communist line-up. There is, in fact, little likelihood of her doing anything of the sort. Yet the Brazilian action may lead other Latin-American lands also to exchange democratic forms for Fascist trappings.

It is certainly alarming that, close on the heels of the Vargas coup, the editor of a leading Liberal newspaper in Colombia, one of the few truly democratic countries in Latin America, has come out with the suggestion that his country has much to learn from Germany and could well afford to adopt certain of the practices of Hitlerism. The infection of fascism may spread in this hemisphere.

• • • •

SO FAR AS Brazil itself is concerned, the international implications of the Vargas coup are, of course, secondary to the domestic.

The new constitution makes this very clear. The most important aspect of that document is not the way it restricts civil liberties or the powers of the legislature or, conversely, the way it expands the powers of the chief executive, but the change it seeks to effect in the balance of power between the states and the federal government.

In the past the states, and particularly such rich and populous states as Sao Paulo, Rio Grande do Sul and Minas Geraes overshadowed the federal government. Indeed, for a considerable period prior to the revolution of 1930 which elevated Vargas to power, the state of Sao Paulo ruled the Brazilian roost. But now, if Vargas has his way, the states will become mere appendages of the central government.

"The federal government," says Article 9 of the new constitution, "may intervene in states by means of the nomination by the president of the republic of an intervenor, who will assume in the states those functions which, according to its constitution, would belong to the executive power."

But this is only one of the several provisions which look to the curbing of states' rights in Brazil where the states have been infinitely more powerful in Brazilian political life than their counterparts in the American system.

• • • •

IT REMAINS to be seen how successful Vargas will be in his plan to centralize political power. For the moment he clearly has the upper hand.

The army and the navy are with him and his henchmen control the powerful militias in the key states. But this situation may prove only temporary, and anyway the states may not submit indefinitely to a system which reduces their political importance to nothing.

After all, nature is on their side. Brazil is, geographically, not one nation but three—the great Amazon Valley, the inland plateau and the coastal region, where most of Brazil's 44,000,000 inhabitants are concentrated. And because of lack of sufficient means of communications, the establishment of strong, centralized unity in the midst of such a diversity may prove impossible of achievement. On the contrary, the attempt may sooner or later plunge Brazil into grave disorders. After all, constitutions do not enforce themselves.

Chinese In A Novel

By William Lyon Phelps

A Mystery Story.

I grew up at school with a number of Chinese boys, all of whom were young gentlemen; they came from the finest families in China, they had excellent manners, more polished than ours, they were most of them loyal and devoted friends, unselfish and considerate.

I often think of them, and my memories have been strengthened by reading a new murder story written by the redoubtable Erle Stanley Gardner, called "Murder Up the Sleeve."

The story itself is ingenious and exciting, and the hero resembles in manner and in method the author's famous creation, Perry Mason, the great criminal lawyer.

• • • •

Some of the prominent characters are Chinese; and Mr. Garner, who has evidently been admitted to intimacy among the best families in China, adds a postscript, about that remarkable race; telling us the truth when he says that the Chinese in America are not an unusual sight, but that very few Americans know personally the upper class of cultivated and educated Chinese ladies and gentlemen, for whom our author has the highest regard.

Apart from one's interest in the story, there is a great deal about the art of concentration, which the hero has studied in a remote Chinese monastery. It is perhaps the rarest of all arts.

• • • •

The majority of boys and girls who are studying their lessons do not keep their minds exclusively fixed on the matter; the majority of persons in the audience at a symphony concert are at various moments thinking of something else; the majority of players in golf and in tennis are not absolutely concentrated on each separate shot.

In her new book called "Fifteen-Thirty," Helen Wills said that in a match she never thought of the score or of whether she were leading or the reverse; she simply concentrated on each shot. She usually won.

Tom McCarthy

The Tooth, the Whole Tooth and Nothing But the Tooth!

MY DENTIST is worried. He says that he didn't mind it so much as long as they only told the story about Mr. Mussolini; but now that the word is getting around about Mr. Roosevelt, he's downright scared.

TOM McCARTHY.

Maybe, though, he was just making conversation. He has a technique along that line which, I think, they're probably teaching in the more modern schools. I believe it's given in a course called, "How to Torture the Patient—and Keep His Mind Occupied."

"Yes, Tom, it's got me worried," he said, as he fiddled around in the tray before choosing between a one-bladed bone chipper and a flat-handled filling-blaster. Those, of course, are not the technical names, but I've been calling them as I saw them for years.

"It's got me very worried," he said, with his flawless technique of transferring the patient's pity to his own broad shoulders.

"It didn't worry the profession," he said, forcing my head back in the chair, "when the word got out that Premier Mussolini was able to read in the dentist's chair.

"But now—open wide—that," and he paused long enough to get a little pushing and hauling done on the rear upper molar. "Now," he continued, "that Mrs. Roosevelt has told the press that the President often sleeps in the chair, it's something for us to worry—open wider—about."

"I know, Doc," I said, "it's probably mighty serious, but what I want to know is . . . is this going to hurt?"

"Not very much—open wide, again, now—"he said, "but the profession is worried."

"T'ell wif the pro——"

"Now, now," said my dentist, "that's no way to talk, because it's—open wide—mighty serious business. Don't you think so?"

Well, that sort of made me mad. And he's been doing things like that for years. "Don't you think so?" he said, all the time grinning like an ape, because he had my mouth full of tools, and he knew that the best I could do was to say, "Noo, ah—glub."

• • • •

"YES, SIR," he said, as he bore down with flat-handled filling-blaster, "such reports are almost seditious. Open wide—such reports are likely to do away with the profession as we know it today."

"Ah, doan—awk—oof," I said.

"I'm glad to see you agree with me," my dentist said. "It's something we'll need the support of the general public on. Think of it," he said, as he hovered over me with his drill. "Think of the effect of a Nation with the idea that it could read a novel or catch a catnap in the dentist's chair!"

But before I had a chance to reply he had the drill in my mouth and was smiling happily as its contented purr filled the office.

"Ooh—ra—oop," I said.

"Now, jou're just a typical case," the dentist said, jamming me back in the chair and throwing the drill into high again. "What would become of us fellows if you thought you could sleep in the chair? Be pretty bad, wouldn't it?"

Personally, I don't think he was sporting at all. These dentists want to do all the talking, and every time he'd ask a question he'd bear down on the drill.

"I knew you'd agree with me," he said, as he set to work with a steel-tipped, doubly reinforced miniature crow bar. "I knew you'd see the point. Can't you imagine how awful it would be if we had to furnish reading for the customers who wanted to follow out the Mussolini method of being happy in a dentist chair?

"Do you know what would happen?" he said, knowing all the time that I couldn't say a word with a couple of rolls of cotton in my mouth and with him teeing off a molar of mine with a miniature niblick.

"Why, we'd have to reorganize the practice," he said. "We'd have to take courses in reading for the masses. We'd have to develop a sixth sense of just what the patient would like to read.

"Gone would be the old catch-as-catch-can table of last year's magazines," he said, mournfully, while tamping another load into the tooth. "And to think of the trouble we'd be letting ourselves in for. Think of the customers lost if we handed the wrong person a copy of 'Das Kapital.' Or handed the father of six 'Live Alone and Like It.'

"Yes, sir—open wider—it's reports like that that'll be the death of the profession. As long as the public holds to such fundamental beliefs as 'uneasy lies the tooth that wears the crown' (ha! ha!) we'll be all right. But once they slip over the side and insist on the easy way——" My dentist shook his head dolefully.

"All right, Tom, you can come up for air now. And I'm glad to see that you agree with me."

"Doctor?"

"Yes, Tom?"

"Nerts!"

Lawyers Favor College Work as Bar Requisite

Only One on Committee of Seven Backs Present Requirements.

Stricter academic requirements for admission to practice law in the District were urged yesterday at a meeting of the committee on legal education of the District Bar Association.

Only one of seven committee members indicated definite opposition to tightening requirements. Others voted in favor of making college work a prerequisite.

The vote was taken on a specific proposition that the committee should recommend to the Bar Association that two years of college work or its equivalent be made compulsory for admission to practice. Three voted in favor of the proposal; three others voted against it with the qualification that four years of college work should be required instead of two.

The seventh member objected to change on ground that it would mean decrease of opportunity for many young people. In voting against the two-year proposal, two members suggested more extensive law training as an alternative to four years of pre-legal college training and one suggested setting up an apprentice system.

Report of the vote will be presented to the Bar Association at its next meeting, early in December. The committee voted to recommend further study of bar admission requirements.

Many law students in the District, particularly those taking night courses, do not have pre-legal college training. Action toward requiring such training would come through District Court judges who supervise rules for law practice in the District.

Copeland Still Trying to Honor Comte de Grasse

Francois Joseph Paul, Marquis de Grassetilly, Comte de Grasse, is going to get that memorial in the District if Senator Royal S. Copeland and French patriotic societies of New York have their way.

For perhaps the tenth successive year Senator Copeland introduced a resolution yesterday authorizing a $50,000 District memorial to the count, who commanded the French fleet that bottled up the British at Yorktown.

The resolution proposes that the memorial be erected on public property, the exact site and design to be passed on by the Fine Arts Commission.

Welles to Confer With Dominican On Haitian Strife

By the Associated Press.

Undersecretary of State Welles was informed by Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza yesterday that Dr. Troncoso de la Concha was expected to arrive in Washington late today.

Welles said he would receive Troncoso, rector of Santo Domingo University, who is on a special mission connected with the Haitian-Dominican dispute, at noon tomorrow.

United States Minister Henry Norweb, who was to have called on President Trujillo Sunday, was expected to visit the Dominican president yesterday, but word thus far is lacking.

Martin Breaks Outlaw Strike, Bolsters Union

U. A. W. Chief Leads 200 From Fisher Body Plant in Dramatic Victory.

By the Associated Press.

Pontiac, Mich., Nov. 22.—Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, led 200 sit-down strikers out of the General Motors Fisher Body plant today as a dramatic demonstration of the union's determination to curb unauthorized strikes.

The international board of the union, in a statement, had said its position was "jeopardized" by the unsanctioned strike.

The strikers had held the plant since Wednesday evening, defying international officers of the union, the executive board which was called into emergency session Sunday, and even their own strike committee.

14,721 Out of Work.

Today, however, an intermediary sent word to Martin that the men wished to hear from him. An hour and a half after Martin entered the plant, the men emerged and the company was notified that the strike was over.

H. J. Klingler, president of the Pontiac Motor Car Co., said that not until "the latter part of the week" could all of the 14,271 men thrown into idleness by the strike be returned to work. The Fisher plant produces Pontiac automobile bodies and the strike necessitated closing both plants.

Willard E. Hotchkiss, retired president of the Armour Institute, of Chicago, was appointed arbitrator to settle issues which led to the strike.

Threatened Violence.

Although Martin had been informed the strikers were so angered by his refusal to sanction the strike that they might inflict personal violence on him, he said he found them "all good union men."

"I told them the union would not tolerate outlaw strikes," he said after the evacuation. "When the situation was explained to them, they agreed with the international's position."

Martin said he told the men he could offer no assurance of concessions by the company on suspension of four men accused of instigating a short-lived strike Monday night. That was the most pressing issue in the latter stage of the strike.

De Lombos, Painter Of Celebrities, Dies

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—Philip Alexius Laszlo de Lombos, 68, Hungarian-born artist who painted portraits of many royal persons and world leaders, died today. Among those who sat for him were Pope Leo XIII, former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, the late President Warren G. Harding of the United States, King Edward VII of England, and Premier Mussolini of Italy.

He was a bitter antimodernist and once objected to modern fashions on the ground that they hampered his work because they "concealed no defects."

Ernest Perrin, 67, Dies; Noted Poet and Linguist

Brookline, Mass., Nov. 22 (AP).—Ernest Perrin, 67, internationally known linguist, poet and lecturer, died yesterday. Perrin was a native of Le Mans, France, a graduate of the Paris Conservatory and appeared in productions of French classics in London, Paris and Buenos Aires. He came to the United States in 1905. For 20 years he directed plays of the Cercle Francaise at Harvard.

Brewery Ordered Sold.

Hagerstown, Nov. 22.—The Hagerstown Brewery Co. property, consisting of eight buildings, will be sold under mortgage foreclosure December 14. The plant was remodeled after the repeal of prohibition and manufactured beer, but operations were suspended some time ago.

The Blush Has Night in Court At New Comedy

'To Be Continued' Proves Funny but Too Frank Sex Discussion.

By Nelson B. Bell

"TO BE CONTINUED." Morris Green and James J. Fero present a new comedy in three acts. Directed by Melville Burke; settings designed by Cleon Throckmorton. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

Mrs. Robert Andrews.....Thais Lawton
Pamela Pennington.....Luella Gear
Celia Pennington.....Tookie Hunter
Dwight Langdon.....Richard Jack
Marie Andrews.....Dorothy Bernard
Gardner Dickinson.....William David
Grace Tillman.....Claire Carleton
Mrs. Minnie Sterling..Ruth Chorpenning
Mr. Franklin Coleman.....Day Elliot
Elaine Carley.....Louise Kirtland
Christopher Coffman...G. Albert Smith
Roger Pennington.....Donald Mackenzie
Miss Madge Dazel.....Julia Brown
Rev. Stephen Cartwright, Sherling Oliver

Written in the combustibly ribald manner of the late Avery Hopwood in his most audacious mood, the three-act marital farce by Charles George, unveiled in the National Theater before a large and slightly embarrassed audience last night, proved a singularly unmotivated comedy that punctuated a nebulous purpose with nervous, but frequent, explosions of laughter.

The nervousness was occasioned by fear of what the author might say next; the laughter by the acutely biological pungency of some of the frankest and most damng speeches that have been bandied across the footlights in recent seasons.

The piece is less a play than it is a partial biography of a young and ultra-modern mother, with a 16-year-old daughter, who flits from husband to husband with amazing fortitude in quest of the perfect mate. A divorcee when the clinical dissection of her love life begins, Pamela Pennington contemplates the death of her first husband more as a springboard to a more abundant connubial bliss than as a sorrowful pause in her search for happiness. The mortician, in whose funeral establishment the second act is laid, is the second helpmate favored by Pamela's insatiable enthusiasm for domestic experimentation; the young clergyman who intones the Pennington obsequies, the third.

Love Among the Lillies.

Daughter Celia betrays a strong hereditary strain by striking the household a trifle aghast by announcing that she is going to have a baby a breath ahead of the equally vital confession that she already is married—a circumstance that had not impeded her mother's earlier participation in the same adventure, without benefit of clergy until conditions had suggested a shotgun.

The socalled era of mauve Victorianism is represented by Pamela's mildly outraged mother, who cannot quite comprehend why all these things must happen to her, and Sister Elsie, a pillar of all the virtues who brings a nurse's career to a triumphant end by catching the richest and most eligible of her patients.

Lest any be frightened by the doleful implications of the mortuary second act, it may be said that the farce's most provocative scenes occur in the anteroom of the funeral chapel—never revealed to the audience—where all of the deceased Mr. Pennington's loves gather to pay final tribute to the promiscuous bounties of an elegant but impecunious Lothario who must have had a bit of a way with him—the haughty creature who staked him to the modest little beanery he conducted in a Pennsylvania town, the waitress who served him also in a more intimate capacity, the landlady who devoted his last room rent to a floral piece and the weeping "widow" who is tearfully terrified that he should have died before he could marry her.

Cast Excels Material.

Such is the "plot" of two Baltimore acts and one in a small Virginia town. They constitute a recital rather than a drama. Pamela, it seems, shoud have joined the Royal Northwest Mounted. She always gets her man. Beyond that the play has no point.

Luella Gear impersonates Pamela with intelligence and humor and unfailingly provides the spork that ignites the biological bonfires with which the three acts almost continuously are ablaze. The role, of course, does not do her justice. Neither does that admirable actress, Thais Lawton's part of Mrs. Robert Andrews, the grandmother, measure up to her capabilities, nor that of Elsie Andrews give Dorothy Bernard—graciously remembered for fine work when she was a favorite of the old Columbia Players, with her husband, A. H. Van Buren—much that is worthy to do. Tookie Hunter has herself a flip and sophisticated time as the daughter, Celia, and Claire Carleton rated the hand she received for her portrayal of the waitress. G. Albert Smith and Sherling Oliver discloses complete mastery of deep Virginia accents.

Paying Hobby.

Reginald Gardiner, featured in the musical comedy "Everybody Sing," started doing his impersonations of objects to amuse himself between scenes in London when he was on the stage.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Incoming Film Plays Demonstrate Occasional Value Of Altering Original Stories to Exalt the Cinema

Little More Than Titles Remain of 'The Firefly' and 'Stage Door,' But Both Are Better; an Old Favorite Bobs Up at Earle; Postman Rings Again; 'Love of Women' for National; Notes of the Theater.

THANKSGIVING will usher in a week in local motion picture houses that will confound those who hold the view that every screen play made must adhere strictly to the text of the original from which it was adapted.

BELL.

Insistence on rigid fidelity to known scripts and texts, not to mention musical scores, has become a fetich to which many subscribe with bitter persistence. It is this segment of the public that will be severely jolted into a new point of view when they see "The Firefly" and "Stage Door" in film form. Not much remains of the original story of either one.

While Rudolf Friml's lilting score has been largely retained in the camera production co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones, and opening with a special midnight public preview at the Palace tomorrow night—five of the original songs remain intact—two new members of equal charm have been added. But when it comes to the Otto Harbach book and lyrics, that is something else again.

Practically nothing but the title has been preserved by Albert Hackett and Frances Goodrich in their revision of "The Firefly." They have written an entirely new story, with its time and place in the Napoleonic period in Spain and France. The only thing that will be recognized in the old piece now is the improvement that has been miraculously wrought in it.

Much the same thing is true of "Stage Door," seen recently at the National in its pristine form as an hilarious comedy of theatrical boarding-house life in New York. In the film version, contrived by Morrie Ryskind and Anthony Veiller, the original idea conceived by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber has been cracked up and reassembled into a mere shimmering shadow of its former self. The Hollywood satire has been kicked violently over the heart and tossed into the ash can, in a manner of speaking.

Everyone concedes that the alteration has been of great benefit to the play as believable drama, without impairing its high-pressure fun or the continuous flow of high-voltage "wisecracks." In fact, the opinion is virtually unanimous that they have been speeded up and polished until they flash along in shiny new brightness and brilliance, with Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou leading the parade of shadow figures on the silver sheet.

Those who insist upon enjoying again only the fine quality of entertainment afforded by the originals of "The Firefly" and "Stage Door" had best stay away from the Palace and RKO-Keith's, come tomorrow; those who can do with better frolics under the same titles had better scurry down and get in those box-office lines before they stretch themselves clear around the block. And don't say I didn't tell you!

• • • •

Stage Door," of course, was a last season's hit on Broadway, but "The Firefly" dates back a little further than that. It may freshen the memory to point out that this Harbach-Friml work was presented first in the Empire Theater, Syracuse, N. Y., on October 14, 1912, as an Arthur Hammerstein production starring Emma Trentini. The operetta moved into the Lyric Theater, New York, on December 2 of the same year. When you see it in its present manifestation, you will never believe that 1912 subtracted from 1937 equals 25 years. It is approximately that far ahead of the screen's average musical.

Speaking of old times, when this column previewed "It's Love I'm After," the vigorous comedy now starring Leslie Howard and Bette Davis on the screen at the Earle, it was struck by the resemblance of the actress playing Miss Davis' maid to Valerie Bergere, one of the mainstays of two-a-day vaudeville back in the days when headliners had to 'have something." Reference to the printed cast afterward proved a treacherous memory to have been right—for once.

Valerie Bergere was born in Metz, Alsace-Lorraine, on March 11, 1872, and had enjoyed a notable stage career before becoming a fixture in vaudeville, when vaudeville was vaudeville. You probably remember her at the old P. B. Chase Theater and the early B. F. Keiths—now RKO-Keith's—in "His Japanese Wife," one of her favorite playlets. Others in which she appeared included "A Bowery Camille," "The Morning After the Play," "A Prairie Flower" nad "The Sultan's Favorite."

Stop by the Trans-Lux some time and ask Roland Robbins. He knows.

Watch those opening dates this week, as long as we already have dabbled a bit with the subject. "Alcatraz Island," at the Metropolitan, "Stage Door," at RKO-Keith's and a repeat bill at the Belasco all open tomorrow; "The Firefly," tomorrow night at 11:30; Eddie Cantor in "Ali Baba Goes to Town," at Loew's Columbia, on Thursday. Nice going for the drayma desks. Oh, yeah?

R. O'Neill, jr., and W. D. Roseborough, jr., midshipmen in the U. S. Navy, write a cordial letter from 3040 Bancroft Hall, U. S. Naval Academy, Annapolis, Md., to say "We read with much interest and enjoyment your writeup of the current motion picture, 'Navy Blue and Gold,'" and then go on to set your reporter right on a few technicalities—for which we are grateful.

It seems I referred to the Academy's enrollment as "cadets." While the term "cadet at the U. S. Naval Academy" formerly was in use, I now learn that "midshipmen at the U .S. Naval Academy" is preferred. There seems to be some pique, too, at my having referred to the "exquisite brutalities" of the upper classmen. That, of course, was largely figurative, although the youngster Robert Young knocks cold with a sock in the jaw is dismissed from the Academy for the act that had caused the ring fracas that did him no physical benefit whatever—which seems to be in line with the portion of the Academy regulations my correspondents quote.

But it's nice to have a reader—two of them, to all intents and purposes, is a "public." Gentlemen, I salute you.

Birthdays are falling around promsicuously in "show business" all of a sudden. Yesterday was "Cracker Barron's, small son of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Tate Barron, who probably will own Loew's and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer by the time he is as old as his dad, and tomorrow night Mrs. Mark Silver is being dined by her husband, of United Artists Washington staff, and a small company of guests at Harvey's in honor of hers. Joe Kaliski, of Gaumont British, had one recently and we celebrated ours last month—and that's the last you'll ever hear out of either Joe or me about that! The old guy with the scythe is sneaking up where he swings too close!

Anyhow, we have a batting average of .500 on the incoming attractios at the National. Ed Wynn may not get here in "Hooray for What?" but the Messrs. Shubert are coming through with "Love of Women" the week of Monday, December 6. This is the one that will feature Heather Angel, erstwhile films tar; Valerie Taylor—not Bergere—and Hugh Sinclair. Another prominent member of the cast will be Leo G. Carroll, who like the three already mentioned, also is British.

Word-to-the-Wise Note.

Dancers Signed.

The famous Apple Dancers, creators of the newest dance sensation, winners of practically every dance championship this year, and currently headlining on a vaudeville tour, have been signed to appear in "Everybody Sing."

Enthusiast.

Nelson Eddy, co-starred with Eleanor Powell in "Rosalie," has never failed to play at least one set of tennis every morning. He had his court covered with canvas, so that bad weather will not keep him from playing.

'Lo, Here the Gentle Lark—'

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's production of "The Firefly" opens on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater at a special public preview tomorrow night at 11:30 Capital theatergoers will hear Jeanette MacDonald in one of the most effective singing roles she has had in her distinguished film career. Allan Jones' tenor balances Miss MacDonald's soprano in the male lead. Miss MacDonald's latest portrait study is reproduced above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, Nov. 22.—The other day I heard a big-shot producer complain tearfully that there are just two great actors on the screen—Paul Muni and Spencer Tracy. All of the others he dismissed with one sweep as "types"—people who are capable of playing only one kind of role. Personally, I wouldn't blame anyone of a hundred actors and actresses for putting ground glass in that producer's gefulltefisch.

BETTE DAVIS.

• • • •

The fact is that only two or three of the screen's capable actors are ever allowed to show their ability. The others, having clicked in some one role, are forever doomed by the greed of their producers to go on playing the same role, through one picture after another, until the public gets fed up and turns thumbs down on it. Formula pictures are the curse of Hollywood—and the death warrants of many fine actors who, given the chance, might prove themselves just as versatile as either Muni or Tracy. Bob Montgomery was kept in wise-cracking, sappy roles until the studio decided he was "through" and then, believing that there was nothing left to lose, they let him play the half-witted murderer in "Night Must Fall." Maybe the picture was a box-office failure—but if Bob Montgomery's performance was not a masterpiece, I think I should quit reviewing pictures. This town is full of great stage stars—actors who played every type of role imaginable on the "legit" but who are kept in just one popular characterization by the czars of picturedom.

• • • •

Muni and Tracy are lucky: If they had made a hit by wiggling their ears in their first pictures—they would still be doing it.

• • • •

Chatted with a very disgruntled young lady named Shirley Ross today. Shirley's idea of a good time has always been a good trip—ever since childhood, she has been reading National Geographic Magazine and dreaming of far-away lands. Only in recent months, however, have her finances made the dreams seem practical. Not long ago, with all of her fellow stars taking up the fad of giving presents to the other members of their troupes on the completion of a picture, Shirley decided to give awa) trips. She presented her hairdresser with an all-expense tour of the Pacific Coast, her secretary with a jaunt to New York and her parents with a European vacation. For herself she reserved passage to Honolulu. And then irony, in the form of Mr. Paramount, stepped in. The others took their trips and came back bubbling with enthusiasm. Shirley had to cancel her reservations and stand by for an unexpected screen assignment.

My favorite hunting ground for "human interest" stories is a little second-hand clothes store near one of the big studios. Today the proprietor told me about selling a tuxedo to the mate of an Italian tramp steamer. "While he waited for the suit to be altered," said the clothes vender, "he talked to me in broken English. He had always wanted to see movie stars and he was spending his roll to do it. He told me he had a girl in San Pedro and he was going to take her to the Trocadero because he had read about all the stars going there to dance. Maybe I should have told him about it . . ." "About what?" I commanded. The store owner knows the importance of a dramatic climax, and he waited for an artistic moment before answering. "Maybe," he said, "I should have told him that that tuxedo once belonged to John Bowers, who committed suicide because he lost his stardom."*

The other day I presented a studio publicity story as the all-time prize-winning masterpiece in unbelievable hooey. But there's another "news note" in this morning's drivel that has it topped. This little classic informs the world that Bette Davis, vacationing in the mountains, took a sun bath, and the sun, filtering down through the branches of a tree, burned on her back her own initials, a perfect B and a perfect D.

Unfortunately the item neglected to state whether or not the sun had also placed periods after the initials.

Friday Guests.

George Brent always keeps Friday night free—and for a reason. Every Friday night he takes three little neighbor boys to the North Hollywood Theater to see a movie. Afterward he buys them ice cream sodas at the neighborhood drug store.

Proxy Voice.

Mme. Albertina Rasch, dance director on Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Rosalie," lost her voice for a week during the dance rehearsals and hired a man to yell out the written instructions, which she jotted down while the 500 dancers were going through their paces.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Nov. 22.

FEATURE STORY: Jock Whitney sailed to Europe on the Bremen, despite the urging of some of his non-Aryan friends that he refrain from taking passage on a Nazi boat. Whitney, however, was required to sail Saturday, and so he left, on the Bremen . . . Three days out, he phoned to New York and confided that he was suffering from seasickness. Dave Selznick, the producer, heard of this and sent him a radiogram: "Dear Jock, I have heard that the only cure for mal de mer is marinated herring!"

• • • •

BOOK DEPT.: Sinclair Lewis recently complained that Napoleon Hill's book, "Think and Grow Rich," was one of those best sellers which tend to make people soft . . . Mr. Hill is having his revenge. Every day now he sends a copy of his book to Sinclair Lewis.

• • • •

BEAUTY DEPT.: Nat Pendleton was a noted wrestler, before he turned movie actor. Nat won the A. A. U. and Olympic wrestling championships, and as his badge of honor proudly wore the cauliflower ear he had sustained . . . When he entered the movies, Pendleton had a plastic operation performed upon that ear, to remove the unsightly puff . . . The other day Warner Bros. assigned him for the role of the wrestler in "Swing Your Lady." And for one hour, every day, the Warner make-up man applies his talents to Pendleton's head, affixing a false cauliflower ear.

• • • •

DRAMA NOTES: Now that Hannah Williams Dempsey has retired from the Ed Wynn show, "Hooray for What," her place has been given to Binnie Barnes, the screen star. June Clyde, also of the screen, has been signed to join the show.

• • • •

MUSIC DEPT.: ASCAP—the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, this week inducted some new members into its ranks. Among these new accredited songwriters is a gentleman whose one song hit was written more than a score of years ago . . . The song is "Will You Love Me in December." The new author-member is James J. Walker.

• • • •

THEATER DEPT.: All the critics have lauded Orson Welles' modern-dress production of "Julius Caesar," staged with no scenery at all—except for the background of a simple brick wall. On that stage, these nights, Caesar's Romans appear, in dark Fascist uniforms. And throughout the performance a quiet man, wearing a dark uniform, stands to the right of the group, in full view of the audience, although he's not a member of the cast. He stands there because there is no stage door behind which he can keep his vigil. He's the fireman!

SOCIAL NOTES: Whenever Countess Poulett, of London, has visited this country she always toured the night clubs accompanied only by her daughter, Lady Bridgett Poulett. For the first time, however, the countess arrived without her daughter. And so Wednesday night she was accompanied by Ted Peckham, head of the Escort Service.

POLITICS: During the recent mayoralty campaign, Jeremiah T. Mahoney resigned from the presidency of the Grover Cleveland Club, which made him leader of the 15th A. D. Maurice Blumenthal replaced him . . . On the night LaGuardia was elected, Mahoney announced that he was through with politics. Shortly, however, Blumenthal will resign as leader. Mahoney will replace him.

• • • •

BUSINESS DEPT.: Joris Ivens, who directed the picture, "The Spanish Earth," will go to China to do a similar picture about that country. He has the money required, as well as the backing of Mme. Chiang Kai-shek . . . The picture will be made in the interior of China. And the story will include emergency offshoots, in case any of the native actors are killed during the warfare with Japan.

• • • •

MOVIES: Jack White, who appears in the movie "52nd St.," greeted William Powell yesterday at his 18 Club. "Bill," White asked, "isn't it possible for me to appear with you in your next picture? How can I do it?" . . . "It's easy," Powell replied. "Just grow your hair longer, much longer, get prettier, drop about 15 years—and change your name to Myrna Loy."

• • • •

TRAVEL DEPT.: On the last day of Mrs. Martin Johnson's recent trek through Africa's jungles she tendered a surprise birthday party to one of the expedition's cameramen. "Tomorrow we leave for home," she announced, "and so let's start forgetting all about Africa now" . . . They partook of the feast, of the American delicacies for which the porters had been sent 200 miles. And then, after dinner, Mrs. Johnson played a new record she had received from New York. She placed it on the phonograph, set the needle, and the group sat back to listen to the music—Vincent Lopez's recording of "Peckin'," the Cotton Club's jungle tune.

Roosevelt Aims To Ask Revision Of FHA Shortly

Special Message in Two Weeks Will Seek Spur to Building.

in the form of a demonstration of what can be done through national mortgage associations as a medium for financing large-scale housing projects, as visualized by the President and the committee which has been advising him under direction of Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

National mortgage associations are authorized by the existing law as part of a mortgage discount bank system. But none has been organized during the three years of the law. Now it is proposed to give these associations authority to make direct loans on insured mortgages to limited dividend corporations and other regulated borrowers for construction of large scale housing projects.

Under the present law any group of five or more persons may form a national mortgage association by subscribing to $2,000,000 of capital stock in such a corporation. This corporation may then buy and sell insured first mortgages and obtain additional funds by selling debentures to 12 times the amount of its capital.

It is not proposed to change the minimum capitalization for such associations, but it is planned to expand their authority to get additional funds by permitting them to sell debentures equivalent to 20 times their capital and also to permit them to make direct loans.

Would Go Ahead With RFC.

Thus such an association with a subscribed capital of $20,000,000 could, by issuing debentures secured by federally insured mortgages, channel up to $400,000,000 of private funds into housing construction. If private investors hold back and fail to subscribe the necessary capital, this could be done by the RFC. The debentures, however, would be sold to the investing public. In this way the Administration hopes, if it becomes necessary, to launch a $400,000,000 private housing program by putting up only $20,000,000 of Government funds.

Under the RFC act that agency may invest up to $100,000,000 in the stock or debentures of national mortgage associations. RFC Chairman Jesse H. Jones now is ready to buy preferred stock in such associations in an amount equal to the capital stock subscribed by private investors, as he offered without any takers in 1935.

The Administration would prefer private enterprise to take the initiative in establishing national mortgage associations when the law is amended, with the RFC giving help through purchase of preferred stock. But if private investors hold back, the President is said to be determined to go ahead with RFC funds.

In order to increase security of debentures which the national mortgage associations will sell to the investing public, making them ironclad investments, it is proposed to make other changes in the law. One would strike out the time limitation now imposed on the Treasury's guarantee of the principal and interest on the three-year debentures which the FHA issues in event of a default on the mortgage. At the present time this Treasury guarantee applies only on mortgages insured prior to July 1, 1939.

Insurance Essential.

The presence of that time limitation in the law is said to have been one of the factors discouraging formation of national mortgage associations. Still another amendment to the existing law is one which would expand Federal insurance to cover multifamily projects costing in the neighborhood of $200,000, notably the "walk-up" type of apartment house. On an insured basis, such projects could easily be financed, it is contended, by banks, insurance companies and other private financial agencies now existing.

It also is proposed, for benefit of the small home buyer, to modify slightly the insurance premium, prescribed by the present law at one-half of 1 per cent of the face value of the mortgage for the entire life of the loan. This charge probably will be changed to apply only to the unpaid part of the mortgage. Another proposal is to raise the maximum insurance from 80 to 90 per cent of the value of the property on dwellings costing $5,000 or less, constructed in accordance with rigid requirements designed to prevent inflated costs. This would open the way for purchase of low-cost homes with a 10 per cent down payment, the remainder to be amortized over 20 years.

The emphasis in the President's program, however, will be on encouraging large-scale housing projects for rental purposes. He and his advisers have in mind projects of the type of the Colonial Village, Buckingham, Falkland and Brentwood developments in and near Washington. These four projects, undertaken by limited dividend corporations, with the FHA insuring the mortgages, are regarded as four of the best practical demonstrations of what can be done by private capital under this plan in the entire country. They represent a capital outlay of $11,298,000 and provide homes for 2,433 families.

Would Sell Debentures.

The program which Mr. Roosevelt will propose in general is visualized in Administration circles like this:

The one or more national mortgage associations which will be organized would be under supervision of the FHA administrator. They would issue debentures in face amounts from $100 upward, bearing an interest rate of approximately 3¾ or 4 per cent. Such debentures would be secured by mortgage loans insured by the FHA, with the Treasury standing behind the insurance fund to prevent any loss.

It is believed these debentures would prove an attractive investment for savings of individuals as well as banks, trust funds and insurance companies. They would be virtually as safe as a Government bond, with a higher yield, it is contended.

The proceeds from the sale of such debentures, under the Presidents program, will be loaned to limited dividend housing corporations or other agencies regulated by the FHA administrator. The latter examines and approves the financial set-up of such agencies before they may do any business. The costs and construction plans for proposed projects must be approved by the FHA, before the mortgage is insured. The FHA also supervises the construction, prescribes standards for operation of the project, requires the setting up of reserves and fixes maximum rentals.

The problem of cost under the program is approached through encouraging large scale operations. Under the plan money would be provided by the mortgage associations for such projects at 4½ per cent interest or thereabouts. Thus a savings would be effected in financing which would carry through 20 years and become a substantial item in fixing rentals.

By organizing themselves for large-scale operations, contractors would be in a position to bargain more effectively for materials and would enjoy, at the least, a wholesale or carload price, instead of buying in small quantities from a retailer's stock. It is estimated that a saving of from 10 to 20 per cent can be effected in that quarter.

Wage Rate Studied.

Whether a lower hourly wage rate for labor in exchange for sustained employment and a higher annual income can be worked out remains a matter for future negotiations. But it is argued that labor savings can be effected through large scale operation, since workers constantly employed on the same type of construction would spend less time in studying blueprints, while the prospect of sustained employment would be an attraction making it possible to get more skilled and efficient workers.

Meanwhile, the Administration pressed forward with its public housing program which is being financed out of the Treasury. Administrator Nathan Straus conferred with representatives of municipal housing authorities regarding formulation of basic policies to govern the $500,000,000 three-year undertaking. Stung apparently by Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's contention that he should cease "star-gazing," Straus indicated some of the funds may be available before January 1, if municipalities are ready to put up their 10 per cent share of the cost of proposed projects.

LaGuardia criticized Straus after the latter refused said consideration of applictaions would start January 1. LaGuardia refused to let representatives of New York attend yesterday's conference. For that reason Charles Abram resigned as general counsel of the New York City Housing Authority in a letter flaying LaGuardia.

He accused LaGuardia of seeking to destroy the independence and freedom of the New York Housing Authority, asserting the mayor's action set a precedent for throwing "the housing administration into the caldron of politics where favoritism, impartial selection of tenants and free choice of sites will depend on the honesty or dishonesty of the then current city administration."

Chairman Ellison D. Smith named a four-man committee (Senators Ellender, Louisiana; McGill, Kansas; Bankhead, Alabama, and Bilbo, Mississippi), to draft a report on the complex Senate bill. Only six printed copies of the completed measure were available last night, and these were circulated among 18 members of the committee, still confused as to some of the details.

The bill continues the $500,000,000 soil conservation program and benefits, and authorizes the Agriculture Secretary to invoke in emergency an ever-normal granary program for wheat and corn. Detailed control programs are prescribed for cotton, tobacco, rice, wheat and corn, with a two-thirds referendum vote by farmers required before quotas can be enforced to meet any surplus proclaimed.

Compulsory Cotton Quota.

Designed to cope with the record cotton crop, the drastic program for this staple would make acreage allotments compulsory, if fewer than one-third of the farmers oppose them on referendum. The bill was amended to begin referenda the first year, instead of the second.

A confiscatory penalty of 75 per cent of the purchase price of cotton would be exacted from any person knowingly purchasing or selling cotton grown on acreage exceeding quotas. A minimum quota of five acres per family would be set up for cotton farmers. Ninety-five per cent of the remaining acreage would be apportioned among cotton farmers on a basis of tilled acreage, and 5 per cent would be used for subsequent adjustments.

In the proposed corn and wheat program the Secretary of Agriculture would be authorized to proclaim a surplus if supplies exceeded normal by 10 per cent, 30 days prior to opening of the marketing year. National marketing quotas would be proclaimed later for both commodities, on the basis of soil depleting basic acreage for each farm, but these would be enforced only if two-thirds of the farmers approved. The program would be supplemented by voluntary acreage contracts and provision for parity payments and surplus loans on each commodity. Compulsory compliance would be provided by a penalty of 50 per cent of the parity price for exceeding marketing quotas.

50 Per Cent Tobacco Penalty.

The tobacco program likewise provides for compulsory marketing quotas, after a referendum, with a penalty of 50 per cent of the market price for exceeding allotments. Benefits would be paid to farmers for diversion of land to soil building crops.

As a concession to small tobacco farmers, a minimum tobacco allotment of 2,400 pounds would be allocated to every tobacco farm, when quotas were imposed.

The tobacco and rice sections of the bill were written by Senator Ellender. He proposed a rice program covered through quotas on the basis of domestic consumption and benefit payments of ¾ cent per pound on rough rice in 1937 and ½ cent after that date. Once rice marketing quotas were imposed for rice, a penalty of "five-tenths of 1 cent per pound" would be exacted from anyone knowingly buying excess-quota rice.

A significant amendment, designed to persuade all farmers to grow adequate table crops for their own use, was included on motion of Ellender, who declared he was "unwilling for the Government to help any farmers who are unwilling to help themselves."

Amendment Denies Benefit.

The amendment denies benefit payments to farmers producing any of the five major commodities, unless, "where crop land area permits," the farmer cultivates "sufficient acreage of food and feed crops to meet home consumption requirements."

Meanwhile, the House Agriculture Committee was gradually tightening a farm bill that originally provided for largely voluntary programs, but has recently introduced a form of compulsion somewhat milder than in the Senate measure.

A penalty tax of 2 cents a pound on cotton produced by farmers who failed to abide by acreage allotments was voted last night by the House group, which previously had favored a voluntary program on cotton. The 2-cents a pound penalty compares with 75 per cent of the purchase price, provided in the Senate bill.

Rice, Corn Phases Incomplete.

The House Committee previously had approved marketing quotas on wheat, with penalties on excess marketing, but rice and corn provisions of the House bill were still incomplete.

The House measure now provides for continuance of wheat benefits on the basis of the present soil conservation act, but Jones said the committee yesterday discussed additional wheat benefit payments up to 15 cents a bushel to farmers who comply.

The House bill, like the Senate measure, still provides no processing taxes or other means of financing the farm program, but there was said still to be a possibility that the House group will elect to impose taxes to finance additional benefits. If it finally shelves revenue features, the Ways and Means Committee must take over the job of finding money to pay for the program.

Wire-Tap Inquiry Sought in House

A House investigation of reports of telephone wire tapping in the Interior Department was demanded yesterday in a resolution introduced by Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York.

The resolution cited newspaper reports that Secretary Ickes' line had been tapped and his conversations recorded by another executive in the department. A committee of two majority members and one minority member of the House was proposed to make the inquiry.

On Capitol Hill

VICE PRESIDENT GARNER wouldn't admit to being 69 yesterday until he was shown a copy of the "Biographical Dictionary" of Congress giving his birth date as November 22, 1868. He thought it was his sixty-eighth birthday until shown otherwise.

"By golly," he said, "I can't keep up with those things. Don't I have enough on my hands as it is?"

The Vice President's greeting on his anniversary was:

"I hope to be here when I'm 70—that's all."

Garner is in excellent health. A few days ago both he and President Roosevelt were suffering from toothache. The Vice President had two molars extracted. Afterward he went into the Democratic cloakroom of the Senate and complained, "The right side of my head feels as if it is asleep."

He chuckles when he tells you: "At least five of my Democratic brethren yelled, 'When did the left side wake up?'"

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, started the parade of birthday greetings shortly after the Senate met at noon. Garner quickly summoned Senator Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, to take over and fled to a cloakroom as Byrnes announced that the Vice President was "68 years young." Senator McNary, of Oregon, the Republican leader, joined the tribute.

OTHER SENATE felicitations centered about Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, who became a grandfather for the second time. He was notified from Florence, S. C., that a boy had been born to Mrs. Laura Douglas Smith, well known here, wife of Farley Smith, the Senator's youngest son.

The baby was named Ellison Durant Smith 3d.

RETRENCHMENT OF expenditures is needed to revitalize business, industry and employment, Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, said yesterday. INVESTIGATION BY the Civil Liberties Committee of what he termed "gangsterism in the Minneapolis labor movement" will be asked in a resolution Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, said he will introduce. A committee spokesman, however, said the committee does not have facilities for such an inquiry.

As Congress entered its second week but two proposals had received final approval. One of these was a resolution asking the Agriculture Department for information relative to sulfanilamide elixir, the other a resolution granting use of Capitol pictures for an art exhibit.

APPOINTMENT OF 12 additional Federal district judges was proposed by Representative Walter (Democrat), Pennsylvania.

The judges would sit in existing circuits, deemed by Walter to have dockets too heavy for a single judge. The measure called for the addition of one judge in districts including southern Texas, eastern Michigan, northern Ohio, western Washington, southern California and Kansas and three in the District of Columbia.

* * * *

REPRESENTATIVE SCOTT (Democrat), of California, proposed that the House investigate the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

He introduced a resolution calling on Speaker Bankhead to name a seven-man committee, to investigate particularly charges by George Acret, former trial examiner chief, that the commission is poorly administered and its work handicapped by political influence.

* * * *

REPRESENTATIVE SNELL, of New York, the Republican leader, told the House he was "very much disturbed" by an Agriculture Department report that imports of farm products last year exceeded exports for the first time in history.

Representative Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, majority leader, retorted that the report showed the American people had more buying power than ever.

SENATOR CONNALLY (Democrat), Texas, complained smilingly Northerners are too prone to accuse Southerners of filibustering.

"When a Northern Senator speaks on a bill, that's statesmanship," Connally said. "But when a Southern Senator speaks on a bill, that's a filibuster"

Duke Works Hard On Pitt Plays

Durham, N. C., Nov. 22 (AP).—Duke's Blue Devils opened drills for Saturday's Pitt game with a long workout this afternoon.

The boys reported in good shape and spent most of the practice session in working against Pitt plays.

There was also a long drill on puting by Eric Tipton, Elmore Hackney and George McAfee.

The third team ran Pitt's tricky and powerful reverses and double reverses against the Blue Devils in dummy scrimmage and this program—defense against Pitt plays and work on punting—will probably be followed throughout the week.

all signed the petition and are still "for" the bill.

Representative William B. Barry, (Democrat), New York, a member of the steering committee, announced yesterday that at a committee session today he will insist that all members of Congress from industrial centers pledge themselves to oppose any farm legislation unless the wages-hours bill is brought to the House floor for a vote first.

He said:

"The tactics of the Southern Democrats in tying up the Rules Committee and opposing a piece of legislation that was part of the Democratic platform are indefensible.

"In view of the lack of reciprocity shown by a substantial number of members from agricultural areas who consistently oppose legislation designed to benefit city and industrial districts, it is time to make them realize they must be willing to give as well as take."

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, House majority leader, said he was prepared to sign the petition at noon today unless word came from the Rules Committee that it had decided to discharge the measure.

Rayburn, who has never signed such a petition before in his many years of membership, will be accompanied by Representative Patrick J. Boland, of Pennsylvania, party whip, who will also sign. Speaker William B. Bankhead previously has indicated his willingness to sign "if it becomes necessary."

The Rules Committee's chairman, Representative John O'Connor, of New York, will "make an announcement of importance" at 11:30 a. m. today. The subject of his announcement, a matter of speculation for several days, is expected to be a final admission that the bill is hopelessly locked up in the committee, unless, through a startling reversal by the five Southern Democrats and four Republicans who now oppose the bill, a rule should be granted it.

The letters yesterday from Green and Secretary Perkins followed one last week from John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, in which the C. I. O. chieftain, while expressing some dissatisfaction with the bill, urged enactment of the principle of wages-hours legislation.

Green's letter yesterday was acidly phrased in its references to the National Labor Relations Board. He said, in part:

"It is now apparent that such administration by the NLRB has repudiated generally accepted concepts and disrupted tried and tested principles of collective bargaining between capital and labor.

"It has impaired and destroyed rights of contract and property . . . has brought turmoil into industrial relations, has usurped the prerogatives of the courts essential to the preservation of our democratic form of Government and has jeopardized industrial freedom and initiative."

Angle Parking On K St. Upheld By Mrs. Roper

Wife of Commerce Secretary Declares Traffic Rule Hurts Farmers.

Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, said last night she would appear before the Board of Commissioners this morning to "fight for perpendicular parking near the K Street Market."

Denying that she had accepted the Commissioners invitation to air a grievance against a Third Precinct policeman who she said had "acted discourteously" after ticketing her automobile last Saturday, Mrs. Roper announced that "the farmers selling their produce at the market have been greatly handicapped" by the recent police order prohibiting angular parking near the market.

Previously the farmer and customer to the market were permitted to park perpendicular to the curbstone. The farmer could back into the space, open the back doors of his truck, and sell his wares directly from the vehicle, Mrs. Roper said.

"Now, the poor farmer, must park his truck parallel to the curb, and since this type of parking will take up more room, fewer people will have accomodations," she said.

The Secretary's wife had lodged a complaint with the ommissioners last Saturday, when, after receiving a ticket for parking her car improperly, went into the Third Precinct and, according to Mrs. Roper, received "discourteous treatment."

"I do not want to be responsible for anyone losing his position," Mrs. Roper said, "I merely want to fight for the farmer and customer who frequent the market."

Capt. Arthur E. Miller, third precinct, and M. O. Eldridge, assistant traffic director, informed Commissionar Hazen yesterday that the police were merely enforcing a city-wide regulation.

Recently traffic accidents in the vicinity of the market have been increasing, police said, due in a large measure, to the "cluttered street" there.

U. S. Court Denies Tomlinson Appeal

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday affirmed conviction of John Williamson Tomlinson, criminal attorney and erstwhile counsel for Gaston B. Means, who was found guilty of robbery in District Court several months ago.

The Appellate Court, in an opinion by Associate Justice Justin Miller, held that Tomlinson's contention his indictment was defective in that it contained "misjoinder of offenses and that it charged no offense against appellants" was not well taken.

Tomlinson is alleged to have acted as the man who "spotted" a job in which two colored men, wildly swinging blackjacks, beat Sam Siratonis, upper Fourteenth street tailor, and robbed him of $785. Tomlinson admittedly did not participate in the actual robbery, but was sentenced to serve from three to ten years.

Morgenthau Avoids Gold Release Talk

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., today avoided discussion of the possibility of additional release of gold from reserves cached in the gold sterilization fund. Last September the Treasury announced release of $300,000,000 of sterilized gold.

The step was then taken to avert a credit stingency in the money market. At today's press conference the Secretary was asked point blank if the Treasury contemplated such a step at present. "I don't care to answer that question," he said.

Morgenthau said that no new exports of gold were scheduled to follow the $25,000,000 shipped to France and Great Britain in the last fortnight.

Service Pay Hike Sought.

An increase in pay of $9 a month for every enlisted man in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Peterson (Democrat), of Florida. The increase would raise the wages of privates to $30 or more.

Girl, 7, Flees Shanghai War, Makes 11,000-Mile Trip Alone

Daughter of Navy Man Arrives in New York With Stirring Stories of Sleepless Nights in French School.

New York, Nov. 22.—Ending an 11,000-mile ocean voyage from the Orient, a little dark-haired girl of 7 years—who, in her own words, left Shanghai "because of the noise and the war"—arrived here today unaccompanied on the S. S. Pennsylvania.

She is Irene Mary Malo, daughter of Henry Victor Malo, a commissary steward with the U. S. Asiatic fleet.

Since the death of her mother last year in China, Irene Mary had lived at St. Joseph's Catholic School, on the borders of Shanghai's French Concession.

There life moved placidly until last summer, when Shanghai skies were filled with droning Japanese warplanes, and crashing bombs broke into the school routine.

In a French accent, Irene Mary recalled that the school children "used to squash together next to Sister like orange juice" when the roar of an airplane motor sounded overhead. Many nights, she said, they all slept together on the stone of the school's ground floor rather than in their dormitories of the upper floors, for fear of air raids.

When the bombing grew heaviest, the nuns would run up the French flag over the school, Irene Mary said, and the building escaped damage. She admitted partiality for the Chinese, and predicted they would "throw the Japanese back into Japan."

The child's father decided six weeks ago she would be safer in the United States. Her uncle, Christopher Malo, met her as she disembarked. He will take her to the Leominster, Mass., home of her grandmother.

West Coast Asks Ships' Exemption From Canal Tolls

By the Associated Press.

Legislation exempting American vessels from payment of Panama Canal tolls was proposed yesterday as the first move in a West Coast effort to balk shipping company plans to transfer their craft from intercoastal to South American trade.

Meanwhile, three members of the House Merchant Marine committee arranged a conference today with Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the Maritime Commission.

Senator W. G. McAdoo (Democrat), California, introduced the bill to exempt American vessels engaged in the intercoastal trade from canal tolls.

He said there was "not a word" in the Panama Canal treaty with England which would justify "the contention that the ships of England or any other nation have any interest whatever in tolls put upon our vessels engaged wholly in the intercoastal trade."

"President Taft took the same position I take," he added. "But President Wilson thought the treaty committed us to charge the same tolls on our vessels as those of other nations."

Joseph Solomon Funeral Is Today

Joseph Solomon, 28, of 311 Farragut street northwest, died yesterday at George Washington University Hospital. Death came after a four-month illness with a heart ailment.

Mr. Solomon, a native of Washington, was employed for 14 years at Hahn's Shoe Store, starting as a stock-room boy and later becoming a clerk. He resigned two years ago to operate a restaurant in the 1300 block of H street northeast.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Jeanette Solomon; a son, Abraham Solomon; his parents, Benjamin and Molly Solomon, and two sisters, Mrs. David M. Tash and Miss Marian Solomon. All live in Washington.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Danzansky's chapel, 3501 Fourteenth street northwest.

Schramm to Address Crime Groups Today

Judge Gustav Schramm, of Pittsburgh Juvenile Court, will be principal speaker today at a joint luncheon meeting of the Institute of Criminal Science and the Washington Criminal Justice Association at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K street northwest.

Judge Schramm will also address the weekly Crime Clinic meeting tonight at Wardman Park Theater under auspices of the Criminal Science Institute, on "The Juvenile Court."

Firemen Rescue Boy, 5, With Arm Stuck in Wringer

Members of the fire rescue squad removed his arm. The arm was not badly injured and Donald returned to his play after first aid was administered to bruises. Donald's mother is Mrs. James J. Arnold, 604 Third street northwest.

Kennedy May Seek U. S.-Power Truce

By the Associated Press.

Insiders talked yesterday of the possibility that Joseph P. Kennedy might eventually be assigned the task of negotiating peace between the Roosevelt Administration and the power industry.

The Administration is casting about for means to stimulate business, while the utility industry virtually offers to go ahead with a mammoth construction program if what it terms governmental "restrictions" are lifted.

Observers pointed out that if Mr. Roosevelt decided to pick a "liaison" man to smooth out difficulties and try to get the building program going, Kennedy might be the choice because of his close contacts with the Administration and business.

Adventists Hold Teacher Institute

An institute for teachers of the Potomac Conference of Seventh-Day Adventists is being held at Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park. The first meeting was Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. C. P. Sorenson, educational chairman, assisted by Miss Lorene Wilcox, principal of the teacher training school of the college; Mrs. Ethel Knight Casey, of the music department, and Miss Bess Ninaj, also of the college faculty. Miss Katheryn Jensen, a secretary from the general conference medical department, and Miss Nina Fleetwood, medical secretary of the local conference; Prof. John P. Neff, and Prof. Chris P. Sorenson, from the Columbia Union Conference, and Harry House, of Indiana, Pa., will be among the speakers.

Last night Dr. Fritz Martil, head of the department of philosophy and professor of art at the University of Maryland, lectured.

House G. O. P. Caucus Today On Profits Tax

First Party Meeting This Session to Insist on Repeal.

House Republicans yesterday were summoned to meet today in the first House party conference of the special session in a move to place them on record in favor of immediate repeal of the undivided profits tax.

Minority members were called to meet immediately after the House adjourns today. The announcement was made by Representative Roy O. Woodruff, of Michigan, Republican conference chairman, on request of Representative Harold Knutson, of Minnesota, a Republican member of the House Ways and Means Committee.

The Republican bid for immediate relief from business taxes followed refusal of Democratic leaders in House and Senate to make way for tax revision until foundation studies have been laid by the House Ways and Means Committee.

A sub-committee now at work on modification of both the undivided profits tax and the capital gains levy does not plan to complete its tax revision draft until the January session.

Seeking immediate action, a strong bi-partisan bloc is forming in the Senate to attempt undivided profits tax modification as a "rider" on a minor revenue bill that has passed the House and is now on the Senate calendar.

Other tax developments yesterday were:

Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), Ohio, proposed a revenue bill rider to exempt earnings of $50,000 a year from the undivided profits tax and also exempt from the tax half the cost of corporate plant replacements and improvements. Corporations would be given choice of claiming the $50,000 exemption or carrying forward losses for a two-year period for tax purposes.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, told reporters at Kansas City, the Associated Press said, that the undivided profits tax could be revised "very easily at the special session of Congress, but the Administration wants it at the regular session along with the general tax program, so I don't expect anything to be done at the special session." Wheeler predicted an Administration "turn to the right."

Meantime, both Democratic and Republican Senators interested in special session tax revision were sounding out sentiment yesterday for a group conference to discuss Senate strategy to obtain immediate modification or repeal.

The amendment offered yesterday by Senator Bulkley was the third proposal in the Senate to take the legislative "rider" route to immediate profits ta modification or repeal. Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, first proposed a rider on a House bill repealing certain publicity features of the revenue law. Adams asked modification only, but later Senator Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, proposed a repeal rider on the same bill.

A preponderant majority of the Senate already has favored downward revision of the tax in comment to the press and a representative cross-section has asked modification or repeal this session.

Representative Knutson, at whose initial request today's Republican House tax conference was called, reiterated last night that the undivided profits tax "ought to be repealed, and repealed right now." Predicting that the conference will take the same view, he proposed that it go a step further and propose "retroactive repeal" and Government refund of taxes already collected under the law.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Popular Opera Association presents Rossini's "Il Barbiere di Siviglia" in Constitution Hall Monday night, under direction of Fulgenzio Guerrieri. The cast:

Figaro ..... Angelo Pilotto
Almaviva ..... Rolf Gerard
Rosina ..... Margarita Salvi
Bartolo ..... Pompilio Malatesta
Basilio ..... Lloyd Harris
Bertha ..... Clelia Fioravanti

One of the most personable and charming Rosinas gracing the stage today appeared last evening in the Washington Popular Opera Association's production of Rossini's "Barber of Seville" in Constitution Hall. Margarita Salvi has pulchritude and grace as well as a voice agile in fioritura, and her impersonation of Dr. Bartolo's ward quite captivated the audience. Her presence in the cast, together with the excellent Figaro of Angelo Pilotto, made the performance thoroughly enjoyable and enhanced the prestige of the local organization.

Miss Salvi's voice, while pliant and clear, is not of uniform quality throughout its range, at least not as she used it on this occasion. That she has fine breath control was demonstrated in her admirable sustention of tone with a perfect crescendo and diminuendo, but oddly enough this control was not exercised save on high notes. Her singing was frequently marked by clipped notes at the end of phrases and by lack of volume where one would have expected it, and this resulted at times in the impression of a breathless haste.

Angelo Pilotto was a vivacious and convincing Figaro, resourceful in his incessant tricks of comedy. He sang the part with gusto, and was in better voice than when he appeared here last month in "Rigoletto." The tone was richer and more confident, and its placement more certain.

Rolf Gerard had the right romantic semblance as Count Almaviva, and sang his part agreeably without reaching distinction. His lyric voice is too light in timbre to carry well in the concerted numbers, and he held it too much in reserve when he had the opportunity to display its essentially dulcet quality.

The role of Dr. Bartolo was in the capable hands of Pompilio Malatesta, a seasoned buffo, whose expertise in acting more than counterbalanced the deficiencies of his voice. Lloyd Harris took the part of Don Basilio, with the burlesque unction demanded. Clelia Fioravanti essayed the ungrateful role of Bertha and met its requirements capably.

8 Va. Farmers Boycott C. I. O. Union Products

Lovettsville Club Members Attack U. A. W. in Letter to Homer Martin.

Eight embattled members of the Lovettsville, Va., Farmers Club yesterday declared a boycott against products made with United Automobile Workers' labor. The action followed a letter in which Homer Martin, U. A. W. chief, recently advised industrial workers to cut down consumption of meat as a protest against rising prices.

In their letter to Martin, the Lovettsville farmers point out that they are all "actively engaged in the production of meat-animals" and that "farmers, nearly to a man, use automobiles and trucks."

"You know, as we know," reads the letter to Martin, "that up to 90 per cent of the spread between the price the farmer receives and the price the consumer pays is labor cost; and you know, as we know, that your parent—the C. I. O.—has endeavored to organize all processing and distributing channels. Are we to believe, Mr. Martin, that you desire the wages of that labor to be reduced?"

"Who forced the price of automobiles up $100 this year?" demands the manifesto. "Does it cost you $100 more to eat this year?"

"Would you like, Mr. Martin, to compare farm income with labor income in your industry? Do you know what a farmer's hours of labor are, Mr. Martin?"

Informed of the Lovettsville letter, Donald Henderson, official of the United Cannery and Agricultural workers, affiliated with the C. I. O., said he was certain Martin's statement was directed against processors and middlemen rather than the farmers themselves.

"There must be co-operation between labor and farmers," Henderson stated, "so that the shoe pinches packers and distributors instead of farmers and laborers. To achieve this union is one of the chief purposes of the C. I. O."

W. H. Frazier, president of the farmers club, said last night no plans had yet been made for extending the campaign beyond Loudoun County, Va.

Train Kills Carpenter Fixing Railroad Bridge

Walter M. Lowry, 59, of Brook, Va., a Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad carpenter, was killed instantly last night when struck by a train while he was at work on the railroad bridge at Woodbridge, in Fairfax County.

His body was hurled 300 feet by the impact. Lowry, an employe of the road for 30 years, was working alone on the bridge and failed to notice the train's approach. He leaves a son, Walter, jr., of Fredericksburg.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Mirror meditations of a Congressman about his own presidential prospects, silently, while shaving: Lucky the voters like 'em tall . . . You big, handsome six-footer . . . All right then, 5 feet 10½, you big bluff . . . What's an inch and a half?

• • • •

Anyhow, I've got the edge on the women's vote . . . Ought to try to get into a few news reels . . . How did that guy LaGuardia ever make it? . . . Looks like a troll . . . Not many men my age have such a fine, handsome set of teeth . . . Wonder if the President's wisdom teeth are backfiring on him?

• • • •

Queer how both labor and capital fall for me . . . Smart idea, holding on to my union card the summer I drove the ice cream truck . . . And belonging to the best country club in town that way the big shots know I'm sound.

"—day dream while shaving."

Lucky the wife belongs to a good sorority, too . . . Must be thousands of Kappas in the country, and all of 'em big women . . . She's gotta keep quiet about being a Junior Leaguer, though.

• • • •

Doggone, Harding was the only member of Congress ever elected President since 1900 . . . Maybe I'd better run for Governor rather than Senator next time . . . Must get hold of some of the important newspapermen and take 'em to lunch.

• • • •

Everybody knows I'm one of the few men in the House who really counts . . . Sorta in the inner circle . . . And Ham Fish slapped me on the back yesterday . . . And the way that orchestra leader knows my favorite song is "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby."

Wonder who you have to see to get on the air on a big Nation-wide hookup . . . Maybe I could make a hot speech on the Chinese situation . . . That's safe enough in my district . . . But better read a book about it first.

• • • •

Might put me in the national limelight by 1940 . . . Wonder if the President will take a stab at a third term . . . That would gum things up . . . Two terms is plenty . . . Ought to limit 'em to one term and pass the job around . . . Doesn't he realize Grant was the only Republican who ever served two full terms? Teddy hated to let go, too.

• • • •

Maybe I'd better get a new suit . . . Wonder who's Jimmy Wadsworth's tailor? . . . Mustn't dress too slick, though . . . The tourists would go home and tell the boys I'm going high hat . . . Not a bad idea, my writing that weekly column free for the papers in my district . . . The Blade's Washington man said it was better than Lippman.

"—Teddy also hated to let go"

• • • •

Gotta watch those circles around my eyes, though . . . Why couldn't I make a phonograph record and send it home for a broadcast once a week? . . . I could start it out "I saw the President last week . . . He feels . . ."

• • • •

It's sure hell when the drinking and the non-drinking constituents show up at the same time and you don't know whether to entertain 'em with highballs or lemonade . . . Lucky that the highball crowd does the most traveling.

• • • •

Maybe I could develop a deep voice something like the President's but with a bit of Western drawl in it too . . . Those Roosevelts certainly have the touch . . . Each one has a special kind of grin. It's about time I got an invitation to the White House.

• • • •

What makes the hair sprout in my ears that way? . . . Everybody says I look a lot like Cleveland and a little bit like Woodrow Wilson . . . Sure would be great to invite Oley and Elmer and Bertha to visit at the White House . . . I'd be just as chummy and common with 'em as an old shoe, but with a touch of dignity, 'counta the responsibilities on my shoulders . . . O.K., OK., be right down as soon as I get the soap off my neck . . . Smell that bacon.

Chest Drive Ending Today Faces Deficit

Workers Double Efforts to Raise $2,000,000 for Charity.

The possibility of a $225,000 shortage in the Community Chest funds for 1938 appeared last night as workers entered the last 24 hours of the cmapaign to raise $2,059,000.

With only $1,623,000 reported at yesterday's meting, Herbert Willett, Chest director, predicted last night that normal returns could not bring the total higher than $1,825,000 when the drive ends at 6:15 p. m. today.

Emphasizing the deficit in terms of human suffering, Willett expressed hope that general knowledge of the situation would prompt a flood of contributions.

Only such an influx of donations, he said, "can save the Chest from doing a 90 per cent job this year. And that means 90 per cent results," he added.

"It is up to Washington to show whether it wants to do a decent job. I think possibly people have been a little complacent because no agencies have been closed during the past year. It should be realized, however, that shortage of funds has forced many agencies to turn away needy people."

Facing this critical situation 9,000 Chest wrokers redoubled efforts. Volunteers left for their tasks after the general meeting at the Willard where Arthur Hellen, Chest official, and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson testified to the importance of their endeavors.

"The average person," declared Gen. Johnson, "does not know where the greatest needs lie. The Chest is the best way to gather donations and to have them go where they are most needed."

The speaker referred to a statement by Gerald Swope, president of the General Electric Co., that analysis of gifts throughout the country shows that the givers in the higher brackets and in the lower one are doing their share. The lag comes in the great middle classes, Gen. Johnson explained, "because the wealthy people recognize their obligations and give accordingly and the poorer people are close enough to those in need to know personally of the suffering that exists and to give out of sympathy."

Contributions of $220,865.88 from 24,842 givers were announced. This brings the number of contributors to date to 139,414.

Individual and group contributoins announced yesterday include: $5,400, Peoples Drug Stores, Inc.; $4,000, Theodore W. Noyes; $3,500, Mr. and Mrs. L. Currin Strong; $3,300, Mrs. John C. Head of P.U.C. Defends Fare Rise to Citizens

Only One City Size of D.C. Has Lower Ride Cost, Mid-City Group Told.

Defending the increased street car fare before the Mid-City Citizens Association last night, Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, declared that at no time in his experience have so few petitions regarding service been placed on file. He declared that only one city of comparable size—Rochester, N. Y.—had lower fares than Washington.

Elgen explained that no citizens' organization had filed formal complaints with the commission demanding a rehearing.

At the same time, two other citizens' associations, the Georgetown and North Capitol groups, asked that the token rate be changed from six for 50 cents to three for 25 cents. In addition, the North Capitol Association demanded a rehearing of the case before the P. U. C. The Georgetown association approved the increase.

After Elgen's talk, the Mid-City association voted to ask that the P. U. C. be granted a $104,000 appropriation for the next fiscal year.

The association also voted to oppose any increase in the 1939 District budget over $45,000,000.

The group voted to request the A. B. C. Board to deny a position for a liquor license in the 900 block of Twelfth street northwest and indorsed a movement by the American Automobile Association to provide instruction in safe driving in senior high schools.

The Georgetown association urged the repeal of the business privilege tax and refused to indorse a Senate bill which would set up a District election board to control election of delegates to national political conventions.

The North Capitol citizens also adopted a resolution requesting the city department to furnish refuse receptacles near public schools and raised an objection to the furloughing of refuse department employes.

E. B. Lawless was elected president of the association. Other officers are Ada Mills Payne, first vice president; Guy W. Numbers, second vice president; James A. Crooks, secretary-treasurer; Charles J. McMurray, financial secretary. Crooks and William R. Sheehan were named delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations. Elected to the executive committee were Henry K. Murphy, F. L. Bach, F. R. Steffens, Mrs. F. C. Ealing, B. F. Frazzell, John F. Hardie, Richard S. Grace, Luke a Cole.

D.C. Hotel Men Have Party for Head Greeters

The Nation's number one man and woman greeter, Mr. and Mrs. Crawford Noble, president of the Hotel Greeters of America and the Greeters' auxiliary, were greeted at a reception by the local Greeters' organization at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Declaring that "Americanism and Greeterism are synonymous," Noble warned members of recent competition presented by "trailers, auto camps and private homes."

"To keep the hotel on the standard where it belongs," he said, "we must extend hospitality in our own hotels and strive to better our position with planned educational programs for employes."

The reception followed separate meetings of the local Greeters chapter and auxiliary at 8:30. F. P. Orbello, secretary of the organization, submitting his resignation at the meeting, informed members that recent acceptance of the position of publicity director for a New York hotel would prevent his continuance with the local chapter.

J. J. Donley was appointed to succeed Orbello and W. L. Shoup was appointed assistant executive secretary of the local organization. Charles C. Curtiss was appointed to the office of sergeant at arms to succeed Donley. Mrs. W. C. Ruff presided over the auxiliary meeting in the absence of Mrs. J. M. Stewart.

More than 100 members attended the meeting as guests of Ralph Pollio, manager of the Mayflower Hotel and member of the Greeters.

The organization, which lists among its objectives the maintenance of a high standard of character in its personnel and the establishment of a fraternal feeling among its membership, has approximately 5,000 persons on its membership roll. Activities of the Greeters include the operation of a home for aged and ill members at Denver, Colo.

$17 Minimum Pay In Hotels Indicated

A wage scale of between $17 and $17.50 per week for more than 4,000 women employes in hotels and restaurants will be fixed shortly by the District Minimum Wage Board, it was indicated by officials yesterday.

The board's hearing for employer and employe groups will be called within a week. The previous weekly wage for this classification was $16.50. This figure was prevalent under the old minimum wage scale in operation more than 13 years ago.

Motorized Blimps to Replace 'Sausages' of World War Days

Army Finishes Successful Tests of New Observation Balloon Capable of Moving Cross-Country at 40 Miles Per Hour.

Motorized blimps, helium-filled and capable of moving cross-country under their own power, may soon replace "sausages" used by the Army for enemy observation and artillery fire direction in World War days.

Initial tests of such an observation balloon, the C-6, have just been completed at Fort Sill, Okla., after more than two months of experiment, the War Department announced yesterday.

The old war-time captive balloon, moored to a winch on a truck, could only be moved by "walking" it overland, where power lines, fences, trees and other obstacles made progress both slow and difficult, they pointed out.

The C-6 moves from one observation station to another under its own power. When it reaches the designated ascension site the blimp lands and its cable is attached to a truck-borne winch. Thereafter the C-6 performs the ordinary functions of a captive balloon, affording a stationary platform at a high elevation for direction of artillery fire.

Another important advance found in the experimental observation blimp, is its noninflammable helium lifting power, making it much less susceptible to attack or destruction by fire than the old hydrogen-filled captive balloon.

Powered by a 90-horsepower engine mounted in a detachable car, the C-6 is 107 feet long and has a diameter of 30 feet. The old sausage type captive balloon is 95 feet long and 27 feet in diameter.

The new blimp has a capacity of 52,000 cubic feet compared to the 37,500 cubic feet of the captive balloon it is expected to replace.

Tests at Fort Sill were conducted under direction of Maj. Ira R. Koenig, balloon squadron commander, assisted by Maj. W. C. Farnum, operations and engineering officer, and Staff Sergt. Joseph F. McMurray, operations clerk.

Preparations for the experiments were made by Master Sergt Joseph A. Bishop and Staff Sergt Harrison C. Finley.

Tuberculosis Body Plans to Extend Tests

Increased Facilities for Colored Hospital Set as One Goal.

Increased facilities for care of colored tubercular patients at Freedman's Hospital and extended examination of District high school students for tuberculosis are among objectives of the D. C. Tuberculosis Association for the coming year, Dr. James G. Townsend, president, indicated last night at an open meeting in the U. S. Public Health Service auditorium.

Beside checking tuberculosis among colored residents of the District, Dr. Townsend pointed out that extended facilities for tubercular tweatment at Freedman's would provide greater opportunity for training Howard University medical students.

Dr. Townsend, reviewing development in tuberculosis facilities in the District, announced that tuberculin and X-ray tests for senior high school students in the District would continue next year.

Another speaker, Dr. C. St. C. Guild, field secretary of the American Tuberculosis Association, stated that in Washington "Negroes constitute slightly over one-quarter of the city's population, yet they provide more than two-thirds of the deaths from tuberculosis."

"The Negro problem is the factor of major importance in producing your present high death rate. This group must receive special attention if your death rate is to be reduced and Washington is to assume the leadership in health which might reasonably be expected of the Nation's Capital City."

Dr. J. A. Myers, president of the National Association, explained, in an illustrated lecture, methods used by modern science in detecting and treating tuberculosis.

Dr. Myers told how tuberculosis among cattle in the United States has been almost entirely wiped out. "Tuberculosis, like other contagious diseases, can be cured by treatment. We can do the same things for human beings that we have done for cattle—but without slaughter."

Two new directors of the District Tuberculosis Association, named at last night's meeting, are Mrs. Thomas Parran and Harold N. Marsh. The following directors were re-elected: Senator Arthur Capper, Dr. S. L. Christian, Dr. Harry S. Bernton, Willard C. Smith and Dr. C. Willard Camalier. Mrs. Ernest R. Grant, managing director of the association, presided.

Old Fire Wagons, Trucks Replaced At $100,000 Cost

Eight pieces of new fire apparatus, costing nearly $100,000, will replace equipment more than 20 years old in Washington by the first of next year, Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom said last night. Five hose wagons already have been placed in service and three 100-foot ladder trucks will be operating by January 1.

The hose wagons—total cost $42,000—were assigned to Engine Companies 8, 10, 13, 17 and 21, retiring apparatus, Schrom said, was "practically useless." The ladder trucks will be the longest ever used here, he said, and will reach the top of any building in the District. They will cost $17,500 each.

Twenty-eight pieces of antiquated apparatus still are in service in Washington, Schrom said.

Modern Wife Able to Avoid 'Turkey Toil'

Holiday Menus Tasty as Ever but Discourage Overeating.

By Jean Green.

The Post Food Editor.

THE MODERN Thanksgiving is a far cry from the dining marathon of several years ago. Days, even weeks, were spent in tedious preparation of all sorts of elaborate and special dishes with the usual result of exhaustion for mother and varying stages of indigestion for the rest of the family.

JEAN GREEN.

This sort of Roman holiday is becoming a thing of the past. The housewife today need not and does not make a drudge of herself. By careful planning she can provide a holiday menu built around traditional dishes with far less effort. There are many short cuts. Certain dishes can be prepared several days in advance and kept in the refrigerator until time for serving. Others can be purchased in canned or prepared form and are in no way prepared from and are in no way inferior to the home-made variety. There are rich clear consommes, fruit cocktails, and cream soups to provide an appetizing first course. Canberry sauce can be purchased canned and the pumpkin and mincemeat filling for the traditional pies come ready to use.

Turkey Comes Frozen.

Even the turkey for the meal can be frozen. This is a new type of preservation that has revolutionized large scale marketing. The food is frozen quickly so that the flavor and taste remain unchanged. This type of turkey has its advantages for small families as the birds come prepared for cooking. They need only be thawed and stuffed.

When you plan your menus for the holidays, plan them sensibly. Don't plan too much but see that the food chosen is served attractively. Plan to balance the food stuffs so that the meal is not too heavy. A tart salad or very light dessert is welcome after such a meal.

Make out your market order at least three days in advance and buy carefully. If you are planning to have roast turkey or hen, then it is not too soon to make your selection. The birds on the market this year are much superior to those of other seasons. Today's farmer raises turkeys scientifically, controlling their feeding and limiting their exercise. This means that your turkey will be a tender fowl, thin skinned, with a nice layer of fat. An 8 to 10 pound turkey is best for the average family.

When you make your purchase, ask the dealer to draw the bird, that is, cut off the feet, leg tendons and neck, leaving the neck skin intact. Reserve the liver, gizzard and heart for the stuffing or giblet gravy.

The type of stuffing selected is very important. A great number of toothsome recipes have come to my attention this week. From them, I have selected an oyster stuffing. It is moist, crumbly and free from any suggestion of sogginess. The fresh oysters must be well drained before they are chopped.

Oyster Stuffing.

1 large onion
1 pint of oysters
¼ cup of oyster liquid
¾ teaspoon sage
½ teaspoon salt
3 cups of soft bread crumbs
1-3 cup of butter

Melt the butter in the skillet. Add the chopped onion, parsley and seasonings. Cook until browned. Add the chopped drained oysters. Add bread crumbs moistened with the oyster liquor.

In preparation of the turkey, singe and remove any remaining pin feathers with tweezers or a strawberry huller before washing. Rub with salt and pepper inside and out and stuff. Press the stuffing firmly into the fowl. The general rule is to allow ¾ cup of stuffing for each pound.

After the bird has been stuffed, tie the legs down firmly to the body and place in a roasting pan. Brush well with cooking oil. Dredge with flour and place in a hot oven to sear outside quickly. Lower heat to a moderate oven (300 degrees). Baste with water to which a small amount of butter, celery tops and half a teaspoon of Worcester sauce has been added. Cover and bake until tender. Here is the time table for roasting. The time for chicken, capon, duck and goose is also listed. The time depends on the size. Have bird weighed after cleaning.

Time Table.

Whole turkey; 300 degrees; 20 minutes per pound.

Half a turkey; 300 degrees; 35 minutes per pound.

Chicken; 350 degrees, 25 to 30 minutes per pound.

Capon; 475 degrees for 20 minutes; 300 degrees for rest of time; 25 minutes per pound.

Duck; 500 degrees for 15 minutes; 350 degrees for rest of time; 25 minutes per pound.

Goose; 500 degrees for 15 minutes; 350 degrees for rest of time; 20 minutes per pound.

Apples Should Be Kept Chilled, Not Bananas

"Store" your bananas in the fruit bowl, and not in the refrigerator! Buy them by the hand as you find them in the store—a golden cluster, green tipped or all yellow and allow them to ripen at room temperature. The only time to put bananas in the refrigerator is to chill just before serving.

You do store your apples—those sweet-smelling native grown fruits—right in the refrigerator; or at least keep apples in a cool place—they like it!

Grapefruit—thin-skinned heavy fruit from the sunny groves of Florida—like to be stored in a cold dry place—and then chilled to a "nicety" in the refrigerator before serving!

Thanksgiving Feast Possible In Kitchenette

'Co-operative' Plan Followed by Many Cooks With Tiny Kitchens.

THANKSGIVING in Washington will not be the traditional dinner for many of the bachelor boys and girls living in small apartments. In a tiny kitchenette it is impossible to prepare the roast turkey, ham, or chicken considered so necessary to this feast day.

In certain apartment buildings, many small families are planning "co-operatively." They are pooling their wealth and purchasing a chicken or turkey already roasted. In some cases the whole menu is planned together. Dishes are chosen that best suit the pocketbook and the cooking facilities available in the apartment. Two girls are preparing salad and dessert for another aartment, while in exchange they are receiving vegetables cooked and seasoned ready to serve. The system was used last year successfully and was much fun.

A seasonable dinner can be prepared in the small kitchenette in less than an hour. Even though there is only a hot plate and an ovenette, there will be no difficulty preparing this meal. Either canned chicken or mock chicken legs made from veal can be served.

Menu.

Cranberry cocktail
Baby limas
Hot rolls Butter Guava jelly
Celery Ripe olives Nuts
Fig pudding with wine sauce

Make out the market order two days before serving. Purchase the required number of chicken legs. The fig pudding is canned. The packaged rolls should be heated before serving. The cranberry cocktail should be made the day before the dinner.

CURRIED CHICKEN LEGS.

1 stick of butter
6 chicken legs
1 tablespoon of chopped onion
½ teaspoon of curry powder (depending on taste)
3 cups of chiken stock
1 teaspoon of salt
⅛ teaspoon of pepper

Cut the chicken legs at the joints into two pieces. Season and flour well. Melt the butter in a heavy frying pan. Add pieces of chicken and fry until golden brown. Turn as needed. Place in a flat bottomed pan.

Prepare the chiken stock by adding three consomme cubes to three cups of boiling water.

Pour two cups of the chicken stock over the chicken. Either bake in the oven for 20 minutes or on top of the stove in a heavy "chicken fryer." Add the chopped onion, celery and the curry powder. Cook for five minutes. Mix the flour with the remaining cup of chicken stock. Add and cook until thickened. Season with salt and pepper to taste.

Spiced Beverage.

Desserts are not the only dishes for which cinnamon is an ideal flavor. It is becoming increasingly popular in beverages, especially in hot drinks such as Ski-Bail (hot tea and spices), chocolate, and after-dinner coffee in all of which a tall stick of cinnamon serves as a muddler as well as an aromatic flavoring.

Chestnut Stuffing For Roast Turkey

Split the shells of 2 pounds of chestnuts with a sharp pointed knife. Put in oven. When they burst open, remove the peel. Put in pot with a small piece of celery, salt, and cover with half milk, and half water. Boil until done and allow to cool.

Chop six onions. Smother them in butter. Chop the turkey liver and 1 pound of sausage meat and mix with the onions. Add four whole eggs, white bread crumbs in small pieces, parsley, thyme, sage, salt and pepper. Mix with the chestnuts.

Turkey Gravy Described for Holiday Menu

MANY excellent cooks are unable to make good gravy and since good giblet gravy is an important item on any Thanksgiving dinner, here are some suggestions. As soon as the turkey is done, carefully remove to a hot platter and keep hot. Turn the fat out of the roasting pan and measure back two tablespoons for every cup of gravy desired. Place over low heat. Add as much flour as fat, and stir until smooth. Cook gently until a golden brown. Add 1 cup of cold water for every 2 tablespoons of fat and stir constantly until smooth and thickened. Add salt, pepper, and chopped cooked giblets. Heat until bubbling and serve at once.

Instead of water, good cooks often made a broth by boiling the neck, gizzard, and wing tips in water until tender. They then measure the broth and add additional water to give the amount needed. About three cups of gravy is recommended for the average family.

For the novice, the preparation of the giblets is a problem. Giblets require long slow cooking. The gizzard require about one hour of cooking. The heart and liver are also used in the gravy. These can be cooked the day before and stored in the refrigerator until needed for the gravy.

The seasoning used in gravy depends on the individual taste. For three cups of gravy, a teaspoon of salt, one-eighth teaspoon of pepper, and some chopped onion can be used. Some persons prefer adding fresh mushrooms or chopped ripe olives to the gravy. The mushrooms now on the market do not need to be skinned. Just wash them thoroughly under cold running water, and chop. Saute them in the hot turkey fat before adding the flour.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"I'VE HAD my doubts," writes one of our readers, "about the color scheme of our living room. And now that we've about decided to have the room repainted, I would appreciate your suggestions. It's about 12 x 20, with one end used for dining, where we have a modern walnut table with dining chairs in red leather. As we couldn't afford a large rug, we bought a 9 x 12, which fits the living end of the room, the bare part of the floor being used for the dining furniture. This rug is in shades of red with suggestions of white, blue and black through it, but indefinite so that it blends almost unnoticeably into the red. We have a modern upholstered sofa and chair with simple straight lines, a studio couch, draperies in a woven fabric predominately rust-red and white cornices in plain rust-red, Venetian blinds of oyster white with rust-red tapes, walls of oyster white, and white lamps. I have a feeling that we have too much red here. We are planning to have new slip covers for sofa, chair and studio couch and the walls are to be repainted. We'd like to have one of the new dark shades, such as gray or plum for the walls. What would you advise?"

I wouldn't be surprised if there is too much warm color in the room at present, but since the effect is so glowing and homelike, I doubt if the room is really wrong. All the rules can be broken if the result is pleasant and livable. However, I agree with you that one of the new dark wall colors would be more exciting. I'd advise gray walls with your red rug, I think, then slip covers in tweedy gray homespun materials with red welting and extra odd cushions in red. Add pewter for accent, and give the white lamps importance. You could do with an extra occasional chair in white leather.

For the lady who is involved with refurnishings, our bulletin "curtain Calls for Pleasant Windows" will be helpful as it includes directions you'll need for solving your fall window problems. It will be sent on receipt of a 3-cent stamped envelope.

Fruits Provide Color Garnish To Festal Thanksgiving Board

Vegetables in Original Tints Also May Be Used; Baked Apples, Deviled Pineapples and Sweet Potato Croquettes Are Effective.

THE regal turkey should go to the table with trimmings and much garnishing if it is to be a complete success. The garnishing may be in the form of vegetables served with the dinner, or fruits spiced and decorated in an attractive fashion. A border of cauliflower flowerlets and broccolli arranged alternately makes a green and white border. Cook these vegetables carefully to retain their color.

Alternate rings of minted and cinnamon pineapple on a bed of watercress are suitable for the fowl or ham. To prepare the cinnamon rings, add a handful of red cinnamon candies to the syrup from a can of pineapple. For the minted slices, add green coloring and spearmint extract. Bring the syrup to the boiling point and add the slices. Allow them to stand several hours or overnight.

Try Deviled Pineapple.

Appetite ticklers are deviled slices of pineapple. There are made by combining brown sugar and ½ tablespoon of catsup. Spread this mixture on rings of pineapple and broil for a few minutes.

The royal bird, or any of his cousins, the goose, duck, or little fat hen, appears in glory when garnished with small baked apples with hollowed centers stuffed with tart fruit. Cinnamon apple halves topped with raspberry and mint jelly are excellent. Instead of the over-worked hedge of parsley, use a spoonful of mint or currant jelly.

Sweet potato croquettes make an attractive garnish. Mashed sweet potatoes seasoned with spices, butter, and salt can be pressed firmly into a shallow pan or tray and cut into minature shapes of turkey. Mashed Irish potatoes should be squeezed through the pastry bag into white roseties.

Accent on Garnish.

Place the accent on the garnish for the first course. Soups, especially creamed ones, need a garnish. Choose unusual ones such as pop corn, croutons, toasted shredded almonds, or whipped cream. Finely chopped green pepper, minced parsley, or paprika also give color to it. In choosing the garnish be color-minded as well as flavor-minded and play for contrasts.

Salads need to be light and crisp. Their contribution to the menu is to add the little touches that emphasize other flavors. Rings of green pepper or finely chopped chives, cubes of Swiss cheese, match sticks of carrots, thin slices of green pickle, riced yolk of egg, shredded nuts, celery hearts, cubes of cream cheese, anchovy fillets, are a few foods that add variety to the salad bowl or an attractive garnish to the individual salad plate.

Proper Way to Use Flavoring Extract

Flavoring extract is an essential part of good cooking. A seemingly unsignificant bottle of lemon, almond, or ginger extract in your kitchen cupboard will make the difference, many times, between a successful and an unsuccessful dish.

Perhaps you do not know just how many kinds of flavorings there are available, and just what their specific purposes are. Here is a brief chart for you to go by when using extracts and flavorings:

Almond extract and vanilla extract—Used in cakes and confectionery, especially good with cocoa, chocolate, coconut, date, raisin, and coffee combinations. Good in most milk combinations.

Rose extract—Used in angel and other white cakes, also in fancy candies.

Roast Lamb Recipe Has Fruit Stuffing

A roast for the main dish is the preference of the majority of homemakers for a company meal of any special occasion. And a wise choice this is, for, according to modern methods of cooking meat, a roast requires no attention after it has been placed properly in a slow oven, until it is ready to serve.

What roast do you prefer? Ribs of beef, loin of pork, leg of lamb, are all favorites. "By way of variety, for your next dinner party, serve a cushion style shoulder of lamb," suggests Inez S. Wilson, home economist, "and make it a really distinctive dish by using a dressing to which fruit gives a delicious flavor.

1 lamb shoulder, boned
2 cups bread crumbs
6 cooked apricots, diced
6 cooked prunes, diced
1 small orange, chopped
1 egg, beaten light
Salt and pepper

Have bone removed from shoulder of lamb. Sew on three sides, leaving a fourth side open for dressing. Make a dressing of the bread crumbs, fruits and beaten eggs. Pile this into the cavity made by removing the bone from the lamb shoulder. Sew or skewer the edges together. Place the stuffed lamb shoulder on a rack in an open roasting pan and roast in a slow oven (300 degrees F.) until done. It will require 30 to 35 minutes per pound for roasting.

Thanksgiving Salad.

Boil apples. Cool and stuff them with cranberry jelly. Then top them with cream cheese. Serve with French dressing. Mold cranberry jelly into a ring. When it is thoroughly chilled unmold. Fill the center with ripe olives and celery curls.

Old-Fashioned Desserts Offered in New Guises

Pumpkin Appears in Fluffy-Ruffles Role; Cranberries Used to Flavor Ice Cream; Even Mince Pies Are Made Modern and Digestible.

AS THANKSGIVING DAY approaches, our thoughts turn to desserts. Certain traditional dishes are in order, but after a big Thanksgiving dinner what is needed to entice already satisfied appetites is a tempting finale in the form of a delicate and toothsome sweet. No one wishes a heavy dessert. The smart thing is to give the traditional desserts a light touch.

It has been said that the Puritans first used pumpkin for pies and found cranberries and maple sirup a successful experiment. Farther South the English custom of serving mince pies was followed. So, for your dinner tomorrow, be not disrespectful to the old traditions, but prepare them for serving in a new fashion.

For the pumpkin dessert, a fluffy texture and creamy consistency can be gained by adding marshmallows or beaten whipped cream. A pumpkin chiffon filling is made light by folding in stiffly beaten egg whites.

The Old Made New.

The cranberries can be made into sauce and blended into a tart creamy ice cream. The mince meat filling blended with apples can be used in tarts. The filling for the pies can be purchased ready to serve, then a fruit juice added to contribute the necessary light touch. One of the new fruit juices on the market is ideal for this. Apricot, peach, pear, plum and peach juice are now being marketed. Their flavor adds the final touch to the spicy taste of rich mincemeat.

Before baking the pies, a Thanksgiving touch can be added by cutting the silhouette of a turkey from the top crust. This can be done just after the top crust is rolled out. Take the design from any current magazine or newspaper picture, trace it on paper and center it on the pie crust. This will make a new design for your pies at little effort.

Some good cooks feel that desserts for the holidays should be pretty. Such a dessert are these Thanksgiving cornucopias. They are made with a fluffy pumpkin filling made light with marshmallows and spicy with ginger, cinnamon and lemon juice. The crisp shells can be purchased at the bakery. The filling can also be used for tarts or in meringue shells.

Pumpkin Filling.

2-3 cup of canned pumpkin
2 tablespoons of milk
½ teaspoon of cinnamon
¾ teaspoon of ginger
1 teaspoon of lemon juice
1 cup of whipped cream

Place the marshmallows and milk in a saucepan. Heat over low flame. Fold over and over until marshmallows are about half melted. Remove from the flame and continue folding until the marshmallows have formed a fluffy mixture. Cool. Add the spices and lemon juice to the pumpkin. Fold into the marshmallow mixture. Add the whipped cream. Chill for two hours and serve in the cornucopias.

CORNUCOPIAS.

2 eggs
1½ tablespoons of cold water
½ teaspoon of lemon extract
2 teaspoons of cornstarch
½ cup of flour
½ teaspoon of baking powder
⅛ teaspoon of salt

Sift the sugar three times and measure. Beat the egg whites until stiff, but not dry. Fold in ¼ cup of sugar gradually. Beat the yolks together with cold water and flavoring extract until thick and lemon colored. Fold in remaining ¼ cup of sugar and lightly fold yolk mixture into the beaten whites. Mix and sift dry ingredients and fold into first mixture. Drop by tablespoons on a greased cooky sheet. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 12 minutes. Remove from the oven and roll at once into the shape of cornucopias or cones. Secure in place with a toothpick. When cool, remove the toothpicks and fill with the pumpkin filling.

Serve on a tray or on individual serving plates and garnish with thin slices of crystallized fruit.

Mincemeat can be purchased ready to use. Packages of dried mincemeat are also on the market. However, if you prefer making your own, I suggest this recipe. The lemon and lemon peel give a cool taste to it.

MINCEMEAT.

2 lemons
2 apples
1 cup of sugar
½ pound of currants
¾ cup of pecans
¾ cup of raisins
¾ cup of butter
½ teaspoon of cinnamon
½ teaspoon of ginger
½ teaspoon of nutmeg
½ teaspoon of allspice
½ teaspoon of cloves
½ teaspoon of salt

Extract the juice from the lemons. Cook the peel in much water. Cook until soft and transparent. Change the water twice. Run through the food chopper.

Add the chopped apples, currants, chopped nuts, butter and seasoning. Mix well. Store in refrigerator until time to use.

Thanksgiving Helps

A 10-pound turkey will serve 10 or 12—there will be no leftovers, however.

Spiced cranberry juice blends well with cider served hot or cold as an appetizer.

Chopped apples give added flavor to duck, turkey or goose stuffing.

Hollow out a pumpkin and fill it with popped corn. Then surround it with grapes and oranges and use it as a centerpiece.

Crushed pineapple, cooked apricots or peaches give added flavor to mashed sweet potatoes.

To prepare chestnuts, remove the shells. Then cover the nuts with water and let them simmer for 30 minutes. Serve mashed or diced.

Flavor of Foods Important to Cook

The young student in the home economics class who defined a "well-balanced meal" as "one that is made up of calories, vitamins and nutrition—and tastes like straw" was technically not very accurate, but she put her finger on a weakness that has crept into so-called scientific meal preparation. All the emphasis has gone on the nutritive contribution of food and little on the pleasure value of eating. Feeding the family has become all work and no play, and if the result is a dull meal it is no more than the nursery maxim predicted.

Good cooks the world over appreciate what science has unfolded about food values, but they have not discarded what history and experience have taught, namely that the little seasonings which have practically no food value at all are needed to make most nutritive foods pleasant to eat.

Turkey Design for Mince Pie

Luscious mince pies bring the traditional ending to a Thanksgiving feast. The outline of a strutting turkey has been cut from the top crust to add a gala air to their appearance. The turkey idea is repeated in the candle holders.

Banana Cream Pie Recipe Is Popular

Popular pie becomes more popular still when it has a creamy filling of mellow bananas. Here is the favorite tested recipe—a delicious ending for a successful meal.

Banana Cream Pie.

1½ cups milk
¼ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons flour
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon butter
¼ teaspoon vanilla extract or ½ teaspoon lemon extract
1 9-inch pie shell (baked pastry, corn flake or graham cracker)
4 bananas
Whipped cream or meringue

Scald 1 cup of the milk over hot water. Mix together the sugar, salt and flour. Add ½ cup of cold milk slowly, stirring until mixture is smooth. Stir into hot milk. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Cover and let cook for about 3 minutes.

Stir a little of the hot milk mixture into the egg yolk, and add this to the hot mixture. Cook 1 minute longer. Add butter and flavoring. Allow mixture to cool. Fill pie shell with alternate layers of sliced bananas and cooled filling. Top with whipped cream or meringue. Make one 9-inch pie.

Grapes as Garnish.

Add grapes, seedless or seeded, to lime or mint gelatin for a pleasing flavor contrast to serve with roasts, chops, or fowl. The grapes can also be used as a garnish with baked casserole of sweetbreads. The sweetbreads should be prepared in the usual manner and the whole grapes sprinkled over the top just before the casserole goes into the oven.

Biscuit Appetizers.

Tiny tea biscuits can be filled with piquant fillings for interesting accompaniments for soup or appetizers. The type of filling will depend to a large extent on the manner of serving. A filling of sardines mixed with salad dressing and a few drops of lemon juice is the type of filling for an appetizer. Tasty cheese combinations are best for soups.

Cool Dessert Best After Large Meal

Peppermint Mousse Takes Place of Heavy Pie.

After a heavy meal, a cool dessert is welcome. Instead of the traditional mince pie with hard sauce or pumpkin pie, try having a cool frozen dessert. You will like the flavor.

Peppermint Mousse.

1 cup of whipped cream
1 cup of milk
1 tablespoon of gelatin
¼-pound of peppermint stick candy
2 egg whites
⅛ teaspoon of salt
¼ teaspoon of vanilla

Soften the gelatin in ½ cup of cold milk. Heat the rest of the milk with the stick candy. Stir until the candy has dissolved. Pour at once over the gelatin. Set aside to cool. When slightly thickened add the whipped cream, salt and vanilla. Beat the egg whites until stiff. Fold gently into the mixture and pour into the tray of the mechanical refrigerator. Freeze for three hours. It is not necessary to stir this mixture.

Baked Bananas.

Peel bananas and dip them in maple sirup. Bake them until they are slightly brown. Top them with mint jelly and serve them with roast turkey or duck.

Housecoat Takes Lead In Interior Fashions

New York (AP).—The housecoat has stolen the spotlight in interior fashions, which reflect a decided trend for tailored luxuriousness. The fluffy effects of a few years ago have given way this season to brocades, slipper satins, wools and new flannels designed with slender fitted sleeves and bodies buttoning or closing up the front with a slide fastener of contrasting hue. The colors of these house coats are as interesting as their cut, for while ivories, eggshells and pale blues appear, the deep grape tones, blues and reds are considered very smart.

Crisp Salad Aids Dinner For Holiday

Tart Molded Dish Also Is Appetizing Addition at Thanksgiving.

By Nancy Ellis.

A GREEN SALAD of succulent crispness and a chilled tart molded salad in shimmering splendor are two possibilities for the Thanksgiving dinner. If there is ever a time when we "live to eat" it is Thanksgiving Day, and either of these two salads do much to keep the appetites keyed up. Fortunately, a crisp green salad will assist in the more comfortable digestion of a bountiful meal.

There are several vegetables on the market for the green salad. Chocory, watercress, lettuce, radishes, celery, red cabbage and endive are some of them. A tart dressing is needed with them in order to emphasize their flavor. Whatever the green used, the leaves should be separated and thoroughly washed in cold water, drained, and placed in a clean towel or cheesecloth bag. Put in refrigerator or other cool place until ready to serve. Be sure to drain well. The "drippy salad" is anything but attractive and dilutes the dressing so that the full flavor is lost.

Jelled Salads Suggested.

Tart jelled salad can be made from cranberries. However, any fruit juice can be combined with gelatin and molded with cubes of pineapple, green and red cherries and orange to form a colorful addition to the menu.

Here are two "herbaceous treats" that will be ideal on your menu and a colorful gelatin salad.

Chicory Salad With Tart Dressing.

Arrange the chilled chicory on salad plates. Place a few sprigs of tender cress on top of the dark green leaves. Serve with this a tart dressing made as follows:

Add ½ teaspoon of mustard, ⅛ teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, ½ teaspoon of onion juice and two drops of tabasco sauce to ¾ cup of French dressing. Mix well and pour over the greens just before serving.

Mixed Salad.

2 cups of shredded tender cabbage
1 green pepper
1 cup of cooked carrots
¼ teaspoon of salt

Remove the outside leaves from a small head of cabbage. Cut in halves or quarters and slice very thin. Let the shredded cabbage stand in ice water until crisp. Drain and dry in a towel.

Cut into very fine shreds the fresh green peppers from which the seeds and partitions have been removed. Mix the shredded green pepper with 1 cup of carrot strips. Add 2 cups of shredded cabbage. Serve on lettuce leaves or the outside leaves of green cabbage.

For the dressing add 2 tablespoons of chopped green pepper, 2 tablespoons of chopped red pepper, 2 tablespoons of chopped celery, ½ teaspoon of chopped onion and ½ tablespoon of chopped parsley to one cup of French dressing.

Tart Cranberry Ring Salad.

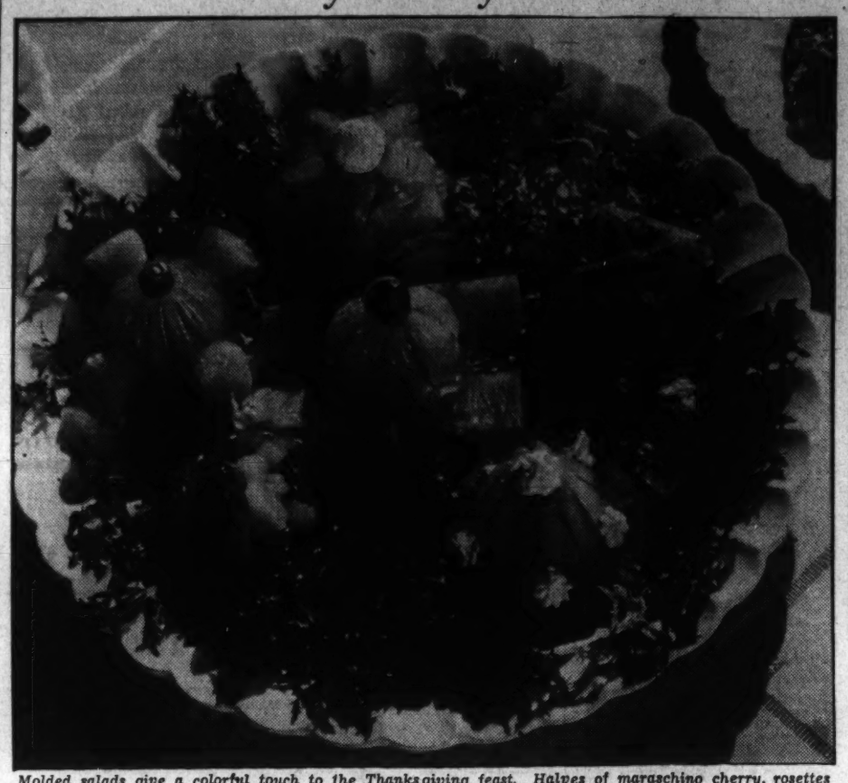
1 quart of cranberries
2 cups of water
1 tablespoon of lemon juice
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon of allspice
⅛ teaspoon of cloves

Cook the cranberries in water for 10 minutes or until the skins burst. Rub through a sieve and strain through a jelly bag until absolutely clear. Measure the juice and return to the saucepan. Add ½ cup of sugar for each cup of juice. Add lemon and spices. Stir and cook until the sugar is dissolved. Boil rapidly for 5 minutes. Pour into ring molds. Chill. To serve, unmold on lettuce or chicory and fill the centers with chopped fruit, celery and nuts. Top with mayonnaise.

Fruit Juice Cocktails.

Cocktails made with fruit and vegetable juices are served whenever Jessica Dragonette, the singer, gives a party. The juices are squeezed out with an extractor. These are favorites: Equal parts beet and pineapple; three-quarters celery juice, one-quarter lemon juice; three quarters pineapple juice, one-quarter cabbage juice; three-quarters grapefruit juice, one-quarter watercress; equal parts of orange and spinach juice.

A Gay Holiday Salad



Molded salads give a colorful touch to the Thanksgiving feast. Halves of maraschino cherry, rosettes of cream cheese, cubes of pineapple and strips of pimiento are used for garnish. Serve this type of salad nestled in curled chicory on a pottery salad plate.

COOKING HINTS

During the holidays is an excellent time to have an old-fashioned candy pull. If you are fortunate enough to have a fireplace, then serve roasted apples. These can be prepared by impaling the apples on long handled roasting forks and holding them over the fire until golden brown.

In the long ago, the air as Thanksgiving time was heavy with aroma of apples, raisins, cider, and spices. These were cooked into mince meat. For hours on the old-fashioned stove, the mincemeat bubbled. Today mincemeat prepared by old fashioned recipes can be purchased canned or in packages.

For informal entertaining, canapes of Roquefort cheese are excellent. To make the spread, blend 1 section of Roquefort with 1 small package of cream cheese. Add 1 tablespoon of cream, ¼ teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, and 2 teaspoons of chopped onion. The cheese mix can be spread on potato chips, butter crackers, or used as a stuffing in crisp hearts of celery.

For a quick dessert cut cupcakes through the middle, cover the lower half with sliced peaches, replace the tops and cover with whipped cream. A little cocoanut may be mixed with the whipped cream.

Fill halves of hard-cooked eggs with a tart sauce or relish. Then outline salad, chop or fish platters with the cases. The leftover egg yolks may be used in creamed dishes.

A good fall dessert may be made of ice cream and chocolate sauce on top of baked chocolate waffles. Ice cream also may be used as a filling for two baked waffles and the combination covered with sauce.

Another Canape.

Cut bread into 1½-inch cubes. Scoop a hollow in each cube and spread melted butter in the hollow and over the cube. Fill these buttered "cups" with a thick creamed mixture of crab, lobster, tuna, salmon or shrimp, then broil or bake until the canape is brown. Cool slightly before serving.

Find Companionship in Poems

DO YOU EVER wish you'd made a scrapbook of your favorite poems—to cheer you when you're lonely and blue?

"I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul."

What noble thoughts in Emily Dickinson's poem, "I Never Saw a Moor." Here's one verse:

"I never spoke with God,
Nor visited in heaven;
Yet certain am I of the spot
As if the chart were given."

In these lines by Leigh Hunt you live tender minutes again:

"Jenny kissed me when we met,
Jumping from the chair she sat in;
Time, you thief, who love to get Sweets into your list, put that in!"

And let's be grateful to the unknown poet who wrote these wise, heart-warming words:

"Make a little fence of trust
Around today;
Fill the space with loving work
And therein stay."

Remember this verse from Longfellow's "The Children's Hour"?

"I have you fast in my fortress,
And will not let you depart,
But put you down into the dungeon
In the round-tower of my heart."

And how does the rest of it go?

These loved poems—and many more—are given complete in our 40-page booklet, "Poems the Whole World Loves." By Browning, Poe, Whitman, Stevenson, Tennyson. Other loved poets. Such favorites as "The House by the Side of the Road," "O Captain! My Captain!"—the poems you want to keep.

Refreshing Fruit Drink With Appetizer Stimulating to Pre-Dinner Sociability

Pre-dinner sociability is promoted by the pleasant custom of serving a refreshing fruit drink with the appetizer, before going into the dining room. If you have grapefruit, pineapple, cranberry or red cherry juice, and carbonated water, cold in the refrigerator, this will present no problem.

You may wish to serve toasted, buttered crackers with the fruit beverage or an assortment of ripe and green olives, crisp celery hearts, popcorn, or potato chips. If more elaborate relish tray is desired, serve oysters, each one wrapped in bacon, fastened securely with a toothpick and sauted quickly until the bacon is crisp and brown. Tiny crab, lobster, or shrimp canapes, served hot or cold are good as well as mushrooms broiled. Bits of dill pickle, pickled onion, cubes of snappy cheese, tiny tongue, ham, salmon, tuna, or sardine sandwiches add variety to the pre-dinner bites. Tiny hot biscuits filled with a bit of Southern ham will receive much attention.

Sweet Potato Hint.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I would like to answer "Jo," who discussed faithless men in your column of November 13. As a long-time married woman I have solved my own problem along this line (temporarily, at least) but I don't advocate my method for everyone. I married very young and was naive enough to take my marriage vows literally. It never occurred to me to continue to expect—or to regret the loss of—the liberties of an unmarried woman.

* * * *

I studied everything I could to help me rear our children so they would be a joy to us and a credit to the community. My husband, however, did not take much interest in the home, except to provide for us as best he could . . . It never entered my mind that this man whom I adored would expect to enjoy all the benefits of a married man and all the privileges of a young bachelor. He was seven years older than I, a mature man with good sense. He did not believe in divorce under any circumstances, and had sowed his wild oats and wished to settle down—so he said. He was always bragging about his wife and children; seemed proud of us—so everyone said.

* * * *

After three years of marriage the blow fell—and what a blow! It swept over me and engulfed me like a tidal wave. Young and strong as I was, I folded up; just couldn't take it. He denied it and flew at me in such a rage I thought he would kill me. It did seem unbelievable. But with my own eyes, I had read his letters to the other woman. I had also talked with her. This he countered by laying all the blame on her. What names these married men can find for girls who are gullible enough to sympathize with their story of misunderstanding! In this case, it was a woman old enough to be my mother, and the wife of my husband's best friend. She had neither looks, brains nor style.

* * * *

He wept and pleaded with me not to leave him. Like you, Miss Haworth, I reasoned that only a fool or a rascal doesn't learn from experience. I still loved him (though in a different way than before); the children would be better off if I stayed, so we turned to club and church work and put the past from our minds. I never questioned his comings and goings. Again, I trusted him absolutely. Six years passed, years in which he made my life almost unbearable with his insane and unwarranted jealousy of me. I thought it was the kick-back of his past mistake and pitied him. I went out of my way to spare him jealousy; gave up my women friends; even my own sisters, everyone who showed me any affection.

* * * *

Then, I learned that he had been having other affairs all those years and was suffering from a guilty conscience. It didn't hurt as the first blow did. But I was mad with rage at myself for having trusted him again and because I hadn't left him the first time. I was at my wits' end. He went through the same old weeping and pleading for another chance. If only these other women coud see these big, strong he-men groveling on their knees before the little midget wife when she finds out. They act like spoiled babies . . . I knew I could never love him again and in spite of my better judgment I stayed—thus becoming one more cold, unresponsive wife who "doesn't understand." I continued, however, to teach the children to love, honor and respect him; and tried to keep the truth from them.

* * * *

Then he went to the hospital with the first severe illness of his life. He who had never shown the slightest concern for or sympathy with me when I was at death's door, now clung to me like a lost child. He wept and accused himself, cursed himself for being a fool, for all the sorrow he had caused me. He couldn't bear me out of his sight. I assured him I had forgiven him long ago. This made him happy. His happiness made me happy. I believe then I really did forgive him.

* * * *

He recovered, we went to a different locality to live, built a home, settled down to sending the children to college. Then, with all our savings invested in a home, I discovered him in still another affair. I was still in my middle thirties. What should I do? The only training I had was in home making. What about my children's education if I left him? Why should I give up to an unscrupulous other woman the lovely home I had sacrificed to build?

* * * *

Before I could find the answer to these questions, I was rushed to the hospital for a very serious emergency operation. Now it was his turn to cheer and console me. He came only during visiting hours and sat with a sour face watching the clock. He always had an appointment. There was so little joy in his visits I was glad to see him go. I spent my twentieth wedding anniversary in the hospital and he didn't even bring me a flower. I lay there filled with bitterness.

* * * *

I promised myself if I recovered I would get some enjoyment out of life henceforth. I knew he would never let me go, so I talked it over with the children. They urged me to live my own life. They said if I saw a chance for happiness to take it. Now, they bring their friends to the house and I meet many young men who are interested in me. I go dancing and for the first time in my married life I feel as young as my friends say I look.

* * * *

When my husband has a lodge meeting or mysterious appointment, I call a friend and go out for a gay evening. At the same time I make believe to him that I am peeved because he goes out so much—and he swallows it, hook, line and sinker. It feeds his ego, makes him feel important . . . You may say I am playing with fire. But whenever a young man wants to get serious I pretend to be terribly jealous and he is gone with the wind. No bachelor can stand a jealous woman. A married man dotes on one.

* * * *

In case I am found out, I know my husband would never forgive me nor try to take me back. That's okay, too. I am willing to take whatever life has to deal. At last I am getting some enjoyment out of life; not the kind I would like, to be sure; but you can't have everything and I am not going to ruin my children's lives by clinging to them for devotion or sympathy. I have their respect and love and I do not intend to sacrifice it for cheap affairs. I never look at married men. I could never hurt another woman as I have been hurt. I do not want to hurt any man, either. To take another woman's husband is the same as to kidnap her child—maybe worse. For in stealing the husband you steal the wife's living and wreck the home of innocent children.

* * * *

Married men would never be unfaithful if women did not flirt with them. Perhaps their wives are not so dim-witted as the other women believe. Usually they know good and well that hubby isn't headed for the club when he says he is. They also have a pretty good idea what his line is with his other women. But I wonder if these other women know what our husbands tell us about them? Believe me, it's something to make them think twice before being so free with their sympathy and understanding. Why don't they get wise to the whole picture, ask themselves why he is so anxious to keep the affair a secret If he really cared a tinker's dam for them he would shout it from the housetops, as he tried to do when we said we'd marry him. G. D.

A Better Solution.

DEAR G. D.: Your problem might have been better solved long ago had you grasped, and made clear to your husband, the fact that his infidelity was symptomatic of purely personal—and remediable—deficiencies of a social and emotional nature. He has constantly sought to find outside himself a source of sustainment that can only be found within. Just as he could not find it in his wife, neither could he find it in any other woman; and to each in turn he has been as unfaithful as he was to you. His very jealousy of you shows plainly he thinks all others suffer from the same ailment, and seek in the same way to assuage it. It may be too late to change or really help him now; or it may not. It is a matter of childhood emotional fixations and resultant neuroses. Psychoanalysis, while always a delicate and sometimes a hazardous undertaking, sometimes straightens out such personalities to the satisfaction of all concerned. Your husband, in my opinion, is not a typical problem-husband. He is worse than most, yet probably would have responded readily to sound guidance after his first mistake. M. H.

Suds for New Towels.

Initiate those new towels and wash cloths by giving them a thorough washing before hanging them on the bathroom rods. The chances are they have been tossed about, or handled by fingers of uncertain cleanliness. No strenuous rubbing is necessary to remove the surface soil and foreign matter. All they need is a few minutes swishing about in thick live soapsuds and thorough rinsing before they are dried and put into circulation.

They Meet the Acid Test for Evening Style

Two evening ensembles choosen by the Fashion group as representing the best features of the current mode are shown here. They were displayed last night at the Fashion Futures showing in New York. The gown below is gray chiffon. Hips are molded, bodice softly draped. Slippers match the gown, cape is of green satin. Gown at right is of sheer crepe in rich, complicated floral pattern. With it is worn a cape of ostrich plumes.

Style Show's New Technique Exploits American Designers

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—"Fashion Futures—American Edition," presented before an audience of 1,400 at the Waldorf Hotel last night, not only exploited noted American designers of today in fashions of tomorrow, but sponsored a new technique in the display of fashions.

One hundred and sixty-eight members of the Fashion Group, the noncommercial organization which was responsible for the show, composed the committees who planned and executed the presentation. These theme of "Futures" marks the first formal recognition of this country's fashion achievements; interpretations in terms of American creativeness, chic and good taste.

In 13 scenes, the "why" of clothes in a woman's life were projected by means of two stages—one oblong with the models coming up from a lower level, the other, a round "island" in the exact center of the Waldorf ballroom.

New Technique Used.

A reflectoscope was used to give the right perspective needed for out-of-door scenes; by this means color was washed into the backgrounds. Double gauze curtains received the cycloramic effects, picking up and blending both light and color—giving horizons and illusions of distance.

To complete this startling new fashion display technique, an abstract voice made the "news" comments, setting scenes and moods.

The first scene, "Winter Hockey," presented costumes for cruise and resort wear, play and spectator sports clothes and those for dining and dancing. Luxurious furs, jewels and evening gowns were next, the scene being entitled, "Do American Men Spoil Their Wives?"

The weather and how to dress for it was featured, showing proper clothes for riding, gardening, skating, skiing, bicycling, tennis and golf. To acquaint shoppers with what women will see in the near "future" when America makes to order, the models displayed gorgeous ensembles, lingerie, suits, coats, formal evening gowns and dinner dresses.

Famous "Girls" Featured.

Co-ordinated accessories were not only presented on living models, but giant replica mannequins wore identical ensembles. Travel clothes to suit the temperature of your wanderings were exploited with suggested costumes for traveling anywhere from the South Seas to Alaska. Hollywood as a fashion center was featured with clothes designed for pictures not yet released; with emphasis on the eye-appeal of technicolor. Those cock-eyed and silly hats which men never seem to understand—were cleverly shown in next spring's interpretations.

The "girls" who have made fashion history were dramatized by clothes that they have made famous. They included Lillian Russell, the Gibson Girl, Irene Castle, Clara Bow, Greta Garbo, Mae West, Marlene Dietrich, Shirley Temple, the Duchess of Windsor, and the Dionne quintuplets. To prove that "clothes are only half the lady," there were demonstrations of setting-up exercises for a perfect figure and suggestions for correct make-up for face, hands, hair and feet.

The Goddess of Liberty in modern dress, honoring America's great contribution to fashion in all its phases climaxed the style show of the "Future." This was interpreted by 48 mannequins in 48 shades of blue, dressed to represent: The career woman, college girl, matron and debutante.

Dentists Urge Check on Teeth, When Child Is 2, as Preventive

Many Youngsters Are Found to Need Temporary Plates Until Permanent Teeth Appear to Avert Expensive Straightening Jobs Later.

New York, (AP).—Billy's teeth are in perfect condition, as far as his mother knows, and she hates to take him to the dentist to make sure. There are a few gaps where baby teeth have come out and the permanent ones are still working their way up.

But mother checks up on the twice-daily brushing. If Billy's eye tooth is a bit crooked, well, she thinks, the permanent tooth doubtless will come in straight.

You Never Can Tell.

Not necessarily, warns Dr. H. Shirley Dwyer, a specialist in children's dentistry. Mother may be an optimist; not Dr. Dwyer. That new root may be lying crooked in the gum right now, he says. Maybe Billy's baby teeth should have been extracted before they fell out of their own accord, to avoid too much pressure on the root.

The youngster might even need a temporary plate—which isn't so shocking as it sounds. Lots of children wear them, says Dr. Dwyer, until their permanent teeth appear. The plate may avert expensive teeth-straightening later on.

Don't wait until a child's teeth show signs of trouble before taking him to the denist's, Dr. Dwyer urges. Take him for a thorough oral examination before he is 2 That visit may prevent a lot of trouble later.

And when Billy makes that visit he should take along his toothbrush so the dentist can instruct him in the proper way to brush his teeth. Mother may know, but it's a good idea for an authority to check up.

And Billy needn't dread the dentist's office. Dr. Dwyer makes his young patients feel at home—not with toys, he doesn't think they help—but by letting them pump the chair up and down, play with the faucets, and examine the drill. This helps to banish fear, and then the battle is half won, he says.

But if the dentist dramatizes the visit, and tells Billy he's going for an airplane ride—inspired by the movable powers of the chair and the roar of the drill—Billy will get to thinking his visit to the dentist is fun.

Parents: Keep Out.

As for parents who hover about the dentist's chair, Dr. Dwyer doesn't chase them out, but he finds it a lot easier to put on his dramatizing act without them. He keeps a few tops in his waiting room—to calm children before they enter the office, but he often finds the parents are just as happy over electric trains as their offspring. So he leaves the parents at it while the youngsters are getting their teeth filled.

Another good plan in dealing with children, says Dr Dwyer, is to let them see all that's going on. A hand mirror tells all, and no matter how jittery Billy may be, he can see that the dentist isn't doing him any lasting harm.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

DOWN IN Washington it is known as the government spread; in office circles it is called the stenographer's spread; executives acquire a desk chair spread, and housewives complain of a middle aged spread.

It has been estimated that the average person sits 14 hours a day. If you sit only 8 hours a day the hipline can expand at the rate of 1½ inches a year—and that's no exaggeration!

You cannot have a good figure unless the hipline is in proportion to your other measurements. If you have a 34-inch bust and 36-inch hips, congratulations! But a 34-inch bust and 40-inch hips . . . see the difference?

The hipline is the measurements usually responsible for your clothes trouble. A dress that fits to perfection through the shoulders and waist will be too snug through the hips. As long as you can have the dress raised at the waist to give that extra bit of hip room your figure is not greatly out of proportion, but if your hipline demands a whole size larger before the frock eases on it is time you exercise.

Daily exercise will alter this sedentary measurement and keep it in line. Begin with the following exercises.

1. LEG CIRCLING AND ROLLING.

Position: Lying on back on the floor, hands clasped back of head, legs together and extended straight down.

Movement: Raising the legs a few inches off the floor, holding feet together, circle the legs to the extreme side, around and down. Roll on the hips as you circle. Describe this circle 6 times in one drection, then the same number of tmes in the other direction. If your hipline warrants, you may increase the circling to 25 times.

2. SIDE SCISSORS.

Position: Lying on side on the floor, head pillowed on the outstretched arm, other arm braced on floor in front of body for support.

This exercise slims the sedentary measurement.

Movement: Swing the legs vigorously in a scissors-like action with a wide excurson of the legs. Swing for 10 counts, flop over and rest, and then lie on the other side and swing the legs for 10 more counts. You can perform this exercise an indefinite number of times provided you rest between each 10 counts.

Crocheted Woolen Gloves Are Nice Gift for a Relative

By Alice Brooks.

NIMBLE fingers—supple hands—are busily crocheting these lovely woolly gloves for Christmas. Mother, sister or friend is sure to be flattered by so personal a gift and one that so closely follows the vogue. They're quick to do—two flat identical pieces whipped together—with a gusset for that wrist flare. Use either yarn or string for endless durability. Just wait till you see how easy they are to do! In pattern 5676 you will find directions for making these gloves; an illustration of them and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Department, 259 West Fourteenth Street New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

New Shoes Make Feet "Sculptured"

New York (AP).—New winter shoes give feet a sculptured look.

High patterns, simple lines and fitted smoothness produce a gloved appearance which is both smart and distinctive.

Shoes don't pinch, however. On the contray, they are made for comfort—designed to mold and support the foot, with small side cut-outs for breathing space and elasticized sides or straps. Some models close with slide fastenings.

Modified heels—high enough to look smart, low enough to insure comfort—are much more in evidence for street wear than the tall, stilted spikes.

Black is by far the most important daytime color. Brown is expected to grow in prominence, and some navy and wine tones appear. Suede is exceedingly smart and popular. while calf and kid also are seen.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Nov. 22.

I HAD lunch last Saturday with Frances Farmer, one of the screen's new hopes and now learning more acting here in "Golden Boy," the best show of the new season. The spouse had begged off shyly because of a hicky on his nose, and thus I was left elbow-deep in celebrities at the Algonquin—not only with the lovely Farmer, but with her no less lovely husband, Lief Erickson, as well!

ALICE HUGHES.

This is one of the most interesting young screen couples yet, and for personal beauty as a team they have but one rival, Errol Mickey Flynn and Lily Damita. Erickson's square name is Anderson, and as such the two are registered at a very modest apartment hotel in unfashionable West End avenue. Frances is now working for the Group Theater, an arty outfit basically, which pays off in peanuts and love for the theater, which is quite all right. Frances is a college girl from Seattle, the evidently amazing town which has projected such local smart girls as Muriel King, Beatrice Mathieu, Marian Stephenson and Margot Kops.

She's a real beauty, this Farmer, slim, natural blonde hair with curling tendencies and worn in a long bob, and hazel eyes. Her voice is deep and rich, and she is headed straight for stardom, unless her brains prevent. She's actually an intellectual, which is often a Hollywood handicap if noticeable. She hates the movies' daily shampoo, which lacerates her scalp, while Lief's principal complaint is that the big little woman has a pernicious habit of using his pet toothbrush to do her eyebrows—certainly obnoxious bathroom etiquette! Lief, by the way, has a role in Garbo's "Conquest." Frances wore a plain tailored suit, a black brim hat with a gold band, and a big gray ulster, and looked as Greta should look when out of the trenches.

Clever, interesting couple, Farmer and Erickson, as well as pleasant to look at. If their brains just don't intrude, they'll scoot to big things!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In all my pother over the cafe set here, it is pleasant to note that Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt has really opened the social season with a formal dinner at her Fifth avenue mansion on the brink of Radio City. Mrs. V. is the acknowledged leader of the old guard, far from the modern rumba crowd. It's so nice to know that the real people still function—or are they really real and not just society scribblers' dreams?

To retreat from the sublime to the colossal, our furniture is being polished for the expected arrival of Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone for their annual visit and personal appearances. Our little autograph-termites are wetting their pencils and getting ready to make the pair's lives utterly horrid . . .

Mme. Karin Michaelis, a Danish lady, got up to lecture here a few days ago and urged a Government tax on both single and married men to help the helpless children of divorced couples! My gosh, it was enough to send the customers screaming into the street, for one more tax and we may well revolt! But no fear—it was just a lecture thought, and did make a headline or two!

Newspaper women poured into town to peer at "Fashion Futures," the year's most glamorous style show, which popped last night at the Waldorf with the accent on American clothes design. Among the visiting fireladies were Evon Nolette, of Minneapolis; Dorothy Carey, of Dayton, and Ruby Pierce, who is managing editor (no less) of the Palm Beach News. More about the people and the show to come. It's a prime event here each fall.

The boudoir goes leopard—hear those snarls? Silk pajamas patterned from the skin of that beautiful cat are selling frantically here both for gents and ladies—sometimes with leopard-skinned velvet mules, bells attached. Bells on her toes, to avoid startling father as she pads about the house!

You may be interested to know that in spite of Wall Street declines and frantic wolf-howling by the tycoons, merchants report that business is ractically holding its own with the big fall of '36 in the stores. We've been doomed for years—yet here we are, still earth's happiest and best nation, whatever the calamity-screamers say.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Treatment of Hernia.

The treatment of hernia, or rupture, by injections rather than by open surgery has become very popular in this country in the last few years, and a great many inquiries come to my desk concerning the method. I have reports of a number of capable and conservative surgeons, and with some reservations they take a far more favorable view of the matter than they did a few years ago.

Thus, one surgeon says, "The injection treatment of hernia, with the technic and solutions now generally in use, is singularly free from complications. Modern technic overcomes the various anticipated difficulties of the method, such as 'blind' and uncontrolled treatment."

The ordinary rupture is simply a protrusion of the intestines with the peritoneal sac which lines the abdomen, through the fascial planes of the abdominal muscles in the groin. When no support is given to this, and even sometimes when there is by a truss, coughing and other abdominal strains increase the size of the rupture.

The surgeon, by the open method, exposes the peritoneal sac, which has been forced into the hernial canal, and ties it off. The injection method undertakes to put an irritating solution in this place whch causes the two edges of the sac to become adherent and obliterates it in that way.

One important feature of the injection treatment is the economic aspect. The costs have been worked out in a large New York clinic on workmen's compensation cases, where it has been found that the savings by means of the injection treatment are about $250 a case. This is because the patient keeps right on working during treatment, the costs of surgical hospitalization and of work-time compensation are eliminated.

It is very important that the decision as to the method of treatment of hernia should be left to the surgeon. There are certain complications which absolutely prohibit the use of the injection method.

One form of hernia which is especially adapted to the injection treatment, is the kind which has been operated once or twice without permanent good results.

1st Candlelight Concert Proves Great Success

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

Dusk yesterday at the Phillips Memorial Gallery found the famous paintings in the main room illuminated, all other lights dimmed, and a representative group gathered for the season's first Candlelight Concert of the Washington Chamber Music Society.

"——simplest and most soul-satisfying entertainment in town" . . . "I wouldn't miss a program for anything" . . . "Wonderful painting and restful music" . . . Such scraps of comment as these, gathered yesterday from men and women who arrived shortly before the doors closed at 5 o'clock, explained why these unique concerts, in existence for several years, are fast becoming one of the Capital's favored institutions.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Not so many seasons ago, paintings on the walls of private homes and very small groups listening to informal programs by musicians playing in nonprofessional capacity comprised concerts from which stemmed the "candlelight" events. Mrs. Walter Nash, a pianist, and her husband, a 'cellist, frequently arranged entertainments of chamber music, inviting other musicians to take part in the program. Later, when interest in the program increased, the Washington Chamber Music Society came into being.

Concerts Change To Business Basis

The Candlelight Concerts on a subscription basis got off to a swift start at the home of Mrs. Jouett Shouse a few years ago when scores of music lovers braved a storm to attend the meeting there. Since then, each year has seen a steady increase of subscribers, until, in 1934, it seemed advisable to shift the concerts from the private home locale to some other center.

Appropriately, the Phillips Memorial Gallery was selected, and the term "candlelight" took on a more significant meaning. With soft lights playing on famous canvases of such masters as El Greco, Daumier, Goya and Corot—to mention only a few—the setting for a simple concert at the end of the day is ideal. And few fortunate enough to attend one program forego the pleasure of being there at the next.

Compositions by Josef Haydn and Antonin Dvorak were those presented yesterday by the quartet made up of Frederick Dwonch and Jeno Sevely, violinists, and William Brennand and Ralph Hersh, players of the violoncello and viola, respectively.

Among the listeners was Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, who is particularly interested in the work of Mr. Dwonch, young Czechoslovak member of the National Symphony Orchestra—an organization, incidentally from which the entire quartet is drawn. Arriving with Mme. Hurban were the First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation, Otakar Kabelac, and his bride, who recently came to the Capital.

Social Notables Attend in Numbers

Miss Mary Bradley and Miss Elizabeth Shouse served as ushers at the concert and were busy passing out programs for well over half an hour before the event began, promptly at 5 o'clock.

Others glimpsed at the gathering were the Finnish Minister's wife, Mme. Eero Jarnefelt; Mrs. Walter Nash, Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, the latter in a tailored frock set off with a handsome fur coat and crowned with a towering brown turban; Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, who wore a black ensemble and arrived with Mrs. Morris Clark; Mrs. Edward Wilber in a gray squirrel coat and a small black hat; Representative Caroline O'Day in a black coat with a Persian lamb collar and a black sculptured turban; Mrs. Donald Richberg, Mrs. Herbert Feis, Mrs. Ralph Church, Mrs. David Cushman Coyle.

Among others on the list of subscribers for the concerts are Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Jasper duBois, Mrs. Charles Adams Baker, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. George C. Messersmith, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Richard Southgate, Mrs. Myron Hofer, Countess Guerino Roberti and Mrs. Henry Berliner—to name at random a few of the almost 200 who are especially interested in the success of the venture.

Miss Zibelin Is Married to Amelio Amores

Washington Girl Is Bride of Cuban Embassy Secretary.

Big yellow and white chrysanthemums, palms and lighted candles on the altar formed a handsome setting for the marriage yesterday morning at 10 o'clock of Miss Alicia Dorothy Zibelin and Amelio Martinez Amores. The ceremony took place in the Church of the Nativity, the Rev. Lawrence McGlone officiating.

The bride, originally from the South, has been making her home in Washington for several years. She is a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Prince, of Del Ray, Fla., and of the late Senator W. A. Prince, of North Carolina.

Mr. Amores, who is the son of Mrs. Rosa Marie Amores, is now assistant secretary to the Ambassador of Cuba, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, and does translating work at the embassy. He was graduated from the National University Law School.

Yesterday the bride wore a gown of turquoise blue satin with a halo hat and brief tulle veil of the same shade. Her ivory-bound prayer book had a streamer of lilies of the valley. Miss Estrella Amores, the bridegroom's sister, was maid of honor, wearing a dubonnet velvet gown with matching turban and carrying talisman roses. The Misses Kathryn Huffer and Creel Durrance, of Washington, were bridesmaids. Their dubonnet satin frocks were shirred at the shoulders, and they carried chrysanthemums in shades of gold and russet. A. Y. Casanova, jr., served as best man for his cousin, and H. H. Prince, cousin of the bride, and Dr. I. Smith, of Havana, were ushers.

After a wedding trip to the North, Mr. and Mrs. Amores will live at 511 Quackenbos street.

The bride attended the Pineland School for Girls near Pinehurst, N. C., and studied voice for two years in Wilmington, N. C.

Marlers Give Dinner To Honor Greenshields

The Minister of Canada and Lady Marler entertained at a dinner last evening at the legation in honor of Justice and Mrs. R. A. E. Greenshields, who are spending some time at the Mayflower Hotel.

Attend Season's First Candlelight Concert

Harris & Ewing.

When this year's initial Candlelight Concert got underway yesterday at dusk at the Phillips Memorial Gallery, Mme. Otakar Kabelac, Mme. Vladimir Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, and Mr. Otakar, Secretary of the Czechoslovakian Legation, were among the more than 200 who attended. They were especially interested in the performance of their countryman, Frederick Dwonch, violinist, member of the National Symphony Orchestra.

Horsemen Meet At Party Today

Plans for Next Inter-American Show Will Be Discussed.

The next Inter-American Horse Show will be the topic of talk when officers and members of committees connected with the Inter-American Horse Show Association meet at a cocktail party this afternoon at the home of Horace Luttrell, on Connecticut avenue.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, president of the association, will be in charge of the informal meeting at which a discussion of the recent show and preliminary arrangements for the one next year will be in order.

According to reports, members of the Belgian horse show team are hoping they will be invited to return, and there's a chance the Irish team also will be among next year's performers. Anyway, this and many other possibilities will be discussed. Mr. Luttrell, host at the party, is a member of the board of directors of the association.

Miss Sturdevant Will Make Debut At Tea on Dec. 23

Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant will present their daughter, Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant, to Capital society at a tea on Thursday afternoon, December 23. The party will be held at their home on P street in Georgetown, which last year was occupied by the former director of the Civic Theater and Mrs. Day Tuttle.

After the tea, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Sturdevant will give a buffet supper for their daughter and the friends who receive her, later taking their guests on to the dance to be given that evening at the Sulgrave Club by Mrs. Allen Nash for her debutante daughters, the Misses Betty and Rita Nash. Mrs. Nash is giving a dinner beforehand for out-of-town guests.

Miss Sturdevant is a student at Bryn Mawr College.

Miss Ida Battle Bride Tomorrow

Miss Mildred Ida Battle, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Battle, whose marriage to Robert Edwin Harvey, son of Mrs. J. William Harvey, of Silver Spring, Md., takes place tomorrow, has completed final arrangements for the ceremony.

She has selected Mrs. Mary Battle Bowman as her matron of honor and Miss Margaret Barringer as her maid of honor. Her bridesmaids will be Mrs. P. Hendley Napier, Miss Betty Lum, Miss Luck Eastham, Mrs. Woodson Birthright, Miss Dorothy Porter and Miss Dorothy Hunter. Miss Mary Ida Bowman, niece of the bride, will be her flower girl.

For his best man, Mr. Harvey has chosen P. Hendley Napier. The ushers will be J. William Harvey, jr., George A. Harvey, Richard P. Battle, Eldon Edgerton, Dr. William Mitchell Hoover, Lawrence Linthicum and Laurence Sherey.

The wedding will take place at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Sixth Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. J. Herbert Garner officiating.

Mrs. Boswell Brownson, of Upland, Calif., and her daughter, Mrs. Cleland Baxter, of Pasadena, Calif., have arrived at the Shoreham for a week's visit with Mrs. Willard H. Brownson, mother-in-law and grandmother, respectively, of the visitors.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

IN THE OPINION of Autero, maitre d'hotel of the Carlton, the premier epicure of Washington is Joseph Alsop. Though Mr. Alsop recently underwent a strenuous reducing regime at Johns Hopkins, he is still maintaining his reputation as a gourmet par excellence, according to Autero.

DUDLEY HARMON.

In all the years he has served in the best hotels of New York, Havana and Europe, the maitre has never had such a battle of culinary wit as that he is now waging with this comparatively young, yet already very distinguished, writer. Every time Mr. Alsop dines at the Carlton, he orders some particularly fancy dish which is not on the menu. So far, Autero remains the victor, having never yet failed, after serious consultations with the chef, in producing the desired dish.

The other evening there was quite a gathering of the clan in the Carlton dining room. Mr. Alsop was having dinner with his cousin, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, when her brother, Kermit Roosevelt, stopped by their table to say hello. He was down here on some shipping business. Mr. Alsop gave another small dinner at the Carlton over the week-end.

MME. PETER, music-loving wife of the Minister from Switzerland, has decided there is such a thing as Santa Claus after all. Mrs. Peter Goelet Gerry called up the other day and offered her a box for the opening night of the Metropolitan Opera next Monday evening. The Peters, who are spending Thanksgiving with their two sons, George and Marc Peter, and their families, in Boston, will go to New York for the opera, which is to be "Tristan and Isolde," with the great Kirsten Flagstad singing.

The Minister likes music so much that he refuses to make any engagements for the early part of Sunday afternoon. Instead, he stays home and listens to the New York Philharmonic over the radio.

IF THE COMPLICATED ins and outs of Washington etiquette get you down occasionally, you should turn for solace to a book called "The Lady's Guide to Perfect Gentility," published 70 years ago. A study of this little volume makes the behavior of society today seem completely unbridled.

For instance: "Do not be tempted to indulge in another proof of feminine indecorum, that of addressing young gentlemen of your acquaintance who are unconnected with you, by their Christian names. It opens the way to unpleasant familiarities on their part more effectually than you can well imagine, unless you have been taught the painful lesson by the imprudence of a friend." It would be interesting to know just what dire fate befell the imprudent one who actually had called a gentleman by his first name.

LISTEN TO THIS, debutantes: "A young lady, married or single, should never leave a party even to go into an adjoining room, without either her mother or a married lady to accompany her." And as for going out after dark with a MAN—well, "After twilight a young lady would not be conducting herself in a becoming manner by walking alone," says the guide. "If she passes the evening with anyone, she should politely ask of the person she is visiting to permit a servant to accompany her home. If the host wishes to accompany you, you must excuse yourself politely for giving him so much trouble, but finish, however, by accepting." ...

Dr. W. A. Riddell To Return to D. C.

Dr. Walter A. Riddell, who recently succeeded Hume Wrong as Counselor of the Canadian Legation, is expected to return to Washington the end of the week from Canada, where he went Friday to join Mrs. Riddell and other members of their family.

Preceding his departure, Dr. Riddell was in Washington a few days, coming here directly from his former post in Geneva, where he was Canadian advisory officer of the League of Nations.

Mr. and Mrs. Wrong and their two children, shortly after leaving Washington, sailed for Switzerland, where Mr. Wrong will take over Dr. Riddell's former duties at Geneva.

Harriet Helen Long Christened In Dress Worn by Grandfather

Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett Officiates at Ceremony for Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Long; Delegate S. W. King Returns.

A young lady four and a half months old (fashion editors please copy: she wore her grandfather's christening dress), stole the show from debutantes yesterday afternoon.

Her name, which was officially announced to the houseful of guests, is Miss Harriet Helen Long, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Long, who gave the christening party.

The Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett, of All Souls Memorial Church, officiated. Exactly to the date, he officiated at another ceremony when Mr. and Mrs. Long were married three years ago.

Mrs. Long, who is the former Miss Harriet Anderson, chose Mrs. Corcoran Thom, jr., as one of the godmothers. They made their debut here during the same season several years ago when Mrs. Thom was Miss Eliza Mitchell. Another friend of Mrs. Long, Miss Mary Holsman, of New York, served as the other godmother, Tristram C. Colkett, of Philadelphia, was godfather.

Mrs. Long was in gold and red lame; Mrs. Thom wore green.

Just to mention a few of the many present: Dr. and Mrs. James F. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Meem, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, sr., Rear Admiral and Mrs. Charles R. Train, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Clayton, Mrs. Davis Elkins, Miss Hazel Edgar, Mrs. D. Lawrence Groner, Mrs. Fred Bugher.

There was tea afterward.

Miss Winsatt Party Hostess For Mrs. Riley

Niece Recently Married Is Guest at Georgetown Reception.

The home of the hostess is one of the most unique in Washington, as it is furnished almost entirely in Chinese style. Even the outside is reminiscent of the architecture of that country, with two Fo dogs on the doorstep, and a copper roof. In the drawing room is a k'ang, a raised platform, and on every table are beautiful knick-knacks collected by Miss Wimsatt during her years in China.

Last evening great bowls of tawny chrysanthemums harmonized with the bronze and copper knick-knacks. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Regis Lowell Mrs. A. W. Fox and Miss Eleanor Johnson. There were about 50 guests.

Most of those present had an opportunity to see the Chinese "gate gods," which Miss Wimsatt brought back with her from her most recent trip to China, from which she returned a few weeks ago. She was in Yunon, southeast China, and left just one boatload ahead of the disturbances.

Federation Delays Move To Seek Ballot for D. C.

Mrs. Wiley's Resignation as National Director Also Tabled; Both Proposals Arouse Heated Discussion, With Action Due Next Month.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs departed from the even tenor of its way yesterday to indulge in heated discussion of a proposed resolution on national representation for the District and of Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley's resignation as District member director of the General Federation's board of directors. The resolution will be acted on at next meeting and the resignation, which was tabled, probably also will come up at that time. The Federation met at the Roosevelt Hotel, where it will hold an art tea today.

The resolution, prepared by Mrs. Horace J. Phelps, chairman of the committee on national representation, called on the General Federation, at its convention next May, to indorse an amendment to the Constitution of the United States "empowering Congress to grant to the residents of the District of Columbia, voting representation in the Senate and House of Representatives and among the electors of President and Vice President and the same access to the courts of the United States as is enjoyed by the citizens of a State.

This action was called for on ground that the general federation has included national representation as part of the study program.

Mrs. Joseph Waterman, chairman of resolutions, presented it and Mrs. Phelps spoke in favor of it. A long discussion followed—not on the question of national representation but on whether the resolution could properly be acted on at the meeting since individual clubs had not been notified and given time to instruct their directors how to vote.

Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, legislative chairman, spoke for clubs whose representatives, she said, were not empowered to vote without being instructed. Among them were the Ladies' Auxiliary to the D. C. Fire Department, whose director, Mrs. Ernest William Howard, added her statement that she could not vote without a definite expression from her club; the Marietta Park Woman's Club, represented by Mrs. Thomas C. Atkeson and Mrs. Jesse Sullivan; the Excelsior Literary Club, by Mrs. Mattie Ewing; the Woodbridge Book Club, by Mrs. Charles H. Pierce, and the Club Entre Nous, its president, Mrs. Charles P. Keyser.

Mrs. Edgar B. Merritt, president of the Political Study Club, said she, personally, favored the resolution but could not speak for her club without its having had opportunity to express its views.

Mrs. Virginia White Speel, past president of the D. C. Federation, former director from the District to the General Federation and, incidentally, national Republican committeewoman from the District, asserted she was "for national representation—nothing more. Local suffrage would mean death of justice and happiness.

We can't have justice as long as Congressmen use the District as a dumping ground for their constituencies. This is the first political suggestion I have ever made in the presence of the federation.

"I'm getting old in adherence to this cause, but new clubs, which have come into the District Federation since 1935, should not be asked to take action without due consideration. If they ask another month for serious study of the question as club groups, they should be given it. There will still be time to present the resolution at the executive board meeting of the General Federation here in January."

The resignation of Mrs. Wiley was not unexpected as she announced a week ago, at the time of a decision to go abroad, that she would resign this office in order that someone else might be named in her place. The clubs, however, had no official notification of it before yesterday's meeting and Mrs. Joseph Waterman, chairman of the resolutions committee, moved to table it as soon as it was presented.

It is probable that the resignation will be taken up at the December meeting and accepted. If it is not, the District will be left without a vote at the January meeting of the executive board of the General Federation when it hopes to present the resolution calling for indorsement of national representation.

If Mrs. Wiley's resignation is accepted and another director named to fill her unexpired term, it will mean that she will not be succeeded by the president of the District federation, Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle. District federation by-laws provide for both the president and a director to represent it in the general federation. Only the director has a vote in the business sessions of the board although other delegates and representatives vote at the biennial meeting in May. The three immediate past presidents of the D. C. federation, Mrs. Virginia W. Speel, Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, have, each in turn, been complimented by election as general federation director at the ends of their terms as president. There is nothing in the by-laws, however, to prevent Mrs. Biddle being similarly elected at the end of her term, when that of the director chosen to fill Mrs. Wiley's unexpired year, also would end.

Mrs. Biddle gave the chair to the first vice president, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, for the discussion which followed tabling o Mrs. Wiley's resignation yesterday.

The business meeting continued through the morning and early afternoon with a brief Thanksgiving talk by the Rev. R. Paul Shearer, of Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, and a group of selections by Edouard V. Hargrave, concert pianist, worked in between the morning session and the luncheon in the Roosevelt dining room.

'Less Fortunate' Children Topic At Club Dinner

Business and Professional Group Hears Milliken and Fay Bentley.

"Underprivileged" was outlawed by Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department last night as a term for Washington's less fortunate children. She was one of a group of speakers who discussed at a dinner meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club what Washington is doing for these children. Dr. Custis Lee Hall, another of the speakers, suggested "handicapped" as a better term than "crippled," for the little boys and girls with whom he deals at Children's Hospital.

Miss Nina Kinsella, president of the club, herself long interested in prison work, opened the meeting and Miss Marjorie Webster presided during the program. As one speaker after another described the phase of community welfare in which he or she was engaged, the business women felt assurance that the city's problem children and their problem parents were being dealt with in an intelligent and sympathetic way both from the standpoint of helping them and protecting society. It was also made plain that work in all lines would expand as fast as additional means and facilities were made available.

Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, a member of the club, was the first speaker. She told of the effort made in her court to trace the cause of the child's delinquency and to correct it and keep him with his parents wherever possible. She cited one or two of the hundreds of cases which had come before her in order to give a picture of how the court functioned.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau, contrasted the ministrations of the Juvenile Court to the needs of the erring child with conditions at the turn of the century, when some 2,000 children were committed to the District Jail during the year.

She objected to the use of the word "underprivileged" in the title of the evening's discussion and "less fortunate" was substituted throughout the program thereafter. She mentioned the fact that only one-eighth of the offenders were girls, but added it was not because girls were so much better than boys, but because they had less opportunity for doing things which upset everybody. It is the effort of the Women's Bureau, she said, to get to the bottom of the situation and to encourage boys and girls to come as freely to state their side of the case as do the mothers who complain of them. Effort is also made, she said, to correct conditions contributing to delinquency and to make the environment of children in the poorer districts of the city as wholesome as possible under the circumstances.

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Citizens Permanent Committee, told of plans for providing school lunches for undernourished children and asserted there was no reason why a bowl of soup and glass of milk were not as important a part of school equipment for the well-being of children as a gymnasium. She urged support of the health bonds which will be sold to provide funds for the lunches during January and February.

Miss Jean Cole, of the Florence Crittenden Home, referred to the institution which she heads as "the home of another chance whose doors, closing behind the girls who come there, symbolize the shutting out of the past and the opening of a new life and brighter future."

She mentioned the valuable work of the Florence Crittenden Circles and the Big Sister group within them, whose members keep in touch with the girls after they leave the home and help them find employment and make a new place for themselves.

A brief history of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Clubs was traced by Maj. Ernest Brown, their founder, who said arrests of juveniles in the district where the first was started were reduced more than 74 per cent within a year after it was established.

The final speaker was Mrs. John Bennett, of Central Union Mission, who, like Judge Bentley, is a member of the club. She told something of her late husband's devotion to the work they carried on together for 23 years. The mission, she said, was the pioneer institution in social service work in the District, having been established 54 years ago.

"What Washington Is Doing for Its Underprivileged Children" was the subject of the program at the dinner of the Business and Professional Women's Club last night in the Powhatan Hotel. Capt. Rhoda Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Police Department (left), was among the speakers, as were Judge Fay Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, who stands next to her, and Mrs. Jean Bennett, of Central Union Mission (extreme right), both of whom are members of the club. The fourth member of the group is Miss Nina Kinsella, next to Mrs. Bennett, president of the club.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

THE OLD SAYING that you can't mix business and pleasure seems to be true of club programs as well as other things. Last night the Business and Professional Women's Club had one of its "every-other-meeting" programs. The speakers all had their allotted time, with no business discussions to encroach upon it. At the next meeting there will be business, with no formal program to interfere.

As just a humble suggestion from a bystander, why wouldn't it be a good plan for other clubs to follow? Business only gets half a hearing when the club is marking time, waiting for an interesting program to begin. On the other hand, artists who are giving their talents to entertain the members have less than half a hearing when the club is engrossed in discussion of a controversial issue. It's not a fair deal either way unless there's a time limit that really limits, no matter what's being debated.

TONIGHT the second annual poetry festival of the Arts Club opens, with Mrs. Inez Sheldon Tyler conducting it. Mrs. Tyler is widely known to writers of poetry as editor of the Blue Moon and also directs the poetry clinic of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, which is held regularly at the Roosevelt Hotel.

Winners of the Blue Moon glose contest will be announced tonight and the five best will be read.

Tomorrow afternoon at 4 there will be the sound of nearby drums, when Dr. Charles Edward Russell, literature chairman for the Arts Club, discusses the rhythmical foundation of poetry and illustrates on the drum the rhythm of some of the famous poems he will use as examples.

In the evening there will be an informal dinner, as has already been announced, and "Forgotten American Poets" will be remembered in a discussion by Maurice Jarvis, Mrs. Esther Waldron, Mrs. Robert E. Storm and Miss Mattie Richards Tyler.

Woman Unit In Symphony Guild Active

Many new members will have been added to the Women's Guild of the National Symphony Orchestra by the next meeting of the guild council, December 10, at the home of Miss Mary B. Adams, 2930 Edgevale terrace. Each of the 30 members of the council—the original guild group, which now constitutes the working committee—is seeking to enroll in the guild two or more women interested enough to become season ticket subscribers or members of the Orchestra Association.

Miss Adams is one of three honorary chairmen of the guild. Mrs. Beale Howard and Miss Alice Clapp are the other two—all devoted supporters of the orchestra. The meeting at her home will be the second of the guild council this season. Mrs. Foster Adams, acting chairman, was hostess at the first, which was held in the early fall. She and Miss Blanche Polkinhorn, the secretary, are not only seeking out those whom they think might be interested in holding membership in the guild, but yesterday expressed the hope that any women in Washington who desired to belong would signify their interest to them or any other guild member.

The guild council, which was formed last year at the suggestion of Mrs. Eugene Byrnes, president of the Friday Morning Music Club, and a member of the board of the orchestra, is still under her guidance and that of Mrs. Foster Adams as joint chairmen. They plan to broaden the scope of the guild's work as they enlarge its membership so various women who belong can serve the orchestra in various ways.

This season, with the co-operation of Gardner Moore, president of the Hotel Men's Association, posters and folders, advertising the symphony concerts, were put in all 75 hotels in the organization. They were also placed in as many apartment buildings. When guild members visited the latter, they were first greeted with "no" in reply to the question as to whether they might place concert announcements there, but as soon as they explained it was for the National Symphony Orchestra, permission was granted.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the Natoinal Symphony, hopes to invite members of the guild to a final rehearsal of one of the winter programs, so they can see the musicians in their shirt sleeves and observe first hand something of the work of preparation for the finished performances which Washington audiences are offered. The date for this has not been set, but it may be for the Beethoven Ninth Symphony, which will be performed with a chorus of 200 voices.

Picture Council Hears Mr. Wilk

Warner Brothers Official to Tell How Stories Are Selected.

Jack Wilk, head of the story department of Warner Brothers Pictures, will address the Motion Picture Council of the District Monday morning at 10:45, at the Ambassador Theater, telling how stories and plays made into movies are chosen. He will speak from the standpoint of what audiences like in their film fare and the mechanics of purchasing stories, biographies and dramas for pictures.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president of the council, which includes in its membership 18 organizations in the District as well as the Chevy Chase Woman's Club. The District organization is the outgrowth of the Motion Picture Council organized by the Chevy Chase Club while Mrs. Linzel was its president. Its purpose is to stimulate constructive interests in securing better films, and to issue a film guide each month, classifying pictures as to their suitability for children, their educational value and character.

The program Monday will include a preview of a technicolor short, "The Man Without a Country," based on Edward Everett Hale's classic, one of a series of historical films being made by Warner Brothers.

South Carolinians Plan Grid Dance

The District Chapter of the National Democratic Club of South Carolina will entertain at a dance Thursday evening at the Lee House in honor of the University of South Carolina's football team, which is playing Catholic University at its home-coming game that morning. The party will be the first since the society was organized.

Johnny Campbell and Miss Frances Fetner, the first to adopt the "Big Apple" from colored dancers of Columbia, where it originated, will give an exhibition.

GOLDEN BEARS SILENT ON ROSE BOWL OPPONENT

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 23, 1937 23

This Morning

By Shirley Povich.

Pitt, Fordham or Alabama? It's a three-team race for the Rose Bowl, with Dartmouth and the Big Ten champion having declined the issue. The winner of the nomination to meet California? You pays your money and——

THE ROSE BOWL PURSE—For Eastern colleges of all ages who have not lost a football game since 1936. Distance, 3,000 miles and 100 yards. Winner to get a one-third share of the $300,000 Tournament of Roses purse.

COMMENT.

POVICH.

PITT—On form, the Panthers are the logical winners of the invitation to the Coast. If the selection is based on the season's records alone, Pitt would get the bid. The scoreless tie with Fordham cannot blur the fact that Pitt, victor over Wisconsin, Notre Dame, Carnegie Tech., Nebraska and Penn State, is the East's best team.

Entries	Jockeys	Odds
Pittsburgh	Sutherland	Even
Fordham	Crowley	8 to 5
Alabama	Thomas	11 to 5

But Pitt, in previous Rose Bowl games, has been a rank in-and-outer, and California fans may be slightly weary of the Panthers playing at Pasadena. In four Rose Bowl games Pitt has won only once—last year, when it thumped Washington, 21-0. Pitt lost to Stanford, 7-6, in 1928; flopped badly in '30 when Southern California won, 47-14, and again in '33 when Southern Cal beat 'em, 35-0.

And from California has emanated, lately, news most disconcerting to Pitt. California, according to the spokesman, would prefer to meet a team other than Pitt "because of the difference in athletic ideals." Which, of course, is a slap at Pitt scholarships. Navy, Notre Dame, Army and Minnesota already have dropped Pitt from their schedules and now, perhaps, the Rose Bowl people are thinking along similar lines. But California is still aching for a chance to wipe out the sting of Pitt's lopsided triumph in the bowl last year. And if they want the best they want Pitt.

FORDHAM—Heavily in Fordham's favor is the fact that it is an unbeaten Catholic school, and the fact that for three years it has held Pitt to a scoreless tie.

On the Coast, in recent years, the Rose Bowl people have been beset by a rising note of indignation at the exclusion of Catholic colleges from the Pasadena Bowl. Under the terms of the Rose Bowl game agreement, the Western team must be the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference title, which automatically excludes such Catholic schools on the Coast as Santa Clara, Gonzaga and St. Mary's.

The Rose Bowl people, in an effort to combat an incipient Catholic boycott of the game which might leave thousands of empty seats at the expensive proceedings, are reported ready to unbend this season. The selection of Fordham, they are thinking, would be an excellent means of salving Catholic opinion on the Coast and at the same time maintaining the Rose Bowl as strictly a Coast Conference proposition.

Not to be discounted as an item also heavily in Fordham's favor is the backing of New York football writers who are almost solidly behind the Rams. Even Fordham's squeaky 6-0 victory over St. Mary's, a team that was swamped by California, will hardly offset the Fordham backing by Metropolitan sports writers. California is extremely solicitous of New York backing and it is remembered that in 1934 a Columbia team that had no license to go to the Coast got there purely because of the tub-thumping by New York newspapermen.

ALABAMA—There is a grave possibility that Alabama may be withdrawn from the entries next Saturday night. The Crimson Tide must first dispose of Vanderbilt before it can be considered for a Rose Bowl bid, and the odds on that game are not too pronounced in Alabama's favor.

Alabama will always be a Rose Bowl favorite because of its past showings at Pasadena. Never has the Crimson Tide failed to produce a thriller, never has it lost a Rose Bowl game in four visits to the Coast. 'Bama beat Washington in a 20-to-19 thriller in '26, held Stanford to a 7-to-7 tie in '27, went back in '31 to polish off Washington State, 24 to 0, and in '35 wiped out Stanford's 7-to-0 lead with a ridiculously easy 29-to-13 victory.

The Rose Bowl people, who have upped the tickets from $4.40 to $5.50 this season, may sorely need Alabama's presence to sell the game out, but reacting against Alabama's chances of going to the Coast is the New Orleans Sugar Bowl game.

The Southeastern Conference last year passed a ruling that its champion would be required to compete in the Sugar Bowl game if it did not receive a bid to the Coast. Ordinarily, the Rose Bowl would be more attractive to Alabama than the Sugar Bowl, but this year at New Orleans the promoters have expanded the stadium to seat 51,000 fans and Alabama's share of a Sugar Bowl game would be nearly as great as a Coast game would net. And there is talk that the Southeastern Conference actually will insist that Alabama play at New Orleans as a matter of native pride.

Cliff Battles Weds Dorothy Kaufman In Cleveland Rite

After the ceremony the couple left for Washington. Wayne Gift, former Purdue University back, who is now with the Cleveland Rams, was the only attendant.

Battles, who starred at West Virginia Wesleyan before joining up with the pros six years ago, has been named all-league halfback three times in the National League.

His bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kaufman, is a dress designer of note. The marriage is the culmination of a bathing beach romance begun two years ago when the handsome Battles was a life guard at a Cleveland beach and Miss Kaufman was a frequent visitor.

Battles and his bride originally planned their wedding to take place at Pittsburgh ten days ago but were balked by the State law requiring three days notice of intentions.

C. U. STAR TOSSIN' THE BIG APPLE

Cards Return All Strength For Carolina

Seven Catholic U. Men End Grid Careers Thursday.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

It will be the "Big Apple" vs. the football games Thursday morning in the Brookland Bowl where Catholic University entertains South Carolina in its annual home-coming game.

The dancing will be supplied by Miss Francis Fetner and Johnny Campbell, South Carolina cheerleaders, both of whom fervently hope their team will give them something to yell about. This couple, incidentally, played at the Roxy Theater, New York, and scored a terrific hit, and will be featured at the Young Democrats' annual Thanksgiving night dance at the Lee House.

But if "Dutch" Bergman's well-laid plans materialize, South Carolina is going to have its collective hands full stopping his boys. The Cards have had a much-needed rest since dropping a 21-0 decision to Miami, and a full complement of players will be ready for duty. "Irish" Carroll, ace halfback, is the most important man returning to the line-up. He did not play against Miami and his absence was deeply felt.

This will be the last game for seven Catholic seniors, all of whom will see service. Capt. Vic Sochon, a guard, heads the list, followed by Leo Katalinas, John Chludenski and Ed White, tackles; Charley Munhall, "Sully" Greco and Carroll, backs. All but Chludenski and Greco, who has been ailing, will be in the starting line-up.

Homecoming activities get underway tomorrow night at Brookland with a bonfire and snake dance, signaling the start of festivities, which will last into the wee hours of Friday morning.

Meanwhile, South Carolina, fresh from its 64-0 victory over Presbyterian College last week, is scheduled to arrive tomorrow morning at 6:35 o'clock, later working out at the stadium. Headquarters will be opened at the Lee House for the visitors. Carolina, incidentally, should be near its peak for the game, having regained several important men who have been out with injuries.

Buckeye Star Leads Scorers

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Dick Nardi, elusive Ohio State halfback, who finished his collegiate gridiron career Saturday by scoring one touchdown, captured Big Ten individual scoring honors by that goal-line jaunt against Michigan.

Nardi registered 30 points on five touchdowns in Western Conference games during the 1937 season, topping by one point the high-point total hung up in 1936 by Steve Toth, Northwestern fullback. Northwestern, which also had the runner-up at 25 points last season in Don Geyer, failed to place a man among the 1937 point-getting leaders.

Rudy Gmitro, the little Minnesota back who was a big part of the Gopher Big Ten title drive, registered 24 points on four touchdowns for runner-up honors, with third place going to Howie Weiss, the hard-plunging Wisconsin fullback, who scored 20 points for the Badgers.

	*G.	Td.	Pat.	Fg.	Tp.
Nardi, HB., Ohio State	6	5	0	0	30
Gmitro, HB., Minnesota	5	4	0	0	24
Weiss, FB., Wisconsin	5	3	2	0	20

Manuel Beats Ingram; Dupre and Alzek Win

By Bob Garrison.

Fourteen hundred customers watched Eddie Alzek, New York lightweight, win in polished style; Baby Manuel, Tampa, Fla., featherweight, cope successfully with a bouncing-ball attack, and Tony Dupre, French-Canadian, grab a doubtful decision, in three 8-round shows.

Alzek stole the spotlight from the Baby Manuel-Ray Ingram feature event with his educated tactics that served him well in his fight with Pete Gailiano. Although the Manuel-Ingram fight was listed as the feature, it was Alzek's performance which sent the spectators home in a happy frame of mind. He was just that good.

In defeating Ingram, Manuel had to handle a human jumping-jack. The local boy constantly bounded from one side of the ring to the other in an attempt to break through his Spanish opponent's southpaw guard.

Dupre, in his Washington debut, won a unanimous decision from Armando Sicillia, Chicago featherweight, but it was nothing short of an act of Providence—or judges—that gave it to him. Sicillia was no great shucks, but did hold his own throughout and deserved no worse than a draw in the opinion of many ringside observers.

Alzek Beats Gailiano.

Alzek, with the clash of the champion, dealt one of the worst beatings of the season to Peter Gailiano, of Baltimore, throughout eight rounds of real fighting. His face a mass of blood and his nose swollen, Gailiano withstood myriads of left jabs throughout five rounds, before beginning a belated offensive of his own.

Although there was no alternative than to give the lanky New Yorker the decision after his fine early round showing, it must be said, in fairness to his pudgy opponent, that he was forced to call on his every resource to hold his own in the last two rounds. Gailiano brought one up from the floor in the sixth that was enough to keep Alzek at bay that round.

Then in the seventh he opened a cut under Alzek's eye and continued to land wild blows the rest of the way. The certain umph that has won 31 straight bouts for the New York boy was missing but nothing in his sock repertoire was. His long arms, which moved with piston-like precision, and his ring knowledge combined to produce the difference and added a hard-earned, though definite win to his record.

Ingram Foiled by Southpaw.

Unable to solve Manuel's portside position, Ray Ingram, Washington's constantly inconsistent featherweight, again missed a crack at Lou Gevinson by dropping a decision to the Southern boy after a battered eye slowed him up in the fourth round.

Ingram started as though he had decided to abandon his jumping style and managed to hold his own in the early rounds by scoring in the clinches with hard blows. But once Manuel, who has been idle for several months, connected with a damaging left that brought blood from Ingram's cheek, Ingram reverted to his bounding buffoonery and was an evident loser from there on in.

Tony Dupre got a victory for his first local effort, but there remains some doubt as to his ability. He was nothing to sing about, hardly write about, last night. Although

California Awaits Results of Games

Three Teams Stand Out as Possible Eastern Representative, But Must Hurdle Tough Obstacles in Closing Battles; Bears Accept Bid.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Nov. 22.—Announcement as formal as it was unsurprising today named California's undefeated Golden Bears as the West's representative on the Rose Bowl gridiron New Year's Day.

Dr. Hugh C. Willett, of Southern California, president of the Pacific Coast Conference, made the solemn pronouncement at noon after checking early returns of the annual poll conducted by conference members.

Indicating that some of the members had neglected to participate in the vote, probably on the grounds that California's undefeated march through the Western ranks spoke for itself, Dr. Willett said the poll was not complete, but a majority vote was in and California was "in" by a landslide, with no objections.

Now comes a week or more of Nation-wide guessing over California's choice of an opponent. Graduate Manager Kenneth Priestly followed custom at Berkeley and kept quiet on that question.

He intimated nothing would be decided until after the results of this week's games in which outstanding possibilities play.

Three teams, Alabama, Pitt and Fordham stand out as probable candidates, with Dartmouth an added but seemingly forlorn hope. Of the group, Alabama boasts the only undefeated, untied record, but the Crimson Tide must dispose of Vanderbilt Thanksgiving Day.

Pittsburgh, 1937 Rose Bowl champion by virtue of its victory over Washington, faces Duke, a tough assignment, this Saturday, and Fordham meets the outfit that sank its Rose Bowl hopes last year, New York University.

Pitt and the Rams played their third successive 0-0 tie last month, which is the only blot on their respective records.

Dartmouth, undefeated but tied by Cornell several weeks ago, was rumored as not wanting a Rose Bowl bid. The Indians have finished their schedule.

'Eastern' Favorites Face Hard Hurdles

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—The University of California, only official source, isn't saying a word. But everybody else is very positive on the subject of which "Eastern" team will get the invitation to meet the unbeaten Bears in the Rose Bowl.

They're positive, that is, that when you've mentioned Pittsburgh and Fordham, who share the designation of Northeastern "people's choice," Alabama and Vanderbilt, who may settle the matter between them Thanksgiving Day; Dartmouth, the team that can but won't go West, and Villanova and Holy Cross, other unbeaten Eastern survivors, you haven't omitted the name of the "Eastern" representative.

This makes it very nice for all

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROYAL ERROR, $9.30, $4.70, $3.00; WESTBROOKE, $6.00, $3.20; HALO, $3.20.

ROYAL ERROR, rated close to the leaders from the start, rallied to drive in the stretch to take command and held WESTBROOKE safe. The latter worked his way to contention on the inside and closed gamely. HALO was used up running with MERRY BREEZES and tired in the final stages. JUNGO was going well at the end. HIGH BETSY stopped. MERRY BREEZES set the early pace under hustling tactics and stopped to a walk.

SECOND RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:01½. Off at 2:03½. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' lt. ch. f. (3), by Goldenbroom—Early Vote. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:53 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY BROOM, $4.60, $3.30, $2.60; SPOTLESS, $5.20, $3.10; *RITZ BROTHERS, $4.30.

EARLY BROOM came around leaders to take command approaching the stretch, drew out, but had to be put to pressure to stave off a closing big rush of SPOTLESS. The latter was in trouble repeatedly and came between horses to better his position and closed in close quarters between leaders. RITZ BROTHERS went to contention with a bold rush and held on gamely. PRAIRIE PRINCE, a distant trailer in the early stages, closed with a bold rush.

THIRD RACE—Mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:31½. Winner, J. H. Logan's ch. f. (2), by Mars—La Recolte. Trained by J. H. Logan. Value to winner, $700; second, $180; third, $90; fourth, $30. Time, 1:48 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS MARS, $13.30, $6.00, $4.30; JOLLY JACK, $7.50, $5.50; LITTLE TARZAN, 4.70.

MISS MARS, rushed to a forward position at once, raced TELLING YOU and LITTLE TARZAN into defeat and continued willingly to have speed in reserve at the end. JOLLY JACK closed gamely on the inside, but could not menace the winner. LITTLE TARZAN was a forward factor, but weakened in the stretch.

DAILY DOUBLE—ROYAL ERROR AND MISS MARS—PAID $37.10.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:01½. Winner, Howard Bruce's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MATTAPONY, $6.20, $3.90, $2.70; MARY KEEN, $10.80, $5.90; FRENCH TRAP, $8.00.

MATTAPONY, in motion at the break, opened a good lead and drew out when asked to win, easily. MARY KEEN circled horses to loom menacingly entering the stretch and held FRENCH TRAP safe. The latter showed good effort, but was weakening at the end. THREADNEEDLE raced between horses, was allowed to drop back and closed full of run.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,200 added. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:26. Off at 3:28½. Winner, Kay Kamen's dk. b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MERRY MAKER, $17.80, $8.10, $5.30; HIGH VELOCITY, $3.00, 3.20; CAREFUL MISS, $3.20.

MERRY MAKER, allowed to settle into best stride, improved his position with a rush leaving the backstretch, disposed of SUN CAPTURE to take command and drew out under a drive. HIGH VELOCITY worked his way to contention on the inside, took a brief lead between calls, but was held safe. CAREFUL MISS weakened in the final stages after reaching the leaders.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:54½. Off at 3:59½. Winner, E. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALADDIN'S DREAM, $7.00, $5.10, $3.30; INDOMITABLE, $3.00, $4.00; SICKLE BILL, $9.20.

ALADDIN'S DREAM, going in best form, was within striking distance to the far turn, moved up with a rush on the outside to gain a forward position and held sway to the end under a drive. INDOMITABLE was in the thick of contention from the start, but was no match for the winner, finishing willingly. SICKLE BILL, under grip while trailing, closed with a bold rush on the outside. JACK PATCHES set a good pace and weakened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to past at 4:31. Off at 4:34. Winner, J. W. Maloney's ch. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAEBOB, $16.80, $.10.70, $6.50; GOLD CROSS, $5.80, $4.00; MANDA'S BABY, $8.60.

MAEBOB, first away, was nicely rated and held sway through the stretch when pressed to a drive. GOLD CROSS was forwardly placed from the beginning and closed gamely under punishment. MANDA'S BABY went to contention with a rush, but weakened in the final sixteenth. JACKIE D. closed a gap from a sluggish beginning. IDLE MISS went evenly.

Favorites Fail; Double Pays $37.10

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Nov. 22. — Merry Maker, away from the winner's circle since last summer, rmoped home today and his scattered backers made merry to the tune of a $17.80 mutuel. Racing in the colors of Kay Kamm, the gelded son of Cynic won his fourth race in 22 starts this year in impressive fashion, leading H. P. Metcalf's High Velocity to the imaginary wire by two and a half lengths. W. Elliott's Careful Miss was a laboring third in the field of ten. The race was named the Johnnycake Handicap in honor of all the outside horses that have won photo finishes at the meeting.

Jockey V. Thompson gave Merry Maker one of those slow-starting but fast-finishing rides that give the bettors thrills. He allowed the gelding to find his own stride and did not put him to a drive until nearing the far turn. When asked, Merry Maker went around horses with plenty of zip and took command.

Midway of the stretch, High Velocity, the favorite, challenged but Thompson quickened his riding and Merry Maker opened a good gap before the wire was reached.

The smallest crowd of the meeting saw the program. The majority of the estimated 6,500 turned up coat collars or snuggled into the fire. It is doubtful if they were as cold as several of the day's favorites.

Daily Double Pays $37.10.

Royal Error, carrying 102 pounds, came from out of the pack to win the first race at six furlongs. The Breezes and Halo battled for the daughter of Chilhowee, owned by Mrs. F. A. Bonsal, was capably handled by Jockey Ralph Eccard and finished a head in front of Westbrook. Halo, the favorite, was third in the limit field of 12. Merry pace and killed each other off. Royal Error paid a $9.30 mutuel.

By a scant head margin, Early Broom made good for the favorite players in the second race. The judges called for photo but this was one finish that was an open book. Spotless was second and Ritz Brothers, a field horse, third. Early Broom went around the leaders to get to the front nearing the stretch and opened a lead but Apprentice Cubitt had to keep him under pressure to hold the verdict. The fily paid a $4.60 mutuel.

Miss Mars, making her first start in this State, won the third race at a $13.30 mutuel. Ridden by Nick Wall, the daughter of Mars shook off challenges of Telling Them and Little Tarzan and had speed in reserve while holding Jolly Jack safe. The latter finished second ahead of Little Tarzan.

Howard Bruce's hungry-looking but fast-running Mattapony led every inch of the way in the Caroline Purse, better known as the fourth race. The daughter of Trojan, with Jockey J. Longden in the saddle, was steadied to the stretch while running well and then opened a gap when turned loose to down Mary Keen. French Trap was third. Threadneedle, installed the favorite, didn't run a nickle's worth. Mattapony supplied a $6.20 payoff.

Aladdins Dream turned a form flip-flop to win the sixth race. The wise money was dumped in on his chances and the veteran son of Crusader paid a $7 mutuel. Jockey George Haines did the riding. Indomitable was second and Sicklebill third in the field of nine.

'Uncle Al' Pratt, Pioneer Baseball Star, Dies at 89

Pittsburgh, Nov. 22 (AP).—A. G. (Uncle Al) Pratt, pioneer of baseball, will be buried tomorrow as he wished—clothed in his Grand Army of the Republic uniform.

The rack pitcher, who observed his eighty-ninth birthday last week, died yesterday in his home. After serving with the Union Army, he broke into the professional end of baseball in 1866, 21 years before Pittsburgh was admitted to the National League.

He managed the Portsmouth (Ohio) Baseball Club in 1868, then joined the Forest City Club, of Cleveland, in the Professional League of Baseball Players, the first professional league in the country.

In 1882, he gave Pittsburgh its first major league club, which joined the original American Association.

$80,000 Pot Given Boost

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Nov. 22.—Maryland Jockey Club hopes for an $80,000 gross purse in the 1938 Preakness were boosted today when passage of the November declaration date left 76 entries from 46 owners for Maryland's spring classic.

The jockey club has posted $50,000 added money for the forty-eighth running of the race next spring and fees from nomination and declaration of horses already total $11,925. Supplementary entries may be filed before next April 15—and each must pay $1,500 toward the gross purse.

War Admiral, king of this year's 3-year-olds, romped to victory in the 1937 Preakness to win a first-place gross purse of $55,600.

Horses still eligible for the 1938 running include the cream of 2-year-olds. Among outstanding eligibles are:

Dear Al:

The front of the clubhouse at Charles Town has been glassed in. In addition to the two fireplaces in the clubhouse, three have been placed under the stands in the main betting ring. One good bet on the nose of a long shot will keep anybody warm, however. Ralph Eccard is leading the riders here, with eight winners to Johnny Longden's seven. Longden leaves tonight for Florida, and Eccard will be hard to catch. A $500 gold watch goes to the leading jockey. In addition to Legal Light, Ral Parr will ship King Pharamond to California for the Santa Anita Derby. Earl Sande has his eye on the same race and is shipping Dauber, purchased at the C. V. Whitney sale. Jackie Westrope has announced that he will ride for Sande. J. S. Riley has purchased Soigne at private terms from W. M. Jeffords. Two jockeys left today. Hubert Le

Backers Give Navy Team Slight Edge Over Army

Grid Battles of Week to Decide Titles

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1937, for The Washington Post.

New York, Nov. 22.—Ringing down the curtain:

The 1937 football season comes to a virtual close this week, with national, Rose Bowl and conference destinies riding the capricious pigskin through a grand double-barrelled finale on Thanksgiving and Saturday, topped by the Army-Navy classic.

California's golden bears have won the Pacific Coast title and the Western Rose Bowl assignment. Minnesota has taken the Big Ten crown. North Carolina has clinched the Southern Conference laurels. Three of the four remaining conference championships must be decided this week: Southeastern, Big Six and Rocky Mountains. Possibly the Southwest king will not be crowned until December 4.

Pittsburgh's unbeaten Panthers, outstanding bidders for the mythical national title, will risk their claims in an important intersectional wind-up game with Duke at Durham, N. C., Saturday. If the Panthers down the Blue Devils, they probably will be acclaimed the best team in the land because of their stiff intersectional schedule and their impressvie record, marred only by a scoreless tie with Fordham. But reports from the Pacific Coast indicate that California would prefer some other opponent than Pitt in the Rose Bowl.

If those coast reports be true, Fordham and Alabama seem the outstanding Bowl candidates. Alabama's Crimson Tide boasts a perfect record, while Fordham's Rams suffered only the Pitt deadlock in weathering a raw-meat intersectional schedule.

Both outfits face formidable opposition this week. Alabama, leading the Southeastern Conference with five straight victories, engages Vanderbilt at Nashville, Thursday. Vanderbilt and Louisiana State are tied for second place in the conference with four victories and one defeat each. Louisiana State tangles with Tulane Saturday. An Alabama defeat would permit either or both Vanderbilt and L. S. U. to share the crown with the Tide.

Fordham engages New York University at Yankee Stadium Saturday. N. Y. U. has been beaten by North Carolina, Lafayette and Georgetown. But sleepy Jim Crowley and his Rams recall that N. Y. U.'s record was not very impressive last year—yet the Violets tagged the Rams with their lone defeat of '36 and blasted a Bowl trip.

East.

Army will be favored to beat Navy before the season's largest crowd, more than 100,000, at Philadelphia Saturday. Stanford will invade Columbia at New York; South Carolina visits Catholic U., and Detronit marches on Duquesne. Other pairings: Holy Cross-Boston College, Pennsylvania-Cornell, Rutgers-Brown, and George Washington-West Virginia.

Midwest.

The Big Ten has finished its season. Hence the annual Southern California-Notre Dame brawl at South Bend on Saturday features the Midwestern program. Meanwhile, Nebraska will try to take undisputed possession of the Big Six title in a game with Kansas State. Nebraska leads now with two conference victories and two ties.

If the Cornhuskers are beaten, second-place Oklahoma, which has finished its conference season, could take the title with three victories, one defeat and one tie. Then, too, third-place Kansas might share the crown with Oklahoma if Kansas beats Missouri. Kansas now has two victories, one defeat and one tie. Another Midwestern game pairs Washington U. of St. Louis and St. Louis.

South.

While Alabama, Vanderbilt and Louisiana State are striving for the title, four other Southeastern Conference games pair Kentucky-Tennessee, Mississippi-Mississippi State, Auburn-Florida and Georgia-Georgia Tech.

North Carolina, Southern Conference champion, plays outside against Virginia.

Second-place Clemson, with two straight conference wins, engages Furman. Three other conference games pair Maryland-Washington and Lee, Richmond-William and Mary and Virginia Military-Virginia Poly. Other Dixie games: Oklahoma A. and M.-Centenary, Citadel-Oglethorpe, Miami-Drake.

Dunbar Bows To Armstrong

When Armstrong gridders yesterday at Griffith Stadium defeated Dunbar by a lone touchdown, 7-0, the colored city high school championship definitely fell to the Cardozo Business High School eleven, which had tied Dunbar and had defeated Armstrong in previous clashes.

A pass in the first quarter, Thaxton to Shaw, good for 30 yards, enabling Shaw to stumble 2 yards across the goal line, put the Orange and Blue of Armstrong out in front. Stewart went off tackle for the extra point. For the remaining periods Armstrong booted the oval out of danger, Dunbar reaching its 10-yard line but once, and then on a fumble and 15-yard penalty.

Dunbar.	Position.	Armstrong.
Bryant	L.E.	Clayton
Brown	L.T.	McEwen
Hawkins	L.G.	Plummer
Leigh	Center	Carter
Fortune	R.G.	Moore
Thomas	R.T.	Kenner
Williams	R.E.	Holloman
McManus	Q.B.	Thaxton
Brooks	L.H.	Kelser
Neal	R.H.	Shaw
Turner	F.B.	Stewart

Armstrong	7	0	0	0	—7

Middies Get Brisk Drills For Contest

1937 Material Held Best in Years; West Point Leads in Victories.

By F. O. White,

Special Correspondent of The Post.

The thirty-eighth game with the West Pointers finds the Middies in probably the best position of the entire series. Old Tecumseh, the good luck idol of the Middies, is getting more than his usual workout and shower of pennies.

Of the games which have been played, the Army has won 20 and the Navy 14, while three have been ties, but Navy people believe that conditions have changed, particularly as to the better material which now moves toward Annapolis, and that the teams are now on an even basis.

Uphill Fight for Navy.

The history of the games, which started in 1890, but which have been interrupted at various times, indicates that the Navy has had a constant struggle against Army teams made up of heavier, stronger and more experienced players, and has eked out its victories by the narrowest of margins.

Three or four years ago, however, the Navy began to receive a lot of better football prospects, youths who were near the maximum age limit for entrance and who were qualified physically to become tip-top players, so that Navy teams now compare well in weight and strength with their Army rivals.

This year, for instance, the Navy has a heavier team than the Army. The Army's line averages a little more, 194½ to 193 2-7, but the Navy has a heavier backfield, 184¼ to 173½ pounds, and the general average favors the Navy by 190 to 186 9-11 pounds.

A comparison of the scores made by the service school teams against three common opponents would indicate close to a parity of strength. The Navy played a scoreless tie with Harvard, lost to Notre Dame, 9 to 7, and defeated Columbia, 13 to 7. The Army won from Harvard, 7 to 6, lost to Notre Dame, 7 to 0, and defeated Columbia, 21 to 18.

Army Team Experienced.

The Army started the season with an array of capable and experienced backs, including Craig, Wilson, Schwenck, Ryan, Davis, Kasper, Long and Frontczak, some of whom, notably Woody Wilson, its fine passing back, who had been incapacitated for the last service game. It also had the usual powerful line, but was rather weak in line reserves.

At the start of the season the Navy had Bill Ingram, Frank Case and Bob Antrim, regulars the previous season, as well as a number of veteran backfield substitutes. Its losses in the line were moderate and there were plenty of big forwards of some experience on hand.

A high point of the Navy's season, however, has been the development of younger players, including some from the plebe class of last year. Hardwick's first varsity team was made up of nine first classmen (seniors) and two second classmen (juniors). His present first-string team has only three first classmen, six second classmen and two third classmen (sophomores.)

Lem Cook, Arthur Franks and Emmett Wood have been the younger backs who have taken the places of seniors in the regular line-up, while in the line, Lou Powell, end; Herman Spector, right guard, and Al Bergner, left tackle, have taken the places of older players.

The Army's running attack has not developed as had been expected, but Woody Wilson is the key man of a fine passing offense. The Navy's running attack has been working effectively, but up to the Columbia game its passing attack had not been so good, and Head Coach Hardwick and his aides have been devoting a lot of attention to this element.

The Navy's running backs, Lem Cooke and Emmett Wood, are less experienced than those who hold corresponding places on the Army team, yet they displaced veterans on their own team, and it is hoped that the passing game will be improved to the point where it will be a regular and reliable part of the offense.

RAY INGRAM TAGGED WITH A LEFT IN BOUT WITH BABY MANUEL LAST NIGHT

'Hobo' Loses Decision to Matulewicz

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22.—Ray Matulewicz, 169½, Durham, N. C., easily outpointed Hobo Williams, 169, of Alexandria, Va., in the 10-round feature bout presented here tonight at the City Auditorium.

Matulewicz, former Duke Southern Conference boxing champ and Olympic team member, gave the Virginia boy a thorough going-over and a complete boxing lesson, matching the wild-swinging tactics of Williams with calm, jolting jabs.

There were no knockdowns, Williams slipping to the floor in the sixth without a glove touching him. Williams took the fourth round for his lone win, while Matulewicz swept the slate for the rest of the way.

In the semifinal, Stumpy Jacobs, veteran fighter of Hopewell, Va., whipped Joey Green, Washington scrapper, knocking him out in the eight-rounder, after flooring Green third round of their scheduled five times for the count of nine each. Green was saved by the bell at the end of the second.

The summary:

Jack Mathews, 140¾, Richmond, Va., decisioned Eddie Forrest, 134½, Jacksonville, Fla. (4).

D. C. Players Voting For All-High Team

Two Squads Cast Ballots for Best Scholastic Performers; Three Others Will Designate Choices Today, Following Final Game.

By Jack Munhall.

Two more interhigh football squads went to the polls yesterday to help choose the first annual Washington Post Players' All-High Team and by their votes indicated that the race for every position is still wide open.

The entire Tech squad and the best portion of Central's were the voters and they followed the example of the champion Eastern eleven which inaugurated the voting Friday. The players were unanimous in indorsing the new and logical plan for selecting the best performers in the interhigh football series and segregating them into first and second elevens.

The Tech and Eastern lads as well as Coach Hardy Pearce of Central and Coach Rusty Thompson of Tech welcomed the innovation. The players were anxious to vote because they maintained that in previous years many deserving players were omitted from all-high teams through the ignorance of selectors. The two coaches considered the Players' All-High team an "interesting experiment" and predicted it should produce a truly representative aggregation.

The players themselves have shown keen and wise judgment in their selections. As a result many of the colorful but actually not-so-good players have beep buried under an avalanche of support for the colorless but dependable boys, known as the players' players.

The battle for positions has developed into a white-heat affair. Particularly close is the race for tackle and guard spots, with seven already mentioned for the former position and five for the latter. There have also been many nominations for end berths and several backfield slots and, in all it is impossible to tell yet who will win honors.

Today, immediately following the final interhigh football series game of the season between Western and Roosevelt at Roosevelt Stadium, members of the two squads will complete the voting by casting their ballots along with those of Woodrow Wilson.

This Roosevelt-Western game is very essential to the poll, for several all-high candidates are present on each squad. Western has for consideration Quarterback Morris Snead, Ends Lenny Stanton and Tim O'Hanlon and Tackle Carrol Price. Roosevelt will counter with Ends Boothe and Dunbar, Tackle Kolker and Guards Vasvary and Beck.

On Sunday, if early returns mean anything, there will be several surprises for the fans when The Washington Post Players' All-High Team is released for publication. Accompanying the final selections will be pictures of the individuals and a short summary explaining each choice.

Roosevelt.	Position.	Western.
Boothe	L.E.	Stanton
Sheahan	L.T.	Viehman
Beck	L.G.	Iglesias
McDonald	Center	McCracken
Vasvary	R.G.	Pappas
Kolker	R.T.	Price
Dunbar	R.E.	O'Hanlon

Milt Barbee Never Knows He's Licked

The public links turkey tournaments were concluded yesterday, but it remained for an obscure match in the fourth flight to furnish one of the best links stories of the year.

It seems that Milton Barbee, a semifinalist in the East Potomac play was about to take an awful shellacking from Julian Williams, being 6 down with as many holes to play—but then something happened.

Barbee warmed up and Williams cooled off and the former won six straight holes to square the match. That set some kind of record, but the boys weren't satisfied and established another by halving nine consecutive holes through the twenty-seventh.

Barbee finally won the twenty-eighth, or tenth extra hole, and the turkey that went with the victory. Williams lost, but he probably didn't feel much like eating for a week or two anyhow, after losing a match like that.

The championship flights went to Jim Gipe at East Potomac, and Alex Baumgartner at Rock Creek, to complete the tournament season among the pay-as-you-play linksmen.

Baumgartner, Indian Spring member and friend of Nick Altrock, entered the uptown event with the Nationals' comedian-coach and showed his heels to the Rock Creek entrants, defeating Harry Miller in the finals, 2 and 1.

Gipe and Burton, Harding Cup teammates, battled it out for the downtown tourney crown, with Gipe upsetting the recent uptown event winner, 1 up. In the third flight Joe Zola defeated Anita Booth, 1 up.

involved—with the slight drawback that only Dartmouth has played out its regular schedule. The Indians, unbeaten for the first time since 1925, already have issued an "anti-bowl" proclamation and probably will be content to bask in the glory of an unexpectedly successful Ivy League title defense.

The other six have unfinished business before accepting any New Year's Day reservations, either in the Rose Bowl, New Orleans' Sugar Bowl, or any other scene of post-season festivities.

There's the Alabama-Vanderbilt matter, for one. 'Bama has won every game so far. Ray Morrison's Commodores have lost only to Georgia Tech, and handed Louisiana State its lone setback. Both are well rested for Thursday's battle on Vanderbilt's home ground.

Then there's Pittsburgh. The Panthers visited Durham in 1929 to help Duke open its new stadium as a gesture from Pitt Coach Jock Sutherland to Duke Coach Jimmy De Hart, Jock's teammate at Pitt. The gesture ended right there, for the Panthers won, 52-7. Saturday they go back to Durham.

Fordham winds up its campaign Saturday against New York University. In 1935 N. Y. U. was undefeated until it met Fordham and was crushed, 21-0. Last year the tables were turned as the Violets edged out an unbeaten, twice tied Ram eleven, 7-6.

Roosevelt, Red Raiders Meet Today

Inter-High Series Ends With Clash at Roosevelt.

The interhigh football series, dying slowly since Eastern clinched the championship, gasps its final breath this afternoon in Roosevelt Stadium when Western Tackles the Rough riders in the last game of the season. The kick-off is scheduled for 3:15 o'clock.

Roosevelt, handicapped all season by injuries to key players, is looking for victory today because Joe Fraber, its triple threat fullback, will be back in the line-up for the first time in more than a month. Fraber, expected to be one of the outstanding performers of the series, has appeared in only one series game, that against Wilson, before he was hurt in the St. Alban's contest.

The Rough Riders' strong line, perhaps the most formidable of any interhigh eleven, welcomes the test it must face in Morris Snead, Western's battering quarterback, who has been splintering rivals' forward walls with great abandon. The Rough Riders are confident, however, that Snead will get quite a surprise when he charges into such as Tackle Joe Kolker, Guards Eddie Vasvary and Larry Beck, vest-pocket editions who weigh only 140 pounds, and Ends Larry Freund and Paul Boothe.

Besides Snead, fans will watch a new Western backfield star who impressed with his driving powers against Eastern when the Lincoln Parkers won the title. He is Don Nikalson, a short, chunky youngster who resembles a fire plug in build. Nikalson scored Western's sole touchdown against Eastern by blasting through several tacklers after he had apparently been thrown for a loss on the 4-yard line.

As an experiment for possible use in interhigh games next season, Roosevelt will again install an amplifier to broadcast the contest. This amplifier was first used in the Rough Riders' opening battle with Wilson, and proved popular.

Arena Fights

his blows landed with authority, he missed as often as he landed and found Sicilia's rough style little to his liking.

He may have beaten Joey Archibald, but he must have had the expert aid of Gov. Quinn's National Guard to help him gain that decision at Providence. Archibald would have won last night in a couple of rounds.

It was the sixth round before Dupre found that he had a right hand and then on several occasions managed to land with short punches that apparently packed little power. Sicillia backed up all the way, filling the air with slapping rights and left, under which Dupre easily maneuvered.

Both showed a desire to slug in the late rounds, especially the last. Sicillia rushed from his corner to meet his blond adversary, landed a telling right and then felt the wrath of the Canuck, who fought the rest of the round as though he realized he had to show his best to win the award of the judges. That's the kind of impression he made on the spectators who mixed jeers with cheers when the unanimous verdict was announced.

Steve Mamakos, the so-called Golden Greek, won his fourth straight fight since turning professional by scoring a technical knock-out over one Charlie Rondo, Baltimore middleweight. The bout, scheduled for four rounds, was stopped after 45 seconds of the third round.

Johnny Quinn, wild-swinging New Yorker, and Benny Kessler, Baltimore lightweight, added to the gala occasion by clowning their way to a draw through four rounds of pushing and shoving. Quinn, who won a decision last week over the same foe, found a different Kessler last night, who could hold his own when the slugging started.

General Credit Votes 25 Cents Common Extra

Local Auto Finance Firm Also Declares Regular Quarterly Dividends.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A. Burks Summers, president of General Credit, Inc., local automobile finance company, announced yesterday that the board of directors of the corporation voted an extra quarterly dividend of 25 cents on the common stock in conjunction with the declaration of the usual quarterly dividend of 25 cents. The board meeting was held November 20. At the same time the regular quarterly dividend on the company's outstanding 6% per cent preferred stock was declared. These dividends will be paid December 1 to stockholders of record November 23.

To facilitate the handling of an increasing volume of business, the company, during the summer, substantially increased its capital structure through the sale of $90,000 of preferred and common stock. George M. Ferris & Co., Inc., of Washington, handled the underwriting. The extra dividend is declared in view of the company's highly successful year.

Lincoln Bank Improvements.

Through extensive changes, Lincoln National Bank has doubled the lobby space of its main office at 318 Seventh street northwest. Alterations provide space for four additional tellers, the old-style cages having been supplanted by modern open counters which will permit an additional 4 feet of lobby space from their former lines.

Changes at the main office follow similar recent improvements at the institution's branch at Seventeenth and H streets northwest. Here the lobby space was also doubled and counters installed. Increased business has necessitated expansion of the institution's main office and branch.

Officers of the bank are: Floyd E. Davis, president; Albert S. Gatley, executive vice president; James A. Soper, vice president and cashier; H. T. Offterdinger, vice president; G. F. Williams, general counsel and trust officer; J. Frank Rice, assistant cashier and assistant trust officer; Helena D. Reed, assistant trust officer; Robert E. Lee, Richard A. Norris, D. Hammond Wetzel, Nelson M. Stokes, Edward H. Story, assistant cashiers, and William M. Harris, auditor.

Cost Accountants.

First plant visitation on this year's schedule of Washington Chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants, will take place this week. This afternoon at 2 o'clock, members of the chapter will meet at the plant of the District of Columbia Paper Co., in Georgetown, to study at first hand the process of paper manufacture. After an inspection of the plant layout, an explanation of the cost accounting procedure in the local paper plant will be given by Herman R. Harrigan, general manager of the company.

These plant visitations are arranged to enable accountants to become acquainted with manufacturing methods and accounting procedures in representative in-

Cotton Steady; December 7.75

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Foreign buying sustained cotton for a time today, but the market later came under influence of a weak stock market. March reacted from 7.93 to 7.83 and closed at 7.85, with final prices 3 points net lower to 2 higher.

The market opened 3 to 5 points higher. For a while contracts were scarce and the market extended rallies to net gains of 5 to 7 points. Only toward the close did prices get below Saturday's finals.

Cottonseed oil broke 6 to 10 points early today, but rallied partially on covering. Final prices were 4 to 5 points net lower. Sales, 128 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed 6.90; January, 6.91; March, 6.95; May, 6.99; July, 7.06.

Retail Advertising 6.2% Under Year Ago

Chicago, Nov. 22.—For the week ended November 13, retail display advertising declined 6.2 per cent below the corresponding week of last year, according to a report released here today by Advertising Age.

Southern Ry. Unit Votes Two $4 Extras

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Alabama Great Southern Railroad Co. announced today extra dividends of $4 each on the preferred and ordinary stocks, payable December 24 to stock of record December 3.

Directors also ordered a regular semiannual of $1.50 on the preferred stock, payable February 15 to stock of record January 4. Southern Railway owns a majority of each class of stock.

Factory Output Falls but 1937 Will Top 1936

Sept. Activity Was 14.5% Under Recovery Peak in April.

New York, Nov. 22.—Manufacturing activity in September was at the lowest rate this year with a decrease of 14.5 per cent from the recovery peak reached last April, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. For the first time in 1937, the output of factory goods was below last year's volume although the decrease was a moderate one.

It is obvious, however, that the annual output will be in excess of normal this year. Last year's excess may be taken as representing the maximum excess which will occur this year. The record of past years suggests that this maximum will not be attained but the difference should not be great. On the basis of last year's excess, the annual index of factory output for 1937 works out at 111.

This means that the index during the last three months of the year will average 96, or 9.4 per cent below the recovery peak reached last April. When the figure becomes available for October, it will probably show that the index was above the average of 96. If this proves to be so, then the indexes for November and December will be below 96.

However, if the decline during the last quarter is no greater than the one thus calculated and the annual index for 1937 is 111, the volume of factory goods produced this year will be the highest on record with the exception of 1923 and 1929 when the indexes were 112 and 119, respectively.

The Market

Stocks Decline Substantially in Less Active Trading; Wheat Also Weakens.

New York, Nov. 22.—Making it six out of the last seven trading days in which stocks have declined, the market again slowly declined. Losses ran from 1 to 6 points on a turnover of around 1,400,000 shares, only a little more than last Saturday's total. United States bonds were irregular. Dollars were a shade firmer. December wheat dropped a cent to 91⅛ cents a bushel, and a Chicago Board of Trade failure was announced.

Stock prices were mercurial, inasmuch as they changed slowly but easily and without much logical adherence to the news of the day. The President's health was said to be a factor, and reports were conflicting. Opening prices were down 1 to 8 points on light trading and the ruling tone of the morning was weak. In the afternoon conditions improved a bit, without any rise in activity, but the early losses were only partially made up and selling reappeared toward the close.

Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Anaconda, General Electric, Bethlehem and Electric Power & Light made up a large part of the sales. Steel sold under 49 on a fall of more than 4 points to the lowest price since the early part of last year, and Chrysler dropped more than 5 points at its worst, but held above the October 19 lowest level. At the bottom for the day the Sun's industrial and railroad share index stood about a point above the lowest of October 19.

Steels Weak.

Groups to appear the weakest were the steels, chemicals, rails, farm implements and motors. Most of the oils receded large fractions, but Amerada, Phillips and Standard lost more heavily. Store stocks yielded 1 to 2 points, as did the metals. Tobaccos weakened 1 to 3 points and rubbers gave up nearly as much. Utilities were moderately depressed. Among the stocks to enter new low ground were Allied Chemical (breaking 9 points), Smelters, Manville, Steel, Case, Nickel, Harvester and Sears Roebuck.

The stock market was disheartened a little at the start by the failure of its week-end rally to influence prices in London. The decline on the other side today bore down on speculative sentiment here, and those who were inclined to turn bullish partly because of the overcrowding in the bear quarters restrained themselves. Steel trade reviews informed traders before the market opened that another fall in production was to be expected, and the impact of the American Iron & Steel Institute's estimates for this week was softened by the general expectation of a fall. The estimated operating rate, 31 per cent of capacity, was down nearly 15 per cent from the previous week and last year the rate was 74.3 per cent, but recently predictions had been heard that activity might decline to 25 per cent.

Trade Reports.

Prices were a little firmer if anything after the poor news on the steel trade had been received. Meanwhile trade reports in other directions were not inspiring. The retreat of the stikers in the Fisher Body plants may be counted on the favorable side, but opinions differed even on that score. Some persons had gone so far as to say they hoped the strike might spread to the extent of forcing General Motors to break off its relations with the C. I. O., have a show-down if necessary, and thereby hasten the advent of sounder relations with labor.

In any event, curtailment of industrial operations continues, and since the cost of living has not yet begun to fall, the gap between income and expenditures of wage earners is bound to narrow. Industrial unrest under such conditions must be expected. One answer is a large increase in Government relief, putting a balanced budget further than ever into the background.

Whether anything will come of the President's suggestion of an investigation of retail prices is problematical. On the surface it looks to the outsider that the reason for advancing retail prices is clear. In fact, that was the sole object of New Deal economies, even if the managers of our new economy did suppose that they could lift prices for the farmer, increase wages greatly and still leave the consumer untouched. Last spring President Roosevelt expressed alarm at the prices of certain raw materials, and he helped to bring about a deflation in them which promoted deflation in all directions.

Retail prices, buttressed as they are with high labor costs, and slow as they are to follow raw materials downward, will be more difficult to reduce, especially by Presidential frowns and legislative acts. If the Government continues along it present economic course, with unsound taxation, unlimited spending, and unfriendliness toward business we will have lower retail prices, but the reducing element will be idle people and depleted consumer purchasing power.

Way to Recovery.

While discouraging in itself, the news that the Buffalo, Niagara & Eastern Power Co. had indefinitely postponed building an $8,000,000 generating plant at Buffalo, points the way toward better things. All the Government needs to do to set in motion the expenditure of perhaps as much as two or three billions in public utility money for expansion and improvement is to call off the dogs and give the utilities a chance. The signal for the utilities to go ahead would be worth more than all the other things combined that the brain-trusters could think of for promoting a business recovery, and it wouldn't cost taxpayers a cent.

Physicians, $4,850, Best-Paid Profession

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Doctors, with an annual average income of $4,850, were the best-paid professional class in America from 1920 to 1936, a survey disclosed today. Lawyers, the second-best-paid group, averaged $4,730, and engineers, $4,410, according to Harold F. Clark, professor of educational economics at Columbia University, who conducted the survey.

Average income in other fields: Dentistry, $4,170; architecture, $3,820; college teaching, $3,050; journalism, $2,120; library work, $2,020; ministry, $1,980; skilled trades, $1,430; public school teaching, $1,350; nursing, $1,310; unskilled labor, $795; farming, $580; farm labor, $485.

Wheat Prices Follow Slump At Winnipeg

Traders Discouraged by Lack of Demand for Exports.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Shaken by severe breaks in Winnipeg prices, 3½ cents at the extreme, Chicago wheat values tumbled 2½ cents a bushel today, but partly recovered later.

Lack of any new export demand either for Canadian or United States wheat largely dominated traders. Besides, a substantial increase in the amount of wheat on ocean passage to Europe acted as a weight on markets everywhere, and more than counterbalanced 4,352,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply, a decrease over double that of a year ago.

At the close Chicago wheat futures were ¼ to 1¼ cents under Saturday's finish; December, 91¾@91⅞; May, 91⅛@91⅝; July, 86@86⅛. Corn ¼ to ¾ down; December, 54⅛@54¼; May, 57⅛. Oats unchanged to ¼ up. Rye at ⅛ to ⅜ decline. Provisions lower, 5 to 17 cents.

Steel Activity Drops to 31%

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined 5.4 points to 31 per cent of capacity, compared with 36.4 a week ago, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 52 1 per cent, while a year ago the rate was 74.3 per cent of capacity.

The drop in steel production, the tenth consecutive week of curtailment, left the industry operating at the lowest rate since December 3, 1934. Since about the middle of September, activity has dropped from around 80 per cent of capacity in what some authorities have described as the severest decline for the industry on record.

Flood-Control Head Opposes Regional Plans

Rep. Whittington Leads Attack on Administration Proposals.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Nov. 22.—Representative Will M. Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the House Committee on Flood Control, led an attack on the Administration-sponsored regional planning program today before the annual convention of the Mississippi Valley Association.

Enactment of any of the three pending bills designed to set up "seven sisters" of the Tennessee Valley Authority would "create confusion in both planning and execution" if not "prevent" flood control works, Whittington said.

Would Set Up Council.

Instead, he proposed creation of a national advisory board to deal with flood control, navigation and conservation works to be composed of the Secretaries of the Treasury, War, Interior, Agriculture and the chairman of the Federal Power Commission.

Should the national regional planning authority boards be established, the flood control acts of 1936 and 1937 would be scrapped "before they are tried" and the "gains in the campaign for flood control would be sacrificed," Whittington declared.

"I believe I speak the sentiment of Congress when I say that it will refuse to strip the Army engineers of the functions now exercised by them. Congress will insist on flood control and navigation works being planned and executed by the Corps of Engineers."

General for Separate Plans.

Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of the Army Engineering Corps, outlined the huge program formulated for improvements in navigation, flood control, irrigation and the development of hydroelectric power.

The general avoided direct reference to the regional planning authority bills, but stated flood control, waterways improvements, irrigation and power development can be served better by "separate and distinct programs" than under one master scheme.

The regoinal authorities bills, especially the Mansfield bill, said to be favored by the Administration, were termed "a curse to the Nation's welfare by John D. Battle, Washington, executive secretary of the National Coal Association.

The Wagner act later was branded "a dismal failure," before the convention, and Representative W. J. Driver (Democrat), Arkansas, said it was "apparent" that the Black-Connery wage hour bill "carries not only a destructive threat, but the uncertainty of the extent to which it may burden industry is . . . reflected in the prevailing business currents and, to an extent, responsible for the recent check in the upflow of the economic stream."

Journalist Admitted To Highest Court Bar

Oliver B. Lerch, formerly a Washington newspaperman, yesterday was admitted to practice before the Supreme Court of the United States. Motion for his admission was made by Claude R. Porter, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Lerch came to Washington from Pennsylvania 15 years ago. He was for eight years attached to the Washington Bureau of the Wall Street Journal. In that period he served as secretary-treasurer of the White House Correspondents Association and secretary of the National Press Club. He passed the District Bar examination in 1933.

Bloom Will Plant Tree Today at Central High

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, will plant a holly tree on the Central High School grounds at 9 a. m. today.

The gift of the graduating class of February, 1938, the tree commemorates the 150th anniversary of the Constitution. L. G. Hoover, principal, will accept the tree on behalf of the school.

The Rev. G. G. Johnson, pastor of the National Memorial Baptist Church, will pronounce the invocation, and music will be furnished by the school band.

Attention, Appliance Men.

Our product, the first new idea in sanitation in its line in 30 years, has the backing of the most influential men in the automobile industry. These men have recruited the finest engineering skill to give the public this startling air washing product.

In less than one year of operation men now connected with us have earned more money weekly than they have ever earned before. We have in less than a year promoted to executive positions over 180 men. This powerful new organization, amply financed privately, has shown an amazing profit from its inception. Its liberal profit plan spurs men on to effort that really brings out their ability.

If you are able to produce satisfactory references and are between 25 and 50 years old, an interview will be granted Tuesday morning, November 23, at 9:30 o'clock.

Bob Burns Says—

I had a blacksheep uncle down home that use'ta be the "bully" of the town. He was always lookin' for a fight and he had whipped so many of our citizens that the people got to thinkin' he was a brute. Finally one day a stranger came to town and when my uncle picked on him and started a fight, the stranger knocked him down. My uncle got up and the stranger knocked him down again.

This kept up until finally the stranger got mad and he got my uncle down and put his fingers around his throat and started bumpin' his head up and down on the sidewalk and it was then that my uncle's kindly nature came out. He looked up at the crowd of onlookers and says "Boys, I think some of you oughta stop this fight—it ain't right for two men to be poundin' each other like this!"

General Staff To Direct Navy Is Aim of Maas

Present Divided Command Would Crumble in War, Congressman Says.

A naval general staff to increase efficiency and centralize authority within the Navy, may be set up, it was learned yesterday.

Representative Melvin J. Mass, of Minnesota, said he intended to introduce a measure embodying the proposal along with a complete reorganization of the Navy.

"The department, as now constituted," he declared, "would crumble in time of war."

Unified Command Needed.

Asserting that the proposal has the support of members of the Navy's general board and other naval officers, the former aviator, who served in the Marine Corps during the World War, pointed out that the original draft of the measure was drawn up in the office of Rear Admiral G. J. Rowcliff, judge advocate general of the Navy.

"I don't expect the bureau chiefs to support the bill," he added, "because they would lose some of their authority under the new arrangement."

Staff Would Map Plans.

"The chief of staff would be the military head of the Navy and every officer and every man would be directly under his jurisdiction," he stated, adding that "this would supply an unbroken chain of command and responsibility."

The proposed general staff of the Navy would map all plans for the country's naval forces and determine all naval policies.

The Army and the Navy, he emphasized, are responsible for the preparation of a joint plan for national defense, and in such cases the Army commander now has to deal with individual Navy bureaus, not with one central naval authority, because there is "no responsible unified authority to deal with."

Bullitt Adds His Denial Of Warning to Poland

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday he had received a cabled denial from William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, that the latter's visit to Warsaw, Poland, had any official significance.

Newspaper reports last week said Bullitt had been instructed to visit Warsaw to warn the Polish government against joining Germany, Italy and Japan in their anti-Communist alliance. These reports were denied by the State Department, which said Bullitt's trip was wholly personal and social.

Begins Seventy-Third Year in Church

Contract Bridge

That Vital First Play.

After having watched a so-called expert pair in a recent tournament, I was filled with doubt as to the merit of that term "expert." The declarer in the hand presented below has quite a reputation—I would not dare mention his name. And I didn't say a word as I watched him mangle a contract that would be brought home, I feel sure, by the average player.

West opened the six of diamonds. Apparently with the notion that he would always be able to make dummy's Queen if the King were in West's hand, declarer played low from dummy and, when the ten went from East, ducked in his own hand, to preserve the diamond Ace for later entry. Unfortunately for him, the subsequent play did not work out that way. East returned his remaining diamond, declarer ducked, the King won, and a third round then took out dummy's last diamond. The Ace was still intact all right but as a communication card it was worthless. Now, when the nine of clubs was led both defenders ducked. East had to win the club continuation, but the club suit was still one precious round from establishment, for declarer had left only one possible entry, the spade King. East exited with a spade, and from that point declarer was "stuck." There was no sense in continuing the clubs, since he could never regain the lead and, hence, he cashed the diamond Ace and tried the heart finesse. The Queen lost to East's King. Defenders could not avoid leading into dummy's spade or heart tenace. But this did not give declarer his nine tricks!

Declarer's first play had been his undoing. It was vital to conserve his diamond Ace for eventual entry to the club suit. The diamond six lead obviously was the fourth-best. Therefore, by the Rule of Eleven, East had only one higher diamond; it might be the King, but surely this was unlikely, since then West would have started with J-10-9-6 and would have led the Jack.

Had declarer boldly put up the diamond Queen on the opening lead, he could have established and cashed four club tricks which, obviously, would have made the contract a lay-down.
